VOL. 65. NO. 250. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 27, 1913. PRICE FIVE CENTS.

PRESIDENT WILSON, IN MESSAGE TO THE POST-DISPATCH, CALLS PEACE CONGRESS "REASSURING SIGN OF THE DAY"

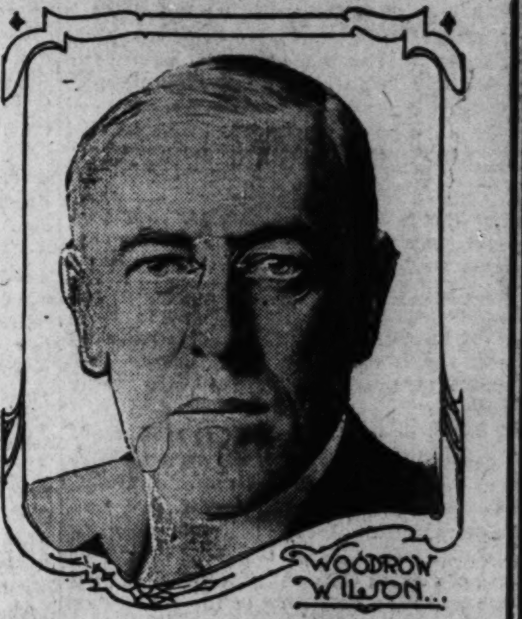
THE WHITE HOUSE

Washington, D. C., April 26

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I am looking forward with the keenest interest to the gathering of the American Peace Conference at St. Louis. One of the most interesting and reassuring signs of our day is the rapidly accumulating volume of opinion against war and all that leads to and accompanies it, and conferences such as this which is about to be held serve not only to swell that volume of opinion but also to clarify it, to make its object definite and to suggest practicable means by which peace may be maintained and ennobled.

WOODROW WILSON.



WOODROW WILSON...

Many Notables to Gather in St. Louis This Week to Urge the Abolition of War

Bryan, Carnegie, Fairbanks, Diplomats From South and Central America, Heads of Colleges and Statesmen, to Make Addresses—Churches and Schools Co-operate.

WHILE the whole world is talking of war, 1200 men and women will meet in St. Louis this week to talk of and for peace.

They will come as delegates from states, cities, institutions and organizations to the Fourth American Peace Congress, which opens Thursday morning at the Odeon, and continues through Saturday, with supplemental meetings next Monday. Many more will come to attend the congress, all of whose sessions are open to the public, and to take advantage of reduced railroad rates.

Two delegates will pre-eminently attract attention. These will be Andrew Carnegie, builder of the Hague peace temple and of the Pan-American Union edifice in Washington, who is backing the world-peace movement with millions which were made partly in the sale of armor plates and other munitions of war; and William J. Bryan, Secretary of State, who will stop here on the return from his peace mission to California, and who will tell of his new and broad plan for establishing peace between the United States and the nations of the world.

Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie—for the ironmaster's wife is to accompany him on the first visit he has made to St. Louis since the Eads Bridge was built—will arrive in the city Wednesday evening, and will be taken to the new mansion of Robert S. Brookings, on Forsythe road, south of Washington University. He is scheduled to address the congress at the opening session Thursday morning, and to speak again at the Odeon in the afternoon. Thursday night he will be the guest of Mr. Brookings at a dinner to which a number of educators have been invited. Friday night he will preside at a meeting in the Third Baptist Church. Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie will probably remain in St. Louis until Saturday evening.

BRYAN'S ADDRESS TO BE THE CLIMAX OF THE CONFERENCE

SECRETARY BRYAN is not expected before Saturday, and he will have to hurry to get here then, but he can do it, according to printed train schedules, and he said, before leaving Washington for Sacramento Thursday evening, that he expected to keep the St. Louis engagement.

He is scheduled for an address at 4 p. m. Saturday, and for another address at the night session. It may be that he will not arrive in time to make the first of these scheduled talks.

It has been semi-officially stated that his principal address before the congress will be a full explanation and defense of his plan for comprehensive arbitration treaties between the United States and the principal world powers. This will form, it is expected, the climax of the congress.

While the subject of peace is an international one, the St. Louis meeting is not, in its title, an international meeting. But it will have an international, or at least a Pan-American feature, in that Canadians and the ambassadors of Latin-American nations will attend, the latter as accredited delegates from their nations. Among these will be the envoys of Chile and Argentina, which placed on their mountain border line a statue of Christ as a pledge of perpetual peace; ambassadors or attaches of the legations of Bolivia, Colombia, Costa Rica, San Domingo, Ecuador, Guatemala, Haiti, Nicaragua, Panama, Peru, Uruguay and Venezuela. The Mexican Government, at the time when conditions were most warlike in that country, accepted an invitation to send delegates.

COLLEGE STUDENTS TO DEBATE FOR PRIZES ON PEACE TOPICS

A PRELIMINARY event of the Congress will be the inter-collegiate oratorical peace contest, to be held Tuesday night in Sheldon Memorial, on Washington avenue west of Grand. Speakers from Missouri, St. Louis and Washington Universities, Central, Westminster and William Jewel colleges will speak for prizes of $75 and $50.

Wednesday morning peace exercises will be held in Missouri public and private schools of all grades. In the afternoon the Jefferson Memorial in Forest Park will be dedicated, and at night the American School Peace League will meet at Soldan High School. Supt. Blewett, Mrs. Fannie Fern Andrews, John Barrett and Charles F. Thwing, president of the Western Reserve University, will be the speakers.

Congressman Richard Bartholdt of St. Louis will preside at the opening session in the Odeon at 10 a. m. Thursday, and James E. Smith, of St. Louis, chairman of the executive committee, will call the meeting to order. The speakers will be Gov. Major, Mayor Kiel, Senator Burton, Andrew Carnegie and Congressman Bartholdt, who will deliver his address as president of the Congress.

Thursday afternoon section meetings will be held in several auditoriums along Grand avenue. The section meeting in the Odeon at 2 p. m. will discuss "Disarmanent," and the speakers will be President Jordan, Andrew Carnegie, Jenkin Lloyd Jones and Philip Van Ness Myers. At 4 p. m. the interstate collegiate peace oratorical contest will be held in the Third Baptist Church. In this contest the winner of the Missouri contest of two nights before will contend for a $100 prize with college speakers from Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota and Texas. At the same hour a reception will be tendered to the officers, speakers and visiting delegates of the Congress by the Wednesday Club at its club house, Taylor avenue and Westminster place.

Thursday night Chancellor Frederic A. Hall of Washington University will preside at the Odeon meeting, and Charles W. Fairbanks and Booker T. Washington will be among the speakers.

Friday morning the problems of the Hague Tribunal will be discussed by a number of educators and peace workers. In the afternoon, an automobile tour of the city will start from Hotel Jefferson, ending in a reception at Shaw's Garden.

MANY MEETINGS IN SCATTERED HALLS PLANNED FOR LAST DAY

CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS will preside at the Odeon Friday night, and the speakers will be Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead, Dean Shailer Mathews, P. P. Claxton, National Commissioner of Education, and the Rev. Thomas E. Green of Chicago. The last-named speaker is said to be one of the most eloquent of American public speakers. His topic is "The Burden of the Nations."

At the same hour Andrew Carnegie will preside at a young people's meeting in the Third Baptist Church, where President Jordan and Prof. Jay William Hudson, the latter of Missouri University, will speak.

Saturday morning's meeting in the Odeon will have Anglo-American peace as its particular subject, and three eminent Canadians will be speakers—Justice W. R. Riddell of the Supreme Court of Ontario, John Lewis, editor of the Toronto Star, and Justice B. Russell of Halifax. John Hays Hammond's address may also be delivered at this time.

Four section meetings will be held in different places at 2 p. m. Saturday, and at 4 the American Peace Society will hold its annual meeting in the Odeon, with Senator Burton of Ohio presiding. Secretary Bryan will speak at this meeting if he arrives in time.

Congressman Bartholdt is to preside Saturday night and President Jordan and Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, will be the speakers preceding Secretary Bryan.

Next Saturday afternoon at 3 a German-American mass meeting will be addressed by Prof. Ernst Richard of Columbia University, president of the German-American Peace Society of New York. Many Sunday morning sermons in St. Louis pulpits will be on the subject of peace.

An illustrated stereopticon lecture, "One Hundred Years of Peace," will be delivered by James L. Tryon, director of the New England Department of the American Peace Society, Wednesday night at the McKinley High School, Thursday night at the Yeatman High School and Friday night at the Sumner (negro) High School.

ARCHBISHOP GLENNON WILL MAKE ADDRESS TO SOUTH AMERICANS

OFFICIALS of St. Louis University have arranged for a solemn ceremonial to be held Wednesday morning in St. Francis Xavier's (College) Church, in response to the request that exercises be held by educational institutions in connection with the opening of the Peace Congress.

The ceremony will be an invocation of divine guidance for the Peace Congress delegates during their session. The South and Central American diplomatic representatives, who will attend the Congress as accredited delegates from their governments have accepted invitations to attend. The honorary ushers will be a large number of prominent St. Louisans, alumni or friends of the university.

The Very Rev. B. J. Otting, president of the university, will be celebrant, the Archbishop Glennon will deliver an address on peace. The university choir will sing the music of the ancient mass, "Pro Pace." While some of the seats have been reserved, the general public is welcome.

"War Remote When Nations Agree to Investigate," Says Bryan to the Post-Dispatch

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 24.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch, St. Louis, Mo.

I HOPE to be able to visit the peace congress on my way back from California, but if that is impossible I shall send a telegram expressing my regret and my earnest desire to co-operate in every way in the promotion of peace.

The proposition which, at the direction of the President, I presented today, goes farther I believe than any former peace proposition has gone. It is intended to close the door against war as far as it is possible to do so.

War will become a remote possibility when the nations agree to investigation, for investigation will not only separate the question of fact from the question of honor, but will give time for public opinion to operate in behalf of peace.

I am in sympathy with the desire which is growing throughout the world to substitute reason for force in the settlement of international disputes.

"Thousands Set Free, Not Because Innocent, but Through Loopholes in the Laws"

United States Prosecutor Points Out the Need of Reform in Criminal Laws and Court Proceedings So That "Smart" Lawyers Cannot Defeat Justice.

By ALLEYNE IRELAND,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 26.—"If the public prosecutors of this country were not circumscribed by obsolete limitations which prevent the presentation of the whole truth surrounding the cases they are called upon to investigate and present to the courts, thousands of crooks who are now walking the streets unpunished would be doing time in the proper prisons and not only would the guilty be more certainly punished, but the number of our courts, the time consumed in trials and the onerous burdens now falling upon men serving as jurors, would be reduced by at least 50 per cent."

In making this striking statement, Henry A. Wise, who is about to give up the post of United States District Attorney for the Southern District of New York, voiced a sentiment which has obtained a rapidly increasing public expression in recent years.

"It is no exaggeration to say," continued Wise, "that during the past year thousands of men and women have been acquitted in the courts of this country, not because they were innocent, not because there was any doubt about their guilt, but because a smart lawyer detected some purely technical flaw in the proceedings.

"I recall an instance which will serve as an example of the kind of thing I have in mind. A man in St. Louis was arrested for a violation of the criminal law. He was tried, convicted and sentenced. His lawyer appealed on a technical point, won the appeal and the man was discharged. The law of Missouri provides that an indictment shall charge the accused with having broken a law of the State of Missouri. Owing to an oversight the word 'the' was omitted before the word 'State,' and on this ground alone the verdict of the jury was set aside and the convicted man set free."

Henry A. Wise is a tall, broad, thick, heavy, muscular citizen with reddish hair and blue eyes—in general physical type a clean-shaved, short-trimmed Viking. He would have made an excellent companion to the late Phillips Brooks on the historic occasion when that giant of a man rose silently to his feet in the course of a lecture in London in hearing the speaker complain that during a recent visit to the United States he had noticed that Americans were undersized.

Procedure From England.

"Everybody knows,' he said, "that we got a great part of our law and procedure from England, but what most people do not realize is that much of the law, and especially of the procedure, dates from a time when English public opinion had been shocked by the scandalous judicial exploits of Judge Jeffreys and by the iniquities of the 'star chamber.' Such was the state of judicial administration at that time that when the reformers set about to remodel the criminal procedure they were compelled to hold in view not only the danger that a guilty man might be convicted on insufficient evidence, but the more serious and equally probable contingency that an innocent man might be convicted on no evidence at all.

"It was at such a period that an importance hardly to be overestimated attached to the idea that it was better for a hundred guilty men to escape than that one innocent man should suffer. In consequence the criminal procedure of England was encumbered, and properly encumbered at that time, with a hundred devices whose object was to afford ample protection to innocent people, even if such protection could only be purchased at the price of guilty persons left unpunished.

Protection From Tyranny.

"With a view to protecting the people of this country from such tyrannies as had existed in England the framers of our Constitution adopted our Bill of Rights, under which judicial interpretation has expanded the protection of the innocent to such an extent that a haven has been created for the guilty.

"So deep seated was the impression of danger from judicial malice or subservience that three centuries have not sufficed to bring home to the people of this country a realization that safeguards which were necessary in the face of seventeenth century tyranny are no longer necessary under the mild rule of twentieth century democracy.

"It is surely not in this country and in this century, with trials conducted in public, with newspapers eager to report every detail of the evidence, of the pleadings and of the judge's charge, that an innocent man need fear conviction. As a matter of fact, it is society which has reason to fear that it will not be adequately protected against its criminal members.

Revulsion of Feeling.

"I believe, however, that a strong revulsion of feeling is taking place in regard to the ineffective administration of the criminal law, from which we have suffered so much. This sentiment has recently been expressed forcibly in several decisions of our highest courts.

"For instance, the United States Supreme Court in Brown vs. Ellicott, has said: 'The Constitution of the United States is not intended as a facility for crime, but to prevent oppression; its letter and its spirit are satisfied if, where a criminal purpose is executed, that criminal purpose be punished.'

"The same court, in Evans vs. United States, stated: '* * * It should, after all, be borne in mind that the object of criminal proceedings is to convict the guilty as well as to shield the innocent, and no impracticable standards of particularity should be set up' * * *

"And the Court of Appeals of the State of New York, in People vs. Strollo, expresses the same idea in the following language: 'Under a judicial system which has for centuries magnified the sacredness of individual rights, there is much less danger of doing injustice to the individual than there is of overlooking the obligations of those in authority to organized society.'

Beset by Difficulties.

"These expressions of our highest courts indicate a realization by the courts of the necessity of getting away from technical interpretations which favor the criminal rather than protect the innocent, but there is a point beyond which the courts cannot go. In the discharge of their functions they must be bound by constitutional limitations. The next step is up to the people. Some modifications of constitutional limitations in this direction must be undertaken.

"The matter is so controversial in character and is beset by so many difficulties that I hesitate to make definite suggestions, but, broadly speaking, I am convinced that some serious consideration should be given to the question of abolishing the protection now afforded against self-incrimination.

"With the prospect of a constitutional convention in New York in the near future, I should assume that that body would devote much anxious deliberation to the idea of facilitating the work of the State's prosecutors by making it possible for them to obtain all evidence relating to the commission of crimes, and also the wisdom and practicability of compelling defendants to take the stand where the Government has established a prima facie case."

April 10, 1907. JOSEPH PULITZER.

ON THE JOB.

If you are going to be a servant, be a good one. It pays. To his American servants—or shall we employ the euphemism "help?"—Pierpont Morgan left $1000 apiece. But to his English servants he gave life annuities of $1250. Why did he do better by the English servants? A small boy could answer that. Because they did better by themselves. They were better servants.

We are all servants of one kind or another, and the rewards of life come through service. With a proud distaste for what they regard as menial, Americans are prone to slight their tasks, dreaming of advancement through becoming something different. Many of us are too proud to succeed. Instead of making our own job a matter of pride we are consumed with envy of the next fellow. Instead of perfecting our own job, we are dreaming about his. The butler's mind is on the chef's work. The bricklayer at work is thinking of what the plasterer is doing. When everybody attends to everybody else's business nobody's business is attended to. Also we like to grumble about the Government, other people's greed, the weather, bad luck, what not, and lay our own shortcomings anywhere that they do not belong. It is more comfortable to blame remote general conditions than recognize specific ones nearer home. The busybody and the sloth alike waste their energies and both complain of their jobs, but it never occurs to either of them to complain of themselves.

But it is as true of American servants, as true of all of us, as of the British and of man in general, that his best hope of advancement lies through his own excellence on his own job. The job in hand is the great opportunity for all of us.

If it is desirable to outgrow your job there is only one way to do it—through excellence. If you are a butler, do not be too proud to buttle with the best of them. If you are a chauffeur, chauff with a will and a wit. If you are a tallow candler, then candle with might and main and mind. If you are a gas fitter, fit gas. If you are a clerk, clerk like sixty—and soon it will be a hundred and sixty. If you are a contractor, contract as hard as you can and you will expand. Whatever you are, insurance agent, saleslady, grocer, banker, newsboy, railroad president, floor walker, sign painter or anything else, excellence in your own work will carry you along. If you can't outgrow your job you can force the job to grow to keep up with you. The important thing is that you grow.

What a great country we could make of it, and what an industrial race of ourselves, if, as a wise Irishman said, "Every man would blaze away like h—l on his own job!" That would spell industrial perfection, economy, individual character and almost social Utopia.

FORTY WINKS.

A Frenchman at Cherbourg has just waked from a little cat nap of 77 days, expressing himself as feeling much refreshed. We have no idea of what he had been doing the evening before, but of course he had no intention of knitting up the raveled sleeve of care to any such extent when on that early February date he put on his nightcap, put the cat out, snuffed the candle, said his prayers and got into bed. Probably he forgot to wind the alarm clock. We suspect it irritated the cook next morning when he failed to come down to breakfast on time, and maybe the family dependent on him for support made some disparaging remarks. No doubt it was a good deal of a nuisance to have him lying around the house for 77 days, although it is not on record that he snored. And we don't know whether his wages ran on during the whole period of his ripvanwinkling. Perhaps not—they do things differently in France.

Nevertheless, gentle reader, the law of compensations was at work. Is it not a soothing picture to contemplate? Think of serenely snoozing on past two months' bills and letting the other fellow whistle! Think of escaping the petty boredom and the big worries! To the French sleeper what meant the Balkan War, the assassination of King George, the chase of William Rockefeller by the Pujo Committee, the French presidential election, American inauguration, April extra session, British suffrage alarums, Ulster's change for home rule, Madero's overthrow, Omaha's cyclone, Dayton's flood, Morgan's demise, or the withdrawl of the insurance companies from Missouri?

With Don Quixote we rhapsodize—Now, blessings light on him that first invented this same sleep! It covers a man all over, thoughts and all, like a cloak; it is meat for the hungry, drink for the thirsty, heat for the cold, and cold for the hot. It is the current coin that purchases all the pleasures of the world cheap; and the balance that sets the King and the shepherd, the fool and the wise man [illegible]

INEQUITABLE TARIFF TAXES.

There is an intimation from Washington that the tariff on cattle will be eliminated from the tariff bill by the Democrats on the ground that it is inequitable to put meat on the free list and keep a tax of 10 per cent on cattle. Moreover, it is impractical because either the price of cattle in this country will have to be brought to the level of the price of outside cattle or the manufacturers of meat products will be unable to compete with outside meat producers.

The American packing industry would be endangered because the packers would find it cheaper to move the industry out of the United States where cattle are untaxed and ship free meat into the United States.

In the end the packing interests of the United States would be driven to Canada or elsewhere and the price of American cattle would sink to the level of the outside market.

The same criticism applies to the tax on wheat and oats with free flour and free oatmeal and rolled oats. If the tax on wheat were effective to raise the price of American wheat the American flour mills would be unable to compete with Canadian flour mills. We would drive our flour milling industry to Canada and the price of American wheat would sink to the level of Canadian wheat, in short it would have to be sold abroad in competition with the wheat of the world. If it is ineffective why levy it and menace our flour industry?

The strongest objection to these taxes on the raw materials is that they violate Democratic principle. They are inequitable. They tax food. To tax the raw materials of food and place the products made out of them on the free list is neither just nor practical.

We want to abolish the system of privilege which has enriched favored manufacturers at the expense of the people, but we do not want to place our manufacturers at a disadvantage in competition with the manufacturers of other countries.

The public is not deceived by the statement that these taxes are needful for revenue. They are sops to the farmers and cattle raisers, but in the long run they will benefit neither. Nor are farmers and cattle raisers likely to be deceived by them. They recognize the futility of protecting the raw material and untaxing the manufactured product.

The curse of the protective system is the politics of privilege. Taxes have been levied to win votes regardless of principle. The Democrats have yielded to temptation in these taxes. They should correct the schedules by the standard of justice they have set up in the party's pledges. How can they reconcile this bidding for votes with tax favors with the President's denunciation of the system by which tariff privileges have been sold for political support?

The Democrats should come to the bar of public opinion in the case against privilege with clean hands. Let us have a logical and equitable free list. Give us free food.

MISSOURI AT ELLIS ISLAND.

A contestant for the Post-Dispatch prize of $100 for the Ten Best Reasons Why People Should Come to Missouri remarks that "Missouri has not been officially represented at Castle Garden or any port of entry in the United States in the past 20 years." He means Ellis Island, which is now the most important landing place for immigrants, but his suggestion is timely, in view of the revived interest in bringing new blood to Missouri.

The World Almanac shows that no less than 605,151 immigrants entered the United States by way of Ellis Island in 1912, out of a total of 838,172 for all ports of entry. Of this total, 184,154 were farm laborers. As a rule, the European farm laborer knows a great deal about farming, and would make a desirable addition to Missouri's rural population.

And although the bulk of this immigration is now from the West and Southwest of Europe, it must not be concluded that, as a whole, it is an influx of paupers or undesirables. These immigrants of 1912 brought with them money aggregating over $20,000,000. The Italian element, so frequently referred to in slighting terms by narrow-minded Americans, brought with them $4,414,270, in money. And Italians make splendid settlers when they are encouraged to engage in industry, as they have proved in Missouri.

An intelligent, active, enthusiastic immigration agent at Ellis Island could bring Missouri many a new and welcome addition to her population.

THE SPHINX STILL A MYSTERY.

Not being familiar with the veracious chronicles of the explorer Tom Sawyer, given to the world through his biographer, the late Mark Twain, the venerable and authoritative European news agency known as Reuter's was recently outrageously hoaxed into accepting a story about the Sphinx. That story was to the effect that Prof. G. A. Reisner, the Harvard archeologist, had dug through the scalp of the Sphinx and discovered a secret stairway which gave access to a wonderful temple in the body of the monster, with an adytum or sanctum sanctorum in the head itself. The "news" was sent out by Reuter's to its hundreds of newspaper clients in Europe and America, and formed the basis for a very readable, illustrated page in the Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine. Prof. Reisner says there is no truth in it. He has not interrogated the Sphinx, with a pick-ax and shovel or in any other way, and does not intend to do so.

Coming from such a source as Reuter's, which was established as a news agency in 1849 and is usually reliable, the story was accepted as a bona fide piece of news, and was published in good faith. However, the hoax proves that even the oldest, most capable news agency, like an individual, is not infallible.

Now that the story has been discredited, the Egyptian mystery relapses into its age-long dumbness and will continue to remain as Tom Sawyer so truthfully described it as "looking over that valley just that same way, and thinking its awful thoughts all to itself for thousands of years, and nobody can't find out what they are to this day."

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Judges' and Clerks' Pay Under the Primary Law.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The primary law provides that the regular judges and clerks of election shall hold the primary election and shall receive the same compensation and pay the judges and clerks their compensation as the law directs.

"Sec. 6035a. Judges and clerks. The judges and clerks for the primary elections held under this act shall be appointed in the same manner and possess the same qualifications, and consist of the same number, as judges and clerks of general elections in this State, in cities to which this act is applicable, and shall receive the same compensations, and the judges and clerks regularly appointed and commissioned for regular elections, except in cases of vacancies, shall act in primary elections, held under this act during the term for which they were appointed."

The Commissioners claim that notice was sent out to the judges and clerks to hold the primary election and to revise the registration books the same day. I don't see how such a notice could possibly have any influence or bearing upon the subject matter. Certainly the Election Commissioners of St. Louis could not substitute their opinions for the laws of Missouri. The revision of the registration was fixed by law before the primary law was passed, and the time for holding this revision, 8 a. m. to 10 p. m. The primary law requires that judges and clerks shall be in the polling places at 6 a. m. What right have the Election Commissioners to order the judges and clerks to get out that early in the morning, and not pay them for their services as the primary law directs? If the judges and clerks get no compensation for holding the primary election, they can refuse next time to hold the primary.

The Attorney-General of the State or Judge Harvey's (city attorney) published opinion would be satisfactory in this case. The primary law, like any other law, is subject to judicial construction. The American Colonies revolted upon the contention that they would not be taxed without representation. The judges and clerks will not hold any more primaries unless they are compensated for their work. G. W. HARRIS.

Pension the Deserted Mother.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I wish to take an exception to the statements of a New York Times writer in reference to Mothers' Pensions, quoted in a leter from Mrs. Henry W. Eliot, printed in Friday's Post-Dispatch.

The writer says that the deserted wife and children should not be given pensions because that would induce other desertions, which is equal to saying that deserted mothers and their children should be punished in an attempt to prevent other fathers from doing wrong. This is a continuation of the old barbarian idea that a wife and her children belong to the father to such an extent that they should suffer for any and all wrong doing of the father.

In civilized warfare we have long since advanced from this barbarian idea to the more just principle that innocent women and children should not be permitted to suffer for the wrongs of men.

I contend that it is wrong to crucify on the cross of charity the deserted mother and her children even if it did prevent other desertions and I also contend that it does not prevent desertions. In the many cases of desertion I have investigated, the man should have deserted long before he did—for the good of the wife—for the good of the children and for the good of society.

For a man or woman of this age to advocate punishing women and children as a pretended means of keeping men good is outrageous and unjust. HENRY NEIL.

"Dry" Law With a "Wet" Joker.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Texas has just added her proof of the truth of our repeated assertion that prohibitionists do not want the kind of prohibition that will prohibit the use of liquors in dry territory. The General Assembly has passed, and the Governor has signed, a bill that makes it unlawful for anyone in the "wet" parts of Texas to ship liquor into the "dry" parts of Texas, but the new law contains the following "saving clause:"

> "Nothing in this Act shall be construed as relating to interstate shipment and transportation of intoxicating liquors, or to the delivery of same to any person, firm or corporation within this State on such interstate shipment or transportation."

This law was advocated and passed as a "temperance" measure. If enforced it will destroy the Texas patronage of Texas liquor dealers insofar as "dry" territory in Texas is concerned, unless the Texas dealers resort to the cumbersome expedient of shipping liquor out of the State and then shipping it back again under the interstate shipping clause.

However, the point is that the interstate shipping clause prevents prohibition from prohibiting in Texas, for, while, as a "temperance" measure, the new law discriminates against the liquor dealers of Texas, it invites the shipment of liquor from other States into the "dry" parts of Texas.

The new "temperance" law was adopted after the passages of the Webb law which enables states to prohibit interstate shipments of liquor into "dry" territory.

When it is a matter of denouncing alcoholic beverages the prohibitionists exceed all speed limits, but when it is a matter of cutting off the supply of liquor in "dry" territory they always apply the emergency brake and come to a stop with a jerk. T. M. GILMORE,
President National Model License League.

How to Protect the Public.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The perplexing question before our City Council of how to protect the public against faking, swindling and dishonest mediums, fortune tellers, card readers, palmists, crystal gazers, clairvoyants and psychic sensitives is easily accomplished without interfering with the rights or religions of anyone, as follows:

1. Abolish the $100 license, which grants anyone the right, regardless of ability, to practice any humbug, swindle or fraud by law. The city should be ashamed to be an accessory to crime in this way. This tax induces them to be dishonest, even if they are not. Not all mediums or sensitives are dishonest by any means, and to deny the existence of this art in the twentieth century is simple ignorance.
2. Put every medium, clairvoyant or psychic under a $500 bond, which will hold them and help catch them if they practice their art dishonestly or attempt to swindle the public in any way. Such a bond will hold them responsible to law, justice and contract.
3. Have a State Board of Examiners, consisting of people learned in the art, to ascertain the genuine ability of the applicants for license, and when such ability exists, regardless of education, grant them a license to practice their art for one year only. Many psychics or sensitives lose their ability at some time and cease to be mediums. The State Board shall have power to revoke any license at once for loss of ability, dishonest or irregular practice, just as doctors, druggists, engineers, lawyers and schools of learning are controlled.
4. Permit mediums, psychics or sensitives to advertise their business in the public press with a simple card only, of name, location and office hours.
5. Arrest and punish all violators of the law who practice mediumship without a license. This procedure will absolutely eliminate all dishonesty, fraud, humbug and swindle; protect the public and elevate this art into a respectable position, where it belongs. HERMAN W. FABER, M. D.

SONG.

ONE day old Mister Satan come a-walkin' 'cross de brine;
He say, "Good mawnin', Noah! De fishin's mighty fine.
Why don't you git dem two worms out fo' ketch yo'sef some fish,
An' live as high upon de ark as any man could wish?"

"Good mawnin', Mistah Noah!
De fishin's mighty fine.
Why don't you git dem two worms out
An' set yo'sef a line?
Cain't you heah de catfish scratchin'
Dey backs agin de keel,
An' de punkinseeds jess bellerin'
Fo' git deyselves a meal?"

He made dat fellow Satan pick up his heels an' hike.
He hit him one big wallop across de horns an' say,
"Git out o' hyah, Temptation, an' mind you stay away!"

"Git out o' hyah, Temptation,
An' mind you stay away!
Dis chile ain't goin' fishin',
No matter what you say.
De Lawd's done put his faith in him
To bring dem worms asho'.
An' don't you make no such fool cracks
Aroun' hyah any mo'."

AH loves de Lawd—his mercy am bery, bery fine;
But Ah'm glad dat job was Noah's job an' derfore none of mine.
Ah don't know what Ah would have done when de good Lawd said to me,
"Now, where is dem two angle worms you took wif you to sea?"

"Now, where is dem two angle worms
You took wif you to sea?"
Ah'm mighty glad he asked it of
Ol' Noah 'stead of me.
Dis ol' coon's only flesh and blood,
But Noah was a man,
An' he answered, "Hyah dey is, deah Lawd,
In dis tomato can."

"They seem to get on beautifully."
"Yes. He always gives her the last word."

Somebody had to take Bull Moose Johnson by the horns, and Mr. Wilson, as usual, proved to have the necessary courage.

Japan must be enthusiastic about the Panama Exposition.

FILM SHOWS AND EYESIGHT.

From the Outlook.

The "movies" have called forth much discussion on several points in the recent past—how far censorship ought to prevail, and whether or not the permission to amusement houses to show 'movines" on Sunday was in fonmormance with social welfare.

But one of the most interesting discussions of the "movies" and their ramifications has to do with the eyesight. Considered from the standpoint of the oculist, the "movies" are intensely interesting as being the chief cause of what is known among eye specialists as "moving-picture eye," an already well-developed optical phenomenon. Hundreds of people who did not know their sight was faulty have found it out through their experience with the "movies." Dr. Charles A. Bahn, an oculist of New Orleans, states in the New Orleans Medical and Surgical Journal that one of the chief causes of "moving-picture eye" is the habit persons have of staring unwinkingly at whatever intensely interests them. This habit, it is advised, can be overcome by forcing one's self not to look either too continually or with too great concentration at any one point.

Dr. Bahn also advises a rear seat as the least hurtful point of view. The normal eye is less equal to the strain of the "movies" than is the short-sighted or far-sighted eye, through its inability to oscillate rapidly. For instance, to see things near by the eyes of a man with normal sight must undergo a forced elongation. This, if continued for any length of time, is a severe strain on the eye muscles. With the short-sighted or myopic man this elongation is already accomplished; consequently his eyes are spared the extra exertion. The consensus of opinion of oculists is that a man with normal eyesight can safely endure four sittings of 30 minutes each per week with little or so unpleasant symptoms and no permanent ill-effects. But the "movie" fan lays himself open to overtaxed eye nerves, with the consequent headaches, indigestion and general complaints.

The History of the Key.

From Harper's Weekly.

The key was one of the first things invented by man. The primitive key was probably a thorn or splinter. Afterward fishbones seem to have come into use. Wooden pegs followed these. In modern times the process of manufacturing keys is very highly developed. Fifty years ago there were only some hundred varieties of keys, each having its special name and distinct use. Today they are legion.

Barbers in Russia.

It is said that the average income of a barber in Moscow, Russia, is from $2000 to $4000 a year, but one would never suppose it to look at the bewhiskered Russians we get over here.

CLEANSING.

ETHEL.—It is sometimes difficult to clean Panama and leghorn hats successfully, but the two best ways, it is said, are the following: If hats are not too much soiled they may be cleaned by use of alcohol. Dip a stiff bristled brush into a cup of alcohol and then scrub the hat with it until the soil is removed. The brush must be absolutely fresh. The other way is to give the hats a bath in gasoline, and in this case, as well, use a brush to thoroughly clean the straw. The latter method is the best if the hats are badly in need of cleaning. Another writer says: "All authorities agree that the best treatment for Panama hats is a thorough scrubbing with lukewarm water and a good white soap. Use a small scrub brush and make a thick lather. Rinse with clear water until all soap is removed, and dry in the sunshine.

HEALTH HINTS.

N. O. K.—G. H. French, Nebraska City, Neb., writes: To cure corn place a piece of cotton or woolen cloth in kerosene and fold around the place affected. It will afford instant relief, and a few applications will remove the corn forever. Also to insure good night's rest and plenty of sleep, sweet dreams likewise, place a cup of water within reach of couch when you retire. Should you wake during the night, take a small drink. You will be surprised how it will be conducive to rest and more sleep and good health.

THANKSGIVING DAYS.

N.—Special days set apart for giving thanks to the Lord were known to the Israelites and are mentioned throughout the Bible. The first national thanksgiving in England was for the defeat of the Spanish armada in 1588. As recently as 1872 a day of thanksgiving was appointed on Feb. 27 for the recovery of the then Prince of Wales from typhoid fever. The first thanksgiving in North America is said to have been that conducted in 1578 by Wolfall, an English minister, who had come to Newfoundland with the Frobisher expedition. The earliest record of a thanksgiving day being observed in what is now the territory of the United States was held by the Popham colony at Sagadahoc, Me., in 1607. These were days set apart wholly for prayer. A thanksgiving day to be observed with prayer, rejoicing and feasting originated with Gov. Bradford of the Massachusetts Bay colony. He proclaimed a day for giving thanks for the bounteous harvest of the year 1621, following, as it did, several seasons of want. The day set apart was Dec. 13, O. S. Being a man of action, Gov. Bradford supplemented his proclamation by sending out four men to search for game. They were rewarded by the capture of several wild turkeys, which was the first introduction of our national thanksgiving day dish. The story runs that after the religious services, and while partaking of the dinner which had been prepared for the whole colony, 90 friendly Indians, led by their chief, Massasoit, came into the camp, bringing haunches of venison. The day of thanksgiving was prolonged to three, the time being occupied with feastings, singing of psalms, war dancing by the Indians and drilling of the soldiers by Capt. Myles Standish. Following this thanksgiving of 1621 the festival was observed with more or less frequency, sometimes once a year, sometimes twice, and then again a year or two were skipped, acording as reasons for giving thanks presented themselves. The festival became an annual one in Massachusetts in 1684, and was soon observed throughout New England. Washington issued a proclamation for a general thanksgiving by the Continental army Dec. 18, 1777, and at Valley Forge May 7, 1778; also when President, Nov. 26, 1789. Several succeeding Presidents issued general proclamations, but it was generally left to the Governors of the several states. Sarah J. Hale, editor of Godey's Magazine, Philadelphia, was probably responsible for the general observance of the festival upon a regular date. She wrote to all the Governors of the states, suggesting that the last Thursday of November be appointed for the day of thanksgiving, so that it might be observed throughout the country. She did this year after year until it had become a firmly established custom.

JOE BOWERS.—G. S. writes: "Joe Bowers" was written in the spring of 1851 by Voscoe Milon Chaffee, an inventor and poet of Lawrenceville, Ill. Ten years later at Clay City, Ill., he invented the famous Forest King stump plow and a car coupling. He was also the author of several Civil War songs, "Brave Curtis and the Lincoln Greene." Mr. Chaffee was born in Lawrenceville, Ill., in 1822, and died at Saylor Springs, Ill., in 1895. He was a Mason and an Odd Fellow. Many of his pieces can be found in the old files of the Louisville (Ill.) Journal. (The following statement appeared in Missouri in 1903: Judge Fagg is supremely happy now that he has found the author of the Joe Bowers song. He has searched the country from Maine to California for 20 years and has at last been rewarded. The author is Tom Burgess, a former clown, and now an inmate of the Actors' Home on Staten Island. At least Tom says he wrote the song, and anybody who has heard it sung is perfectly willing for him to have the authorship.)

KRAMER.—Mr. Lincoln always declared that the object of the war was the restoration of the Union and not the emancipation of the slaves. Mr. Davis positively declared that the South was not fighting for slavery, but for independence. Robert E. Lee set all his slaves free Jan. 8, 1863. In 1861 Jefferson Davis wrote to his wife: "In any case our slave property will eventually be lost." Sectional differences had prevailed from the beginning of the existence of the Union. After the time of the Missouri Compromise of 1820 their main basis was the economic and social divergence between North and South, caused by the existence of slavery. After the adoption of the Constitution of 1787 the thought that the states were sovereign remained familiar to the minds of many, if not most, Americans. This led easily to the thought of secession by a state or states, as a remedy for aggressive action on the part of the Federal Government. The Federalists of New England made threats of secession in 1811 and 1814. As the slavery agitation began to be foremost among political issues, secession was extensively suggested as the constitutional right of the Southern states if the system of slavery was attacked.

BRYAN GOES WEST TO COUNSEL CALIFORNIA ON LAND LEGISLATION

Danger of international complications in law for the exclusion of Japanese from land ownership causes Secretary of State to take an unprecedented journey.

SECRETARY of State Bryan expects to reach Sacramento Monday for conference with Gov. Johnson and leaders in House and Senate on the pending bill to exclude aliens ineligible to citizenship from ownership in land. He is expected to present the Government's objection to such legislation, which is aimed at the Japanese and is resented by Japan. So strong is the feeling of the Nipponese against this further exclusion that war is openly advocated by radical newspapers, although conservative papers, which represent Government opinion, deprecate such violence and assume that our Government will do all in its power to save the feelings of Japan. President Wilson's exchange of telegrams with Gov. Johnson was cordial and kindly; but so unsatisfactory that it was deemed wise to send Mr. Bryan.

Bryan Highly Qualified.

New York World: When the World in its issue of last Friday said "Send Bryan" it spoke with knowledge of the situation in California; it recognized the importance of friendly conference between well meaning national and state officers and it emphasized the desirability of an authoritative appeal on behalf of the people of the United States to the people of California.

Secretary Bryan is highly qualified for this mission and his appearance at Sacramento cannot fail to be useful. As the head of the State Department he will be able to open to those whom he addresses a wider point of view. Charged, like others, with grave responsibilities at Washington, he should have no difficulty in sobering to some extent those who have been acting impulsively and rashly. One of the most powerful and popular of American orators, his triumph in a just cause can hardly be doubted. California's anti-Japanese movement has all the earmarks not only of a wicked cause, but of a losing cause. Strong in his grasp of the moralities and impregnable in the knowledge that his position is supported by law, by precedent and by public opinion, Mr. Bryan approaches a stage that is perfectly set for a great forensic achievement, perhaps the most notable in his life.

Bryan and Roosevelt Influence.

New York Sun: Mr. Bryan will be very useful in council, because as Secretary of State he must be in a position to convince the Progressive leaders at Sacramento that radical and discriminating legislation would be dangerous. The Democratic minority has declared its intention to support the national Administration, and as Col. Roosevelt has sent Gov. Johnson a message urging the defeat of any measure discriminating against the Japanese the hope is that conservative counsels will finally prevail in spite of the sinister reports that are still emanating from Sacramento.

Sentiment Rules.

New York Press: The international situation arising out of the scheme of California to legislate against the Japanese has been handled by President Wilson with delicacy and tact and yet with firmness. His stroke in sending Secretary Bryan to plead with the California Legislature may not be successful in restraining that body from its contemplated action. In the nature of things, however, it must convince Japan that the National Government and the American people do not encourage and have no sympathy with California's hostile program. This ought to satisfy the sentiment of the people of Japan, and after all there is little more than sentiment involved on either side of the Pacific Ocean.

Our Way, Not Their Way.

New York Herald: The spectacle of a Minister for Foreign Affairs being catapulted something like three thousand miles by order of a Chief Executive would probably greatly alarm diplomatists if it occurred in any other country. We are sure, however, that the eminent gentlemen who represent large and small Powers at Washington do not permit themselves to become excited about it. They understand the peculiarities of our Government and by this time they are doubtless well aware of the accentuated peculiarities of our new and verdant administration.

Treaty Rights and State Rights.

New York Tribune: The statement of Gov. Johnson and the telegram of President Wilson show all too plainly the doubt and hesitation of mind that still surround the question of treaty supremacy in the United States. The text of Presiden Wilson's message is regrettably lacking in any clear statement of the Constitutional principles involved. He properly concedes the undoubted right of California to pass a law regulating land tenure by aliens; but he makes no assertion of what is the clear and controlling truth, that such a law will be null and of no effect in so far as it contravenes a treaty of the United States.

J. P. Morgan's Will

MORE comment followed the probating of John Pierpont Morgan's will than was occasioned by the announcement of his death. The remarkable facts in connection with the will, as editorial writers see them, are the confession of faith with which the will opens, the confidence he reposed in his son and the small amount left to charity.

A Confession of Faith.

New Orleans Times-Democrat: The salient feature of the Morgan will consists, we think, in the preamble. For the king of modern finance, before disposing of his vast fortune, proceeds to proclaim his belief in the doctrine of the Atonement, as the doctrine was universally held before the higher criticism came to trouble the minds and consciences of Christians. There is no shadow of doubt in these words: "I commit my soul into the hands of my Savior, in full confidence that, having redeemed it and washed it in His most precious blood, He will present it faultless before the throne of my heavenly Father; and I entreat my children to maintain and defend, at all hazards and at the cost of any personal sacrifice, the blessed doctrine of the complete atonement for sin through the blood of Jesus Christ, once offered, and through that alone."

The confession could not have been more fervent, if the mighty banker had passed his life in the dim, religious light of some monastery, instead of battling in the market-places of the world.

The Art Collection.

Chicago Record-Herald: Regarding the valuable art collections, the will without creating any sort of obligation, does create a moral certainty. It was Mr. Morgan's desire and intention, the will says, to render his treasures permanently available for the instruction and pleasure of the people. The spirit of the age, the necessities of the situation, the very love of art in the collector or the owner of priceless treasures, cannot fail to lead to this consummation. Mr. Morgan's son undoubtedly knew and fully shared his father's sentiments.

Concentration Not Disintegration.

Chicago Inter Ocean: Doubtless some will ask why Mr. Morgan did not leave more to public charities and will be inclined to criticise because of the lack of definite bequests.

It is evident that Mr. Morgan's purpose was to keep the House of Morgan intact and in this way carry on through his executors and heirs the works in which he himself had been interested. By concentrating resources instead of scattering them he has insured continuance.

The Element of Confidence.

New York Tribune: This element of confidence, upon which Mr. Morgan dwelt in his recent testimony in Washington, is in evidence all through the will—in the provisions with regard to the art collections, in the provisions with regard to property standing in his name but really belonging to his banking firms, and in the disposition of his residuary estate directly, without the creation of a trust, as is the common practice with respect to great estates.

One Per Cent to Charity.

Chicago Tribune: The will bequeaths an utterly insignificant amount to charity—less than 1 per cent of his estimated fortune—and nothing to public use. The claim of friends that he gave liberally, though secretly, during his lifetime does not absolve. The spirit displayed offers a striking contrast to the huge and enlightened public giving of Mr. John D. Rockefeller, or even of other Americans of great wealth. It indicates that Mr. Morgan had an inadequate sense of the debt he owed to a people whose energies and abilities contributed the foundations of his own acquisitions. It shows that his ethical standards and his social imagination were still bound by the egotistic and unmitigated individualism of the generation in which his character was formed.

Humanness of the Man.

Philadelphia Ledger: There is a wonderful humanness in the document. He remembers all of his servants, some close friends to whom an increased income will be a real benefit, all of his business employes, and provides that those whom he has been accustomed to aid regularly shall continue to receive assistance from his estate. And he has brought the world up short in its mad worship of materialism, for he who seemed to the unthinking public to be the very embodiment of that ideal, in the first sentence of his last testament leaves unto his heirs, and through them to the world, as his richest legacy his own belief in the insufficiency of man and the all-sufficiency of God. It is an extraordinary and striking utterance.

Trusted His Son.

Detroit Free Press: It is noticeable that Mr. Morgan made no attempt to perpetuate his fortune. He left it outright to his son, trusing evidently to the training he had given its recipient as the best assurance possible in this world that it would be wisely used. After all, trusteeships and entails and all the other artificial means man has invented to continue wealth in the direction its owner wishes it to go are comparatively futile agencies. In the end, they must depend for their efficacy upon the personal element always.

Fall of Scutari

MONTENEGRO defied the Powers and persisted in the investiture of Scutari, after the Servians had yielded to the Powers and retired. Then, having demonstrated to the Turkish commander that without Servia he was in force sufficient to command all positions and continue the siege, King Nicholas of Montenegro received the surrender of Scutari, according the honors of war to the Turks. What the Powers will now do to enforce their ultimatum and recover Scutari for Austria or Albania is the immediate problem.

Austria's Sordid Desire.

New York Tribune: It has been a spectacle for gods and men to see the embattled fleets of the great powers aligned in the Adriatic blockading the Montenegrin coast, dictating the raising of the siege of Scutari and threatening dire penalties if the mandate were not obeyed; while Nicholas and his troops on the rocky heights above have ignored them and only persisted the more resolutely in siege and storm. Why not, indeed? Why had not the Montenegrins the same right to take Scutari, if they could, that the Germans had to take Metz, or the Japanese Port Arthur? The only reason for disputing it was Austria's sordid desire to keep Montenegro and Servia crippled and hampered by maintaining an Austro-Albanian fortress on the very frontier of the mountain State.

Powers Must Be Wary.

New York Sun: Sir Edward Grey has declared that the inclusion of Scutari in autonomous Albania was essential to the peace of Europe. King Nicholas has taken it to have and to hold. The powers must now proceed warily or the Balkan war may be a prelude to a greater struggle involving a scramble for the spoils of the lesser conflict.

Mountain Takes the Plain.

New York World: With British, French, Italian, German and Austrian ships patrolling her coast, in a demonstration which Russia approved; with an armistice once more signed between Turkey and the other Balkan allies, and the sending home of prisoners begun, little Montenegro has taken Scutari by assault in defiance of all Europe. Three-fourths of Scutari's 35,000 people ahe Mohammedan; the only excuse of the Montenegrins for demanding it has been their own need. Without the rich plain of which it is the key they were doomed to remain in their poverty-stricken mountains the pensioners of Russia, even for the means of defense.

Scutari as a Pawn.

New York Post: In Albania, the Austrian Government, which has lost much by the outcome of the war, is determined to secure compensation. Failure to satisfy Austrian aspirations in Albania may easily entail the gravest consequences. From this point of view the capture of Scutari may precipitate a crisis. If Montenegro has persisted in her operations against the town in defiance of the Powers, will she now surrender the prize won at tremendous cost? The one way out is to suppose that Montenegro has stuck to her course not because she hoped to retain Scutari, but because with the town in her possession, she can demand rich compensation elsewhere.

PRINCESS MARY HAS A WILL THAT AMUSES ENGLISH KING

George V Surmises That His Only Daughter, Just Sixteen, Will Soon Overcome Even the Firmness of Her Mother, Whom She Lately Forced to Compromise on the Subject of Her Royal Highness' Hair.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1913, by Press Pub. Co. (New York World.)

LONDON, April 26.—Princes Mary is said to be the most determined lady in the royal household. Her Royal Highness, who celebrated her sixteenth birthday yesterday, is fast growing up, and she is forming her own circle of friends and her own manner of life.

The one point of dispute between her and the Queen is her hair. Princess Mary dislikes to have her hair falling about. The Queen will not allow it up. Now a compromise has been made. Princess Mary usually ties it back in a small thick plait doubled up at the neck with a ribbon.

The King is amused at his daughter's strong will, which seems likely to everrule even that of the Queen's.

American Countess' Daughter Princess' Friend.

A very special friend of the Princess is Lady Rachel Cappell, the pretty second daughter of the Countess of Essex, formerly Adele Grant of New York. This friendship sprung up last year when Lady Rachel, with a number of other young society girls, was invited by the Princess to tea in the palace. Lady Rachel is a delightful little person and both Queen Mary and Queen Alexandra have always had an affection for her since she was quite a small child.

Lady Rachel rides in the park when in town and so the young people will meet frequently during the coming season, as Princess Mary is now allowed to appear publicly by Her Majesty.

Mrs. Frederick Guest, who was Miss Amy Phipps of New York, will be one of the most prominent American hostesses in London after Whitsuntide. Her small dinners are included in the list of exclusive hostesses like Mrs. Charles Schwab, Viscountess Maidstone and the Duchess of Portland. She has entertained the Duchess this spring in Park Lane, where one evening she gave an impromptu party, a dinner of 60, followed by a delightful entertainment in the winter garden carried out by children, the actors including her small son and daughter. The latter is one of the cleverest young persons in society.

Mrs. Guest Favorite With Royalty.

Mrs. Guest is a favorite with royalty, and not long ago entertained Princess Christian and Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, the latter a great favorite with the children, whom she has frequently taken out for a morning in the park and vastly entertained at the Serpentine feeding the ducks from a paper bag filled with bread brought from Schomberg House for the purpose.

During the season Mrs. Guest will give a children's fancy dress party and a short play in which Miss Alice Astor, the two Guest children, Lady Evelyn Cottrell's handsome child, and Lord Ivor Churchill will take part.

Mrs. Strawbridge of Philadelphia is having great success this year. At Melton she is well in with the exclusive hunting circle, and during her various trips to London she has given several most successful theater parties, preceded by restaurant dinners. Her daughter, a pretty girl, has recently had her portrait painted by Eland, who has also painted the children of Mrs. Frederick Guest, Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, Miss Price Collier and other notable American and English people.

PRETTIEST WOMAN IN ROME DANCES IN FILMIEST GUAZE

ROME, April 26.—Princess Abamelek, a charity dancer, is the most beautiful woman in Rome. This opinion is indorsed by society and emphasized by those who attended the entertainment at which Her Highness danced for charity at the Argentina Theater and electrified the audience by her grace, agility and (to borrow a phrase from the local critics) her "intoxicating loveliness."

Ladies of princely blood are not often seen on the boards, and the spectacle is still rarer when an authentic princess displays a statuesque form in the lightest gauze and performs as an original figure of her own invention—a blend of skirt and ballet dance—with rare grace and harmony of movement.

"The Dancing Princess," as she is sometimes called, has often performed for the benefit of friends, but this was her first appearance in public, a public limited by special ticket to aristocratic Rome and a sprinkling of lesser lights from literary and journalistic circles, who were admitted by special favor.

The ostensible attraction of the fete was the performance of Maria Costa's "History of a Clown," a light musical comedy well fitted for extempore interludes, but the real "draw" was the exquisite dancing of the lady of title—a title of semi-royal significance and ancient origin; for Prince Abamelek, diplomat and courtier, belongs to an ancient and noble family whose tree may be traced to the remote past in direct line. He is immensely wealthy and his wife wears the finest jewels in the kingdom.

BEAUTIFUL ITALIAN OPERA STAR WILL TOUR AMERICA

ROME, April 26.—Signorina Gea Della Garisenda, perhaps the most beautiful and certainly the most fascinating exponent of light opera on the Italian stage, is again contemplating a trip across the Atlantic, where she has already won fame in the leading cities of North and South America. She has become increasingly popular in her own country since playing the leading role in "The Merry Widow," "The Waltz Dream" and similar productions and today she stands unrivaled as a prima donna in operas of that type.

A native of Bologna, at 10 years of age Signorina Gea was already a finished amateur actress. Her voice gave early promise of rendering her famous, but it was not till she had studied some years at the Milan Conservatory that she decided to go on the stage. Now she stands in the foremost rank of light opera singers and has a voice of marvelous sweetness and flexibility.

Her stage name of Garisenda is borrowed from the famous tower of that name in Bologna. On her baptismal day (in mid-January) the little maiden was much upset by the ordeal at the font and on leaving church rent the air with her cries. At that moment the bells of Garisenda rang out and the child was hushed as she drove past the tower.

"A good omen" said her old nurse, crossing herself; "the bells will always bring her luck." When choosing a stage name the girl remembered her nurse's prophecy, and so far the luck of the bells has been fully realized.

Princess Mary's First Park Trip.

LONDON, April 26.—The King, accompanied by Princes Mary, rode in Hyde Park for an hour a few morning ago. This is the first time that Princess Mary has been seen riding in the park.

"Cure Me! You're Omnipotent!" Cries Czar's Little Son to Father.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 26.

THIS pathetic story is told about the little crippled Czarevitch. He recently went weeping to his father, Czar Nicholas, and said:

"I have overheard that I am incurable. I want life and health. Save me. You are omnipotent!"

Chance for the Wealthy.

LONDON, April 26.—"Oxford undergraduate scholar who is tired of being poor, wishes to be adopted by weathy people." This frank advertisement appeared in the personal column of the Times, the Conservative organ.

THE strong-willed young daughter of the King and Queen of England, the son and heir of the Czar of Russia in a brand-new military uniform, Italian light opera singer who plans an American tour, and beautiful Italian princess who enthralls Rome by her wonderful dancing.

Kaiser Stops Work at Potsdam Because Taxes for Larger Army Will Make a Heavy Drain on the Imperial Purse.

BERLIN, April 26.—After all the Crown Prince will not get into his new palace on Lake Wannsee as soon as he expected. All the plans, as described recently in the Post-Dispatch, were approved by the Emperor last autumn and workmen were about to begin operations. Stacks of scaffolding were prepared and blocks of marble for the reception hall have been shaped, but the Emperor has suddenly vetoed the whole scheme of construction.

At first it was rumored that there had been another breach between the Prince and his father, especially as it is announced that he must remain another year at Danzig. But now it is asserted that the Emperor's controling reason is that both he and the Prince will be obliged to contribute heavily to the army tax and spare cash for expensive contruction will be rare by the time Princess Victoria has received her dowry. Besides, the Emperor thinks it would make a bad impression if the Crown Prince should start building a palace just when everybody else is cutting all possible expenses to cover taxation.

Berlin tradesmen complain that the new taxes have hurt business in what should have been a good year for them. Many well-to-do residents are closing their houses and going south to save entertainment expense during May and June.

One society florist tells the Post-Dispatch correspondent that he usually gets four to five thousand good orders for decorating balconies, which is Berlin's most prominent decorative feature before the end of April, but this year he has not had four hundred.

Crown Princess Cecelie is said to feel keenly the criticisms of her husband published in certain German papers, especially regarding his alleged fondness for the society of actresses.

She thinks something should be done to stop these attacks, but the Emperor objects to invoking the law on the ground that it gives the libels only wider publicity.

TIARA IS HAVING A REST IN FASHIONABLE LONDON

LONDON, April 26.—The supplementary opera season opened with a fine performance of "Tannhauser," in which a German soprano new to Covent Garden, Fraulein Perardpetze, made a tremendous success as Elizabeth.

The ring performances, under the magic conductorship of Nikisch, gave Wagner enthusiasts the treat of their lives and a repetition of the cycle is being clamorously demanded.

The houses have been socially very brilliant. A notable feature in the boxes and stalls has been the almost complete absence of jeweled hair ornaments on fashionable women. The tiara, so painfully overdone in recent years, is having a recess. Only 17 were counted in the house on the opening night. Most of the women's coiffures were severely plain.

Neither King George nor Queen Mary patronize the opera much, but Princess Patricia of Connaught is there every night looking handsomer than ever.

MAXINE ELLIOT LOOKS MORE LIKE FORMER SELF

DUBLIN, Ireland, April 26.—Maxine Elliot has returned from the Riviera and is a guest of the Earl and Countess of Portarlington at their Irish seat for the Punchestown races. Graham White and his wife, formerly Dorothy Taylor of New York, are also in the house party. Miss Elliot, who had grown painfully thin under a diet and exercise course, is looking more like her former self, having taken on quite a normal amount of flesh.

Lord and Lady (Vivien Gould) Decies also are entertaining a Punchestown party at Luthelstown. Lady Decies, Lady Maxwell (nee Bonynge) and Maxine Elliot were a good deal together in the stand.

Miss Elliot will return to Bushy Heath next week to entertain her usual select week-end parties. Her guests will include the Duke of Rutland, Lord Curzon of Kedelston, the Duchess of Sutherland and the Countess of Portarlington.

MARCHIONESS BURIED IN A NIGHTGOWN AND A BLANKET

ROME, April 26.—Marchioness Calabrini of Palazzo Caffarelli, widow of Marquis of Rocco Gradara, was buried in a blanket. She was an English woman and in her will directed that 500 masses should be said for her soul and that she should be buried in a nightgown and "the white blanket with red border" that her husband used to have. If this was moth-eaten, she was to be covered with the green plush table-cover with embroidered stripes, for "my husband had the larger one." The blanket was found to be in good condition.

Boy Story Writer Sells Popcorn.

PARIS, April 26.—Ford Tarpley of Portland, Ore., the boy short story writer, has opened an American popcorn shop in the Montparnasse quarter, where he is also selling home-made candy, pancakes and pies in order to make a living while writing and seeing the world. The shop is kept open late. American style decorations and signs have been supplied gratis by American artists of the quarter, who are making Tarpley's shop an American rendezvous.

MOVING PICTURE FILM OF FOOD PROCESS IN STOMACH

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

BERLIN, April 26.—After this it will be possible for one, by means of moving pictures, to observe his stomach at work digesting his dinner, if an invention presented by Dr. Rosenthal for inspection at the Physiotherapeutics Congress does all that is claimed for it. The apparatus enables a moving picture to be taken of the internal organ, showing its actual working, and in the case of illness aiding in the location of the exact center of disease.

The Congress was allowed to see the internal working of a stomach and from the moving pictures, the medical men were at once able to detect the presence and location of disease.

The invention, an adaptation of the X-ray, is very simple and it is declared that it will revolutionize diagnostics. By making all disease visible it will obviate the necessity for operations to discover the nature and location of disease.

TWO CAPITALS WORRIED ABOUT ABSENT AMERICANS

BERLIN, April 26.—The expected rush of Americans for hotel accommodation has not yet begun and the hotel men are fearful that the political complications in Europe will ruin at least the early part of the season. Many Americans, however, have booked rooms for the Emperor's jubilee in June, which will be more public than was anticipated. Berlin has decided to spend about $100,000 in decorating the streets through which the royal procession will pass.

PARIS, April 26.—Merchants and hotel proprietors fear there will be a poor "American season" owing to the war fever in Europe and unsettled international conditions.

Governess Is One of Most Powerful Women in Europe

Miss Brown Rules the Royal Children of Italy, They Rule the Queen, Their Fond Mother, She Rules the King, Her Devoted Husband, and He Rules the Kingdom, a High Court Official Explains to the Post-Dispatch.

ROME, April 26.—"Miss Brown" is governess to the royal Italian children. Her Christian name is of secondary importance; in fact, no one at the Quirinal or other Italian royal palaces knows her by any other title than the foregoing. Yet in a sense this plain English woman (the qualification does not apply to her looks), whose name suggests a middle-class descent rather than anything approaching high lineage, is one of the most powerful women in Europe.

"How is this possible?" the Post-Dispatch correspondent asked a high court official.

"It is simple enough," was the answer. "Miss Brown rules the royal children, the royal children rule their mother, their mother rules the King. Is there anything unusual in family life in such a chain of asociation?"

Queen Is Devoted to Her.

If Miss Brown finds little Princess Mafalda wants this or the little Crown Prince wants that, she refers the request to the Queen if she judges it a proper one. This English lady has a remarkable influence with the Queen, who is devoted to her, and she has the entire care of the nursery and the training of the four children, whose ages range from 5 to 11. There are other governesses of different nationalities, but they all defer to Miss Brown, who has the first and last say in all matters connected with the children.

"I don't like the Austrians," said the little Crown Prince Humbert the other day, "and I wish you would make Papa get my grandpa of Montenegro out of all that mess. What right has a big country to bully a little one?"

This was one request Miss Brown put upon the shelf for further consideration. Meanwhile, Count Gianotti, Prefect of the Palace and Grand Master of the Ceremonies, died. He was a familiar figure of the royal palace and greatly beloved of the royal children with whom he used to romp like a school boy. His death which occurred within a few hours of that of J. Pierpont Morgan, cast a gloom over the palace.

Since then there has been the question of appointing his successor. Here Miss Brown's power makes itself felt. The person to whom the succession would have naturally reverted is not in favor either with the children or their English governess. So the contingency of putting him out is formidable. Miss Brown works upon the maternal feelings of Queen Helena.

"The children will never get on with—" she declares and gives other strong reasons against his nomination. The Queen in her turn puts pressure upon the King and the upshot of it is that the important post of Prefect of the Palace remains vacant and is likely to remain so until a candidate more favored in the nursery comes forward.

RAIN OF RICE BRINGS JOY TO THE CHINESE

SHANGHAI, April 26.—The Chinese in Shanghai have had good reason to believe that a miracle has happened. It has rained rice!

From 10 o'clock at night until well after midnight groups of Chinese were on their knees scraping together the grain which, like a gift from the gods, fell in little showers.

The explanation was that some miles away the roof of a granary had been swept off by a typhoon, and the grain had been whirled for miles by the same agency, to fall in showers when and where the force of the wind abated.

REAL KINGS AND QUEENS ON KAISER'S PLAYING CARDS

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

BERLIN, April 26.—The German Emperor has designed new packs of playing cards for use in the royal palaces. The Queens represent Queen Mary of England, Elena of Italy, the Kaiserin, and the Tsarina, and the four Kings, King George, King Victor, the Czar, and the Kaiser. The four aces are represented by four of the most beautiful actresses in Europe, while the four knaves bear a striking likeness to four well-known diplomats.

Coming of St. Louis Woman as Chief Hostess at Jefferson Barracks Expected to Revive Former Intimacy Between City and Military Circle.

By MRS. FRANCES CABANNE SCOVEL.

THE coming of the new Commandant, Col Adam Slaker, and Mrs. Slaker, to Jefferson Barracks, will revive the delightful intimacy between the garrison and the town, which has been rather languid for the past few years—not that there have not been charming people down there, but because Mrs. Slaker is a St. Louis woman. She lived her girlhood here and has a great many old friends who will think nothing of the distance and will go to the barracks for teas and hops as eagerly as they go to the Country Club.

The "Officers and Ladies" of the post will give them a big ball Friday evening, which will be a very brilliant affair, to which many townspeople will go.

It will be given at the Administration Building and as is always the case, the decorations will be in flags, side arms and all the lovely military things that make army parties so attractive.

Then—this is a secret, of course—all the quarters in the post will furnish rugs and lamps and draperies to make the cold, business-like rooms like a huge house.

Col. and Mrs. Slaker have been at the Jefferson Hotel waiting until their quarters were ready for them and last week went down to occupy them.

Mrs. Slaker was formerly Miss Ada Sprig and lived around Fourth and Olive streets when Miss Emilie Maffitt, whose contemporary she was, lived where the Railway Exchange Building is.

Mrs. Chouteau Maffitt, then May Skinker; the late Mrs. Julius S. Walsh, who was then the beautiful Josephine Dickson; Julia Goode, now Mrs. S. Carr Cabanne; Mrs. Edgar C. Lackland, then Elsie Kayser, and Julia Semple, Mrs. Ashley D. Scott, were the girls of her day—not so many years ago, either.

Besides, there are several other army women—St. Louisans—who are in town just now who will help make things interesting socially.

Mrs. Stanley, whose husband, Col. David S. Stanley, is depot quartermaster and who was Jane Fordyce; Mrs. James B. Ewing, who has just returned from Manila with her two daughters: Mrs. Ned Rehkopf and Miss Henrietta Erwin, leaving Maj. Erwin over there to finish his tour in "the islands," which is almost ended. Mrs. Erwin and Mrs. Rehkopf are at the Westmoreland and Miss Erwin is visiting another sister, Mrs. Edward J. Walsh.

Mrs. William H. Johnson and her daughter, Miss Lucille Johnston, wife and daughter of Col. Johnston, who is now with the "border" army at Galveston, are also here, and Mrs. Jane Adger Izard, the daughter of Gen. William P. Biddle, commandant of the United States Marine Corps, and Mrs. Biddle of Washington, D. C., is living here temporarily and has an apartment at 5305 Delmar boulevard. At present she is visiting in Washington and will return the first week in May.

The little group of officers and their wives, have such a good time among themselves that it isn't surprising that they don't come to town except for something awfully worth while. They have roller skating parties and suppers afterwards, informal hops and tennis. There are band concerts and dress parades, luncheons, dinners and bridge.

Just now there is an unusual number of attractive young married women at the garrison, among whom are Mrs. John R. Starkey, who was Miss Anne Kress until last December, and Mrs. Henry C. Pillsbury, formerly Miss Janet Wood, daughter of the former Commander, and Mrs. William T. Wood, who was married last summer; Mrs. James M. Holmes, Lieut. Holmes' wife; Mrs. Reuben C. Taylor, who was Miss Katherine Kauffman of St. Louis; Mrs. Frances Burr, Mrs. J. B. Wilson and Mrs. Griffith, Col. Tom Griffith's wife.

There is but one girl in the post, Miss Nolan, Capt. and Mrs. Farmer's daughter.

Miss Aline Griffith is still a school girl at the Sacred Heart Convent and can't be included.

There are three bachelor officers, Capt. G. E. Houle, Capt. James Hanson and Capt. Lofax. Lieut. W. W. Merrill doesn't count, because he is engaged to Miss Mary Haldeman of Cincinnati and will be married June 1.

So with Mrs. Slaker in command, socially, and the other St. Louis women at the garrison, the girls who stay at home this summer will doubtless add more gayety to their already long list, for the summer girls in St. Louis have a wonderfully good time.

Miss Henrietta Erwin's engagement to Lieut. Richard Hill, U. S. Navy, which was announced Friday, was indeed a surprise. The rumor of her engagement preceded her from the Philippines two weeks ago, but no one dreamed that the man of her choice was a naval officer when she is the daughter of an army officer, was reared in the army, and for the last two years—since her debut—she has been in Manila in the midst of the army, where she met her fiance.

She is the third daughter of Maj. James B. Erwin, known at West Point and in the service as "Beauty" Erwin, and Mrs. Erwin, who was formerly Miss Isabel Doan of St. Louis.

The wedding will be in November. Lieut. Hill is now stationed at Annapolis. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1907.

This week will be marked by a military wedding, that of Miss Marguerite Dickson Stevenson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Stevenson, and Lieut. Gilbert Penfield Strelinger, which will take place Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, at the home of the bride. It was to have been a large wedding, with several bridemaids and groomsmen, but Mr. Strelinger's regiment, the Twenty-eighth Infantry, is on the Mexican border and could not get "leave," so his brother, Selph Strelinger of Detroit, will be his only groomsman and Miss Stevenson's sister, Mrs. Burt Champion, will be matron of honor.

Only a few guests will be present at the ceremony, and afterward there will be a small reception.

After their wedding tour, Lieut. Strelinger will take his bride to his temporary station at Galveston, Tex., and later to Fort Snelling.

Maj. Otho W. B. Farr, U. S. A., and Mrs. Farr departed yesterday at noon for New York, whence they will sail Tuesday on the Koenig Albert for Europe.

Mrs. Farr has been the guest of Col. and Mrs. Tom Griffith at the Barracks for the past week and was joined Friday by Maj. Farr.

They will be gone four months and will stop here on their return for a visit before going to Fort Sill, Ok., where Maj. Farr has been stationed.

Beginning Monday, 20 per cent discount sale on all kid gloves, Steinberg's.

There is a funny story going around about the luncheon that Mrs. Joseph G. Holliday gave, or intended giving, for the Thomas-McCandless bridal party, of which her daughter, Miss Florence, was one.

It was to have been the day of the wedding and in order to get everybody out of the house—the McCandless' house—and leave it in the hands of decorators and caterers for the evening, the hostess-that-was-to-have-been, chose a place way out in the county that is famous for its food and the objective of many summer evening motor parties.

The luncheon was ordered and the bridemaids and groomsmen, Misses Mararetta and Ruth McCandless, Misses Florence Holliday, Emily Riddle and Kathleen Lytle, and Harold Walker, Ralph H. Doane and David Witmer of Boston, William McCandless and Dr. Lee Dorset of St. Louis and Woodruff Isbell of New York, started for the country in two big motor cars.

It was last Monday. The day was lovely and all went well for a long time—but they couldn't find the place. They roamed all over the county—and the next one, too—then some—and finally about 5 o'clock they returned to town, having had nothing to eat but some bread and milk purchased at a little farm house. They were almost starved and very tired and all the time their perfectly good luncheon was getting colder and colder.

The prospective bride, Miss Alice McCandless, stayed at home to rest and the bridegroom, John Pickering Thomas Jr., of course, didn't want to go if she didn't. The marriage, one of the most notable of the season, was solemnized at the Central Presbyterian Church. It was the culmination of a love affair that started when they two were children at South Harpwell, Me., where both families have summer homes.

The engagement was announced a year ago last December, when Mr. Thomas came out to be one of the groomsmen for Arthur Hannewell Shaw and Miss McCandless was one of Miss Acrata von Schrader's bridemaids.

Mrs. Thomas was here for her son's wedding. He was graduated from Harvard in 1911 and his groomsmen from Boston were classmates.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William A. McCandless and made her debut only a few weeks before her engagement was announced.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas will make their home in Boston.

Mrs. Henry Koehler has been ill at a sanitarium in Paradise Valley, Cal., ever since she arrived in the West.

She was here in the late winter for a brief stay to have her eyes attended to after she was hit twice in the same by first a bean bag on board ship on the way to Panama and then by a polo ball that was driven out of the field while she watched the game.

When finally her eyes—or rather eye—was all right again, and she started out to make a round of visits in her old home, she collapsed with nervous prostration. A rest cure was ordered and she has not been permitted to write until recently, when word has come that her health is much improved and she will soon be well and will come here before going to her camp on the Tenderfoot Lake in the wilds of Wisconsin.

L. Pelusi, ladies' tailor. Special prices this week. 24 Marina Bldg., Grand and Lindell.

Mrs. Alvin Mellier, of 4903 Berlin avenue, and her daughter, Miss Marguerite Mellier, are visiting Mrs. Mellier's daughter, Mrs. Allan B. Pendleton, and Mr. Pendleton, at Richmond Plantation, Alexandria, La.

Miss Bella Wells landed at New York on the Mauritania last week, after a trip around the world, and is expected to come on the latter part of May to visit her brother, Rolla Wells, and Mrs. Wells.

Miss Wells has made her home in Washington for several years, where her niece, Miss Jane Wells, has visited her.

Mrs. J. Author Anderson, of Normandy, has returned from a month's trip through California.

Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Laughlin will move into their new home at Lock-lin early in May.

Mrs. Ella Haynes Laughlin, Mrs. Laughlin's mother, who has had an apartment in the Kenmore since her return from Europe, will make her home with them.

Beginning Monday, 20 per cent discount sale on all kid gloves, Steinberg's.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Jacobs of 5266 Washington boulevard announce the engagement of their son, Selwyn Jacobs, to Miss Florence Hiller of Omaha, Neb. Mrs. Jacobs will depart for Omaha this week to be present at the reception May 4, which the bride-elect's parents will give in honor of the event.

Dolly Varden and Pannier Hats as worn at the Roosevelt wedding, also first showing of summer millinery, Monday, April 28th. D. M. Strauss, milliner, 3832 Olive street.

William L. Behan has just returned from Shreveport, La., where his engagement to Miss Georgia Stringfellow of that place was announced. The wedding will be in June. Mr. Behan lives at the Lodge, the new bachelor apartment house on Etzel and Belt avenues.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Knapp have moved to the Buckingham Hotel. They sold their home at 4943 Maryland place to Mr. and Mrs. Auguste Chouteau, who will take possession in about two weeks.

Mrs. Arthur C. Garrison of 5240 Westminster place and her father-in-law, D. E. Garrison, returned several days ago from a cruise of the West Indies and Panama. While in Havana they were guests of Col. and Mrs. Herbert Slocum. Maj. Stephan L. H. Slocum and Mrs. Slocum, who was formerly Miss Luna Garrison of St. Louis, were there at the same time. Col. Slocum is military attache to the American legation at Havana.

Mrs. Louis Chauvenet gave a reception yesterday afternoon from 4 to 6 at her residence in Westmoreland place in honor of her niece, Miss Eleanor Whitner Allen of Boston. The decorations were spring flowers and fruit blossoms.

Those who served were Mrs. Thomas H. West Jr., Mrs. Charles Parsons Pettus, Mrs. Daniel K. Catlin and Mrs. Grace Semple.

The bridge party Friday afternoon at the Bogy Club for the benefit of the country department of the Children's Hospital was one of the smartest social events, as well as one of the most successful charity entertainments this year.

It was a happy thought to have it at this time of the year and in the country, and in spite of tthe showers there were nearly 200 women there.

They "made up" their tables before going out, so that each table was a separate little party.

Mmes. James H. Wear, W. Griffith McRee, Ralph Simpkins and Miss Louise Simpkins had it in charge.

Mrs. Joseph Gilman Miller won the first prize, Mrs. Charles W. Scudder second, and Mrs. Otto Mersman third.

They played in thee palm room and the big living room of the club.

There will be a "Colonial May day rout" at the parish house of the Church

NEMO CORSETS

PRESERVE YOUR FIGURE AND GUARD YOUR HEALTH

The one way to retain your good looks is to PRESERVE YOUR HEALTH.

A sure way to lose your good looks, your health and your happiness, is to wear a corset that is unscientific—ill-fitting and flappy.

There are plenty of them!

If you want the "corsetless figure," you must wear a corset—one with firm, fine lines. A flimsy waist or a "boneless" corset may be "easy;" but it will surely give you a sloppy, shapeless figure—permanently.

Common sense tells you that you can't reduce your hips without wearing a firm corset; and if that corset is rigid and unyielding, you are simply bidding for ill-health and bad looks.

The NEMO is the ONLY corset that can reduce your hips sufficiently to give you the proper silhouette for the "corsetless figure" without imperiling your health and looks.

The reason? Here's the answer! LASTIKOPS WEBBING and LASTIKOPS CLOTH—gores, gussets and bands of these new semi-elastic fabrics, original Nemo inventions, patented and used ONLY in our corsets.

$4.00 No 409

These are the only DURABLE elastic fabrics in existence. They have changed the whole idea of corset-making.

For example, Model 506, pictured above. Four skirt-gores of Lastikops Cloth (two on each side of the extremely long skirt), and the In-Curve Back of Lastikops Webbing. Note how this corset shapes itself to the figure; and it can't ride up, nor "bind." When you sit down, the skirt spreads easily—you're comfortable. Greatest reducing corset ever made, for all figures from medium to extra-stout. Low or medium bust—$5.00.

No. 409 has the new "Limshaping" feature—broad bands of Lastikops Webbing over the very long skirt. Low bust—$4.00.

Nemo Corsets are sold everywhere. Most dealers will show them to you gladly; others, for some reason, only when you insist. BE A WISE WOMAN! INSIST! Accept no substitute.

How to be Beautiful

Secrets of Health and Beauty

by Claire Ainsworth

NOTE—If the reader does not find the information wanted in the questions answered below, just address a letter to Miss Claire Ainsworth, 40 Patterson Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope, and she will gladly advise on health and beauty problems. Miss Ainsworth is noted for her marvelous beauty, as well as famous as a talented concert singer, and artists the world over rave at her beauty and have sought her for their masterpieces. She frankly admits that hers is a cultivated, but natural beauty—and no "make-up" is ever used. The articles and preparations mentioned are on sale by all wholesale druggists, large retail and department stores; or any accommodating dealer can obtain them for you.

Letters which I daily receive from girls and women indicate that my advice is appreciated and really wonderful transformations are made by the creams, emollients and toilet necessities which I have recommended. Many who have been indifferent are beginning to see the wisdom of aiding nature and caring for the skin and hair. It is a duty every woman owes to herself—to keep young and beautiful. I wish to thank my many friends for their kind words, as it is impossible to reply to each one separately.

Millicent asks: "I am 18 years old and healthy, but my face, hands and arms are anything but pretty. My skin is dark, sallow and unhealthy looking. What shall I do?"

Answer: I will answer in such a manner that others may benefit by my advice. I do not advise the use of paint—do not "make up." You deceive no one but yourself. You lose the respect of all who see you. Study and work to possess a beautiful, natural complexion—few women have, and those few are the ones who take regular care and use the right methods.

First, discontinue using toilet soap to cleanse the face, hands and hair. Use a saponified vegetable oil called gloriol glowene, obtainable in sealed tubes. Use it as a "water massage" and you will be gratified by its wonderful cleansing and softening effect on the hair and skin.

Each night before retiring use the "water massage" and follow it with a thorough patting and rotary massage, using gloriol emollient, which is a skin and flesh food unequaled for producing beautiful plumpness and color. Apply on face, hands and arms according to directions which accompany each jar.

The morning toilet should be made by bathing the eyes only with cold water. Then apply the vanishing gloriol balm and again massage until it is all absorbed. This is very fragrant, cooling and pleasant to use, and a fresh application should be made at any time before going out into the weather. Rice powder may be used lightly to deaden the shine, if any.

The foregoing is a scientific treatment which will in a short time transform an ordinary face into one of beauty—beauty of color, beauty of plumpness and beauty of health. A pamphlet to be found in the packages gives much advice which I thoroughly endorse.

Mrs. T. B. writes: "I wish you would be kind enough to give me the formula for a good home-made hair tonic. I am losing my hair and it looks dull. My scalp itches all the time."

Answer: I have many times advised the use of concentrated hairwand powder. Simply get one-half ounce powdered hairwand in a sealed package. Empty into a pint bottle. Fill the bottle with soft, pure water, shake well and apply with the tips of the fingers, thoroughly massaging the scalp. Also dampen the hair with it and you will soon note a most beautiful change. Avoid anything containing alcohol.

Alice M. asks: "Do you think it safe to take something to reduce obesity? If so, what is best to use?"

Answer: Very beneficial results are obtained by many of my friends who have used 5-grain phy-thyrin tablets, which are sold by most pharmacies in sealed tubes. Physicians of my acquaintance commend these tablets, and I believe them to be the best reduction remedy extant. Be careful of your diet, and take vigorous exercise if you do not wish to take medicine.

Madam X asks: "Please recommend something to take off or destroy superfluous hair. I have a small patch on my chin and it is very embarrassing."

Answer: I advise you to obtain a sealed vial of fluvol powder. It is harmless and full directions come with it. It acts instantly and destroys the hair without harming the skin.

C. W. D. writes: "I am vain enough to want to improve my appearance by filling out the hollows in my neck and shoulders. Also would appreciate advice on how to round the bust and arms."

Answer: Dismiss the thought that you are vain. It is the duty of every girl and woman to always appear at her best. A regular massage with medicated venosol each night according to directions, which are to be found in each tube, will soon fill the hollow places and round out the bust and arms to normal. Use the patting and rotary massage movements. Many actresses and society women endorse this treatment.

Dora asks: "How can one rid the face of redness spots, pimples and dark pores? Sometimes the pimples are quite large."

Answer: The best and surest method is to treat the blood for its impurities by taking 1-grain tablets quinoxide, which may be obtained at most any well-stocked pharmacy. These tablets have a purifying and whitening effect on the skin and are perfectly safe to use according to directions in each tube. Massage the face with gloriol emollient each night.

Mrs. D. B. asks: "What can I do to keep my hair up? In spite of my care it comes down in short, ugly strands all about my face and neck."

Answer: Try using gloriol wavelene. I use it regularly, as do many of my correspondents. It keeps the hair in curl or wave for days at a time and is said by many to promote a natural curl and wave if repeatedly used.

Geo. D. asks: "My wife and I are afflicted with dandruff, itching scalp and falling out of hair. We have tried various remedies in vain. Will you kindly tell us what to use?"

Answer: Dandruff and itching scalp are due to disease germs and defective circulation, and this in turn causes the hair to die and fall or comb out. Use plain yellow minyol to massage the scalp once or twice a week, and in less than a month you should have no more trouble. To prevent a return use the hairwand tonic advised for "Mrs. T. B." in these columns.

Mabel S. asks: "My eyebrows are so thin and light that the expression of my face is spoiled. I dislike to darken them artificially. Can you recommend a treatment to increase their growth and color?"

Answer: The eyebrows can be greatly stimulated and in time darkened by applying a home-made balm every night before retiring. Obtain one-half oz. concentrated hairwand powder, use a level teaspoonful and thoroughly mix it with one ounce of mutton tallow or white vaseline. Apply to the eyebrows and rub vigorously a few moments. Wash off the following morning. If used regularly this never fails to produce results.—ADVERTISEMENT.

LAST SUNDAY OF THE GERMAN ART EXHIBITION

Four Hundred Canvases by Fatherland Leaders Will Be Shipped This Week.

This will be the last Sunday view of the exhibition of the graphic art of Germany at the City Art Museum, Forest Park. The 400 examples of modern German expression will be shipped from the city this week.

The collection has attracted much attention, not only in art circles, but among all persons who are interested in the achievements of Germany. Two lectures have been given on the exhibition and many artists and students have studied the technical methods of these contemporary Germans.

The exhibits by the three great figures in the present-day art of the Fatherland, Max Liebermann, Hans Thoma and Max Klinger would have made a notable collection in themselves. The scathing portrayals of the peasant rebellion and their lives by Kitho Kollwitz made a deep impression. Such accomplished decorative artists as Walter Klemm, such draughtsmen as Ludwig von Hofmann, and indeed this whole group of sincere German artists are apostles of a living art and have something to say in their work that appeals to the normal spectator as well as the artist.

EXPERT TELLS WHAT ARE BEST TREES TO PLANT

Dr. Moore, in Shaw's Garden Bulletin, Advises St. Louisans to Beautify Homes.

St. Louisans are urged to beautify the sidewalks in front of their homes and their front and side yards by planting trees, in an article on "Trees and Their Care," by Dr. George T. Moore in the April bulletin of Shaw's Garden, published yesterday.

The article gives advice as to the most desirable trees to plant, how to care for them and how to eliminate the various diseases and insects which destroy trees.

The sycamore, red and scarlet oaks, Norway sugar maple, tulip and white ash are deemed by Dr. Moore to be the most desirable trees to plant, and he advises against the cultivation of the soft maple, Carolina poplar and elm.

Oriental Sycamore Preferred.

He prefers the Oriental sycamore to all other trees as a shade tree, and regards it as even more desirable for that purpose than the American sycamore.

The American sycamore is hardy and vigorous, but sheds its leaves so profusely that it is objectionable for that reason alone. The Oriental variety, however, does not shed so steadily and is just as hardy and vigorous as its American cousin. The Oriental sycamore also is preferred because it grows rapidly and withstands the smoky atmosphere of the city, is virtually free from destructive diseases and gives a dense shade.

The red and scarlet oaks, Norway sugar maple, tulip and ash are acceptable as shade trees because, while they grow slowly, they make a permanent improvement, and are long-lived.

The soft maple grows rapidly and may be pruned to any form or shape, but is not desirable as a shade tree because it is subject to attacks of wood insects, and its branches are not strong enough to withstand heavy storms. The elm suffers severely in hot weather, and is subject to bark diseases.

Dr. Moore calls attention to the fact that the city code requires that a permit must be obtained from the office of the City Forester before a tree may be planted on the sidewalk.

How City Cares for Trees.

The City Forester last year cared for 33,828 trees on selected streets, handled 63,023, aside from spraying, and sprayed 4749. This service is performed by the city free of cost to the householder.

The article also gives advice as to the handling of trees in transit and cautions against permitting the roots to become exposed to wind, storm or the sun, and admonishes that there should be only a short interval between digging up and resetting.

GARDEN SAGE DARKENS GRAY HAIR SO NATURALLY NOBODY CAN TELL

The beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. While it is a mussy, tedious task it well repays those whose hair is turning gray, faded and streaked.

Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks dry, wispy and scraggly just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred fold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic; you can get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and luster of your hair and is the best thing known to remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody chooses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time which requires but a few moments. Do this at night and by morning the gray hair has disappeared and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant. It certainly helps folks look years younger and twice as attractive, says a well-known downtown druggist.—ADV.

BUST DEVELOPED ONE OUNCE A DAY

A New Simple Easy Home Method That Gives Quick and Permanent Success

Judge from my picture as to the truth of what I say to you—that the crowning feminine attribute is a bust of beautiful proportions, firmness and exquisite development. Then ask yourself how much you would like to have such a photograph of yourself, showing the glory of womanhood with its lines of infinite charm and grace. It would be worth far more than a two-cent stamp, would it not? Then let me give you my message—let me tell you of what I have learned and let me give you recent pictures of myself to prove what I say—for if you will write me today

I Will Tell You How—FREE

I will tell you gladly and willingly. Why should any woman neglect an opportunity to escape the pain and heartache of being skinny, scrawny, angular and unattractive in body? Misery is not our heritage. Nature planned that you—a woman—should have the rich, pulsing lines of warm, living flesh molded after the mother of us all, the description of whom perfumes our sacred literature with love and admiration for the divinity of woman's form. For why should there be that pitiful aspect—the face of a woman and the form of a man.

Write to Me Today

I don't care how fallen, or flaccid, or undeveloped your bust now is—I want to tell you of a simple home method—I want to tell you how you can gain perfect development one ounce a day. No physical culture—no massage, foolish baths or paste—no plasters, masks or injurious injections—I want to tell you of an absolutely new method, never before offered or told about—insuring immediate success and permanent beauty.

Send No Money

Just write me a letter—address it to me personally—that's all. I will answer it by return mail—and you can develop your bust one ounce a day—you can be what you want to be. Believe me when I say that you will bless me through years of happiness for pointing the way to you and telling you what I know. Please send your letter today to the following address:

NEW YORK OPERA SEASON BEST IN CITY'S HISTORY

Covered Total Period of 23 Weeks, During Which 154 Successful Performances Were Given, 36 Operas in All Being Presented.

By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS.

DURING the fortnight just ended the Metropolitan Opera House in New York City reached the close of its season of 1912-1913, "Aida" being the final offering of the most successful operatic year known in the history of the American metropolis.

The season also covered the longest time-period yet devoted to grand opera in New York, a total of 23 weeks establishing this new record. There were 154 operatic performances given, 36 operas in all being presented. "The Magic Flute" and "I Pagliacci" seemed to lead in favor, each having been performed nine times. "Madama Butterfly" scored eight performances; "Tales of Hoffmann," seven; "La Boheme," "Die Walkuere," "Tannhauser" and "Koenigskinder," six each; "Aida," "La Tosca," "Manon Lescaut," "La Gioconda," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Les Huguenots," "Tristan und Isolde," "Die Meistersinger," "Manon" and "Cyrano"—Walter Damrosch's new opera—five each; "Il Trovatore," "The Girl of the Golden West," "The Secret of Suzanne," "Boris Godounoff," "Goetterdammerung," "Haensel und Gretel" and "Faust," four each; "La Traviata," "Otello," "Le Donne Curiose," "Il Barbiere di Siviglia," "Lohengrin" and "Parsifal," three each; "Orfeo et Euridice," "Don Pasquale" and "Siegfried," two each, and "Rigoletto" and "Das Rheingold," one each.

So satisfactory is the year's showing that Managing Director Gatti-Casazza already announces that the next season will be of the same length. It is not at all unlikely that a full half-year of grand opera at the Metropolitan will be the established order in the near future.

At this same time, too, the City Club of New York, acting with the hearty cooperation of the Metropolitan management, is completing its plans for a 35-weeks' season of grand opera at cheap prices, the Century, formerly the New Theater, being the chosen home of this movement.

[illegible] plans are promiseful of very ad[illegible] opera indeed. During eight [illegible] early fall, preceding the [illegible] the Metropolitan season, and [illegible]ks in the late spring, follow[illegible]ose, many minor stars of the Metropolitan company, together with its entire chorus, a part of its orchestra, also its scenery and costumes, will be utilized in the popular-price productions. From November until April, covering the period of the Metropolitan's own season, grand opera in English will be presented by a capable company under the direction of Milton and Sargent Aborn, who, until now, have made their productions elsewhere than in New York. It is confidently believed that this long season of opera at popular prices will develop into a big success, and it is felt that, instead of diminishing the attendance at the Metropolitan, the cheaper Century offerings will serve as a "feeder" to that great institution by encouraging a love of opera in the hearts of the people.

At all events, the promise of the coming year in New York is that "the nights shall be filled with music" to a degree heretofore unknown in that great and busy city. It is a pleasing sign of the times for thoughtful folk to contemplate.

On Monday evening of this past week, with the Metropolitan season closed, that of the Royal Opera at Covent Garden in London had its notable opening, accompanied by confident predictions that it is destined to develop into the most brilliant ever known in the British capital.

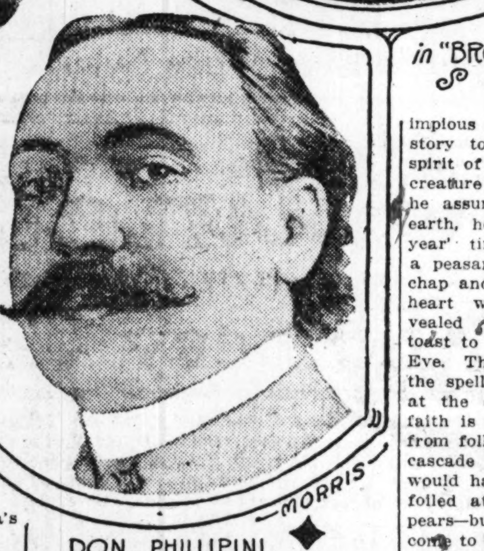
Wagner's "Tannhauser" was the initial offering before a distinguished audience of which the Duke of Connaught and his wife "Princess Pat," were the central figures. The title role was admirably sung by Heinrich Hensel, one of the greatest of Wagnerian tenors, whose splendid performance, logically enough, gave him the lion's share of the evening's honors. Very nearly abreast of his achievement, however, was that of Frau Petzl Perard as Elizabeth, her performance being acclaimed as of the very highest distinction. Fraulein Keppel sang the part of Venus with memorable beauty of tone and dramatic effectiveness, and other principals in the first-night cast are said to have been finely worthy of their environment. The audience was vastly enthusiastic and the London music critics concede that the enthusiasm was amply deserved.

It is announced that Caruso has been engaged for later appearances during the Covent Garden season thus so auspiciously begun, receiving the sum of $2500 for each performance. Other Metropolitan stars also have signed contracts for London appearances, and, in addition, Mme. Melba is named among the great sopranos of the Royal Opera's engaging.

HEDWIG REICHER, in "CONSCIENCE," COLUMBIA.

GERTRUDE HOFFMANN in "BROADWAY to PARIS," SHUBERT....

MARION HUTCHINS in "ONE DAY," AMERICAN....



DON PHILLIPINI, DELMAR...

With the American theatrical season now in its last days, the only event of the past week to which anything like importance attaches was the premiere performance at Atlantic City of "Cooper Hoyt, Inc.," the joint "book-play" work of Frank Lord and Hugh Ford, which took place on Monday evening, with Douglas Fairbanks in the title role.

The play tells the somewhat curious story of a young man who, though a lawyer by profession, was a promoter by natural gifts, yet lacked the crowning talent necessary to carry his big schemes through to a successful culmination as money-making projects. To overcome this inherent defect in his equipment as a promoter, his friends proceed to utilize his abilities by making a corporation of him in order that he can be guided and controlled by a board of directors who will share in the profits accruing from a shrewd handling of the "big business" ideas that find birth in his fertile brain. This board "capitalizes" him by due process of law. During business hours he is known only as "Cooper Hoyt, Inc.," a sort of commercial thinking-machine, so to speak, absolutely subject to the will of his incorporators, himself a species of "goose that lays the golden eggs" which they propose to incubate into good and lawful coin of the realm. Inevitably, of course, and with a pretty little love-story interwoven in its fabric, this plot develops many diverting comedy situations, and the new play is said to have been received with much favor.

Douglas Fairbanks, who was seen in St. Louis not long ago as the title role hero of "Hawthorne of the U. S. A.," is credited with giving a finely spirited and humorous portrayal of the name-part in this new play. He was supported by a company that included Irene Fenwick, Grace Reals, Isabel Garrison, Martin Alsop, Gardner Crane, John Cumberland and others.

Since there cannot well be any braver soul, in these prosaic days, than that of a playwright who essays stage success with a poetic drama phrased in blank verse that even ventures a rhyme now and then, Miss Elizabeth G. Crane must at least be credited with courage as the author of "The Necken," which received its premiere matinee performance at the Lyceum Theater in New York on a certain afternoon not long ago.

"The Necken," it would seem, is a famous water sprite of Swedish legend, impious and malevolent of soul. In the story told by Miss Crane's play the spirit of a mortal is breathed into this creature by the power of music and he assumes human form. Coming to earth, he roams hither and yon for a year' time, and then falls in love with a peasant girl. He is an ingratiating chap and is about to win the maiden's heart when his evil nature is revealed by his refusal to drink a toast to the Holy Image on Christmas Eve. The girl is still somewhat under the spell of his weaving, but, happily, at the critical moment, her religious faith is strong enough to restrain her from following him into a pool under a cascade where, had she ventured, she would have been lost forever. And so, foiled at the last, the Necken disappears—but so deeply and truly has he come to love the girl that his now purified passion promises ultimately to redeem him and insure a future existence of spiritual bliss otherwise eternally denied.

The part of Jan, the sprite, was played by Lawrence Eyre, that of the peasant girl by Alice Newell, and the production was made under the auspices of the National Federation of Theater Clubs. The play itself, however, is said to be so tiresomely talky and defective as drama that the clever work of these two principals and a capable supporting company cannot prevail to make it a success.

The Real Secret of Rejuvenating the Face

(From The Clubwoman.)

She holds the true secret of facial rejuvenation who has learned how to remove the dead skin particles as fast as they appear. It's a secret anyone may possess. The aged, faded or discolored surface skin may be gradually absorbed, in an entirely safe and rational manner, by the nightly application of ordinary mercolized wax. Within a week or two the underlying skin, youthful and beautiful to behold, has taken the place of the discarded cuticle. So little of the old skin is absorbed each day there's no inconvenience at all, and no one suspects you are putting anything on your face. The mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store (an ounce is sufficient), is applied like cold cream. In the morning it is erased with soap and water. It's the best thing known for freckles, blackheads, pimples, moth patches, liver spots and fine surface wrinkles.

For the deeper wrinkles an excellent recipe is: Powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in ½ pt. witch hazel. Bathing the face in the solution produces quick and wonderful results.—ADV.

BIG BARNUM & BAILEY SHOW COMES NEXT WEEK

Great Circus to Present Many New and Novel Acts at Handlan Park.

The Barnum & Bailey Circus will begin a week's engagement at Handlan Park on Monday of next week. Many feature acts never before presented in this country are given prominence on the comprehensive program, and a few of last season's most successful offerings have been retained, the performance being in the main a new one of brilliant novelty.

Among the notable features announced are a gorgeous spectacular pageant telling the story of the last days of Egypt's beautiful queen, Cleopatra; a troupe of Icelandic athletes; the Royal Japanese Wrestlers; Lupita Perea, the lovely Castilian aerialist; the Schiavoni troupe of six acrobats; the Bird-Millman troupe; the Seven Avallons, in a novel high aeriac act; May Wirth, the beautiful Australian equestrienne; a great circus company of 400 European and American artists, who present the latest achievements in riding, acrobatic and aerial daring; several troupes of remarkably trained horses; an exciting baseball game, presented by the central group of the three great herds of elephants; an entirely new hippodrome, with genuine Kentucky racing stock and jockeys of international reputation, and a largely augmented zoo of rare wild beasts.

The Barnum & Bailey Circus has always been famous for its army of clowns, and this year's big show is said to surpass all previous efforts along the line of humorous people. The present clown contingent numbers 50 pantomimic artists, who present burlesques on all the live topics of the times, also many little pantomimic stories especially arranged to delight the children.

HIGHLANDS WILL OPEN NEXT SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Cavallo's Band Retained, Many Improvements Made, and High-Class Vaudeville Booked.

Forest Park Highlands, "The Big Place on the Hill," will commence its eighteenth season next Sunday afternoon, with many changes and improvements.

A new promenade and roof garden, beautifully illuminated and decorated with potted plants, has been built, connecting the main walk and the Cottage, affording additional shelter.

The old tower has been replaced by a new steel tower 120 feet in height illuminated by vari-colored lights, and surmounted by a large electric sign.

Two hundred dressing rooms have been added to the sanitary swimming pool, and other changes made, for the convenience of bathers. The pool will open as soon as the weather permits.

The Mountain Ride and Racer Dips have been remodeled and redecorated, as have all the other concessions. The merry-go-round and circle swing are awaiting the little folks.

Cavallo's band has been engaged again for the season and will give three concerts daily in the bandstand. The high-class vaudeville offerings in the theater will be continued.

MISS GOLDSTEIN'S RECITAL.

Miss Leah Lenor Goldstein will give a farewell dramatic recital, assisted by Mr. Ellis Levy, violin soloist, at the Wednesday Club Auditorium next Tuesday evening, this event immediately preceding her departure for New York to begin her stage career. The program opens with Mr. Levy's violin interpretation of Wienawski's "Souvenir de Moscow," following which Miss Goldstein will give a reading from Maeterlinck, the Belgian poet-dramatist. Then come three group numbers for violin, the Meditation from Massenet's "Thais," Kreisler's "Shon Ros Marin," and Levy's own "Moto Perpetuo," by Ellis Levy, and the program closes with another Maeterlinck reading by Miss Goldstein.

A TOPLINER SCOTTISH CHIEF.

The Maclaine, declared to be a nobleman of the Scottish Highlands, arrived in New York recently to begin an American tour in vaudeville, the proceeds of which, it is said, will be used to lift the mortgage on his ancestral estate at Lochbule, Isle of Mull. He has been appearing in the London music halls at a salary of $400 per week, and it is declared that he will receive $1000 per week during his American engagement. He is a comedian and singer.

EMILY STEVENS IN "THE CHILD."

Harrison Grey Fiske is said to have chosen Emily Stevens, cousin of Mrs. Fiske, to play the star role in "The Child," an emotional drama of which Margaret Anglin originally owned the producing rights. The play tells the story of an adopted baby palmed off by an ex-convict as his own in order to comply with the terms of a will. Emily Stevens, although quite young, has won distinction as an emotional actress.

NOW FOR DECADENT OPERA.

It is announced that Richard Strauss, the famous German composer, is to collaborate with Gabriele d'Annunzio, the Italian poet-dramatist, in making a grand opera of the latter's decadent drama, "La Cita Morte," which was originally written for Elaenora Duse's playing. The theme of the story is the unholy love of a brother for a sister. The play itself was not successful.

CHILEAN INDIAN IN VAUDEVILLE.

Chief Caupolican, said to be a full-blooded Indian of the Araucano tribe of South America, styled the Apaches of Chili, made his vaudeville debut in Newark, N. J., recently. Attired in native garb, he sings wild Indian chants, followed by songs in English, French, German and Italian. It is asserted that he has scored grand opera triumphs abroad.

DELMAR OPENS WITH DON PHILIPPINI BAND

Big Saturday Crowds Find Many Improvements Made—Today's Music Programs.

Delmar Garden, first of the parks to usher in the summer season, opened last night, well prepared for the throngs who found the big garden spick and span and in dress so new as to be hardly recognizable.

There have been extensive improvements made. The comfort of Villa patrons will be better looked after than last summer. The pavilion is roofed, which is an especial boom to the afternoon crowds, and joins the new band shell, where Don Philippini and his 50 band men made their St. Louis debut. Philippini, judging from the favor the crowds extended, will win a popularity as great as did Creatore last summer. He has a concert organization of excellent balance, and he is a skillful program builder.

Tonight Don Philippini will offer a program of special appeal to the popular tastes. Miss Suzanne Lehmann will appear as soprano soloist. The afternoon concert today will start at 3. The night program is:

March—My Friends	Philippini
Overture—William Tell	Rossini
Selection from Trovatore	Verdi
Solos by Signori Panniaciolo, Poalucci and Laviano.
Selection—The Pink Lady	Caryll
Struggle for Glory	Philippini
March—All Night Long	Strauss
Overture—La Gazza Ladra	Rossini
Soprano solo—My Hero (The Chocolate Soldier Suzanna Lehmann.
Act III from Gioconda	Ponchielli
Snooky Ookums	Berlin

It is announced that Don Philippini does not ignore ragtime, especially in his encores. He presents enough classical music to reveal the quality of his band, but not enough to conflict with the joyous summer spirit, and his programs always include a liberal sprinkling of popular hits.

NAT GOODWIN, MUSICAL COMEDIAN.

From New York comes the announcement that Nat Goodwin will appear in musical comedy next season, his vehicle being the English version of a new French success entitled "Claudine." His role is that of a singing, dancing and love-making chap in his early twenties. Margaret Moreland, for whose whim he plunged into the surf near Los Angeles last summer and suffered a broken pelvic bone, will have the title role.

AMERICANS INVADE LONDON "HALLS."

The invasion of the London music halls by American vaudeville performers has reached such proportions as to startle the British public. The Tivoli recently "featured" four Americans on one bill, the Oxford three, the Palace six; the Pavilion headed its bill with an American playlet and the Hippodrome is presenting an all-American musical revue.

HOME RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

This Homemade Mixture Darkens Gray Hair and Makes It Soft and Glossy.

To a half pint of water add:

Bay Rum	1 oz.
Barbo Compound	a small box
Glycerine	¼ oz.

These are all simple ingredients that you can buy from any druggist at very little cost, and mix them yourself. Apply to the scalp once a day for two weeks, then once every other week until all the mixture is used. A half pint should be enough to rid the head of dandruff and kill the dandruff germs. It stops the hair from falling out, relieves itching and scalp diseases.

Although it is not a dye, it acts upon the hair roots and will darken streaked, faded, gray hair in ten or fifteen days. It promotes the growth of the hair and makes harsh hair soft and glossy.—ADV.

BOND AGENT WHO KILLED SELF, IN DEBT $500,000

Mutilated Records of Theodore Tyler Indicate He First Considered Flight.

CHICAGO, April 26.—Mutilated records belonging to Theodore Tyler, a bond salesman, who shot himself after getting into debt to personal friends for more than $200,000, were discovered today, and were said to indicate that Tyler wavered between flight and self-destruction.

Whole leaves were torn from account books. Check stubs were fixed so that no clew was left as to the uses to which the checks had been put.

One of the last transactions of Tyler, it was learned, was the redemption of a sight draft for $35,000 by a payment in $1000 bills. E. W. Harden, member of a New York stock brokerage firm, received the money after making a trip to Chicago with a demand for payment of the draft.

Jacob Newman, representing some of Tyler's creditors, said suits under the anti-stock gambling law would be brought against the brokerage concerns that handled Tyler's accounts. Losses by the creditors are estimated as high as $500,000.

I Can Make Your Fat Vanish by the Gallon!

I CONQUERED OBESITY PAST MIDDLE-AGE

I Ate Everything I Liked—Went Through No Exercise—Wore No Special Clothing—Took No Weakening Baths!

I Explain My Simple, Speedy Home Treatment to You—FREE!

I, Lucile Kimball, a married woman past middle-age, attacked by obesity for years, finally conquered the fat monster. Everything you ever tried, I tried. I went through exercises, rolled on the floor, cut down my food, gave up sweets, fats and starches, wore elastic clothing, tried electricity, massage, osteopathy, vibration, hot and vapor baths, swallowed pellets, capsules and teas—gained as rapidly as I lost—and so would you with those so-called treatments.

For years, my friends have asked me to tell them how I got rid of fat and kept rid of it. They know that I eat what I want—go through no exercise other than I get around the house and office; that I am FREE from obesity, happy, healthy, supple—and look younger by fifteen years than I actually am!

I was afraid that my Home Treatment might prove temporary. I waited months. My fat did not return, and I waited years, but my fat did not come back. Still, I postponed. I tried my Home Obesity Treatment on friends. They were equally benefited—men and women of all ages. And finally I decided to reduce the obesity of fat men and women all over the world.

You have figured fat by the pound. Your "methods" and "treatments" have attacked living tissues more than fat. What did you gain? Nothing! Your fat came back the moment you stopped your exercise or diet. It did not go if you tried anything else. But my Home Treatment is not exercise or diet. I say "diet" in its broadest sense—not "starvation diet," not "excessive diet," but diet of any kind.

Eat any kind of meat, vegetables, salads, pastry, fish, fowl, nuts, candy that you want—when you want it. Drink what you want—when you want it. I don't interfere with your food or drink. No bending over, rolling, playing golf, horseback riding, doing exercise of any kind. Sit in your chair at home, or in your chair at your office—and the fat will vanish from you by the pint, quart and gallon. It goes away rapidly. It melts from your cells. You feel better—stronger. Beauty returns to women; strength to men. You never heard of anything of the kind before in your life. Everybody says, "How wonderful!" It is marvelous beyond description, and it is absolutely harmless. It is so simple, you need devote only three or four minutes each twenty-four hours to its use.

Spend Just One Penny!

All I want you to do is to get my book. This explains the harm of most methods and treatments; why exercise and diet are useless. It tells how I overcome obesity, how I conquered fat; how I rid my friends of fat; how you can be free from the grip of the fat fiend. I know that you want the way pointed out for you, showing how you can reduce fat right in your own home, boarding house, while traveling or visiting. Don't wait. This book costs you nothing. It tells the how and why, and your name should be among the first to reach me. I pledge secrecy and a prompt response. This is the key to successful, rapid fat reduction. Write today—Now! Hurry your request—this moment! If you have been disappointed before, this time you will be satisfied. Write in a letter or on a postcard, "Please send Free Book showing how I can reduce my obesity at home." Sign your name and address. You are not obliged in any way. Get your request in now.

3 BRIGHT HOPES IN POST-DISPATCH LEAGUE DEFEATED

Bryan Hill, Cote Brilliante and Arlington Win Over 1912 High-Raters.

Yesterday's Scores in Post-Dispatch League

Monroe	3	Cote Brilliante	15
Humboldt	2	Penrose	14
Washington	24	Franklin	9
Clark	6	Webster	0
Hodgen	15	Bryan Hill	4
Clinton	8	Ashland	3
Marshall	13	Rock Springs	12
Farragut	11	Lincoln	2
Madison	13	Lafayette	13
Shepard	1	Pestalozzi	11
Marquette	24	Ames	7
Field	8	Jackson	6
Sigel	12	Arlington	9
Sherman	8	Emerson	8

Three bright hopes for the 1913 championship in the Post-Dispatch Public School Baseball League went down to defeat in the second series of games played yesterday before large crowds in all parts of the city.

One run decided each of these three games. The champion Ashlands, winners of last year's pennant, were defeated by Bryan Hill, 4 to 3. Penrose, former champions, lost to Cote Brilliante in an 11-inning game by a score of 15 to 14. Emerson, a team that fought Ashland to a standstill last year, was defeated by Arlington, 9 to 8.

The Post-Dispatch Public Baseball League is now in its seventh year, and has become an institution that is an annual delight to the thousands of school children and their parents and teachers. The League was begun in 1907 with 36 teams. This year there are 39 teams in the race for the division championships, and eight other public school teams that formerly were in the race are organized and playing. Though these eight teams are not this year competing for the division championships, they make a total of 45 public school teams organized originally through the efforts of the Post-Dispatch.

Fair Play Wins Admiration.

The games yesterday attracted wide attention in every school district. Pupils, parents and teachers attended by the hundreds and rooted enthusiastically for their respective teams. The fair play and true sportsmanship of the boys actively engaged in the games won the admiration of the spectators. In only a comparatively few instances, in all the games played, was any disposition shown to take unfair advantage.

Real baseball is played by the boys. This fact they demonstrate so conclusively each Saturday that hundreds of persons now go to the games weekly who have no other interest than a love of good sport. Two of the strong teams have been requested to play an exhibition game at the Hebrew Charity Society's picnic at Normandy Grove, May 25. A silver loving cup is to be given as a prize.

Dr. Charles E. Witter, principal of the Bryan Hill School, rooted ardently for his boys in the game against the champion Ashlands at the old Fair Grounds yesterday. He had the delight of seeing his boys upset expectations and win by the close score of 4 to 3, in a hard-fought contest featured by many hair-raising plays. There was some fine pitching by both Klug of Bryan Hill and Ratican of Ashland, with heavy hitting and good base running by William Harrihill of Bryan Hill.

Egan Wins for Arlington.

In the Arlington-Emerson game, with three men on bases in the ninth inning, Thomas Egan, the Arlington pitcher, struck out the next three batters. Norman Kinsman of Arlington also helped his team win by some timely hitting.

Ames won a good game from Jackson, 7 to 6. Jackson tied it up with two runs in its half of the ninth and then Ames won it with one run in its half. Ames made a triple play in this game.

At the conclusion of the Hodgen-Clinton game on the grounds at Grand and Park avenues, the players and spectators gave chase to a stranger who was trying to get away with some of their bats and gloves. A policeman caught the would-be thief in the cellar of a house where he had taken refuge, but the boys insisted that he be let go when he returned their property.

Washington defeated Clark in a one-sided contest, 24 to 6. There was some heavy hitting by Reily, Weisman and Hartley of Washington.

Sigel won from Sherman, mainly through the good pitching of Capt. Blades. McDonald the little Sherman catcher, played a star game. Blades and Schleichter did the heavy hitting for Sigel.

Marquette defeated Field, 24 to 8. George Meissonin, Earl Longworth and Carl Keithley were the batting and fielding stars for Marquette. Brockschmitt, Wilson and Long also did some heavy hitting.

Madison's Hard Hitters.

Madison overwhelmed the strong Shepard team, 20 to 1. A. Brock of Madison stole home in the second inning when the score was a tie. Shepard held Madison for four innings, putting up a very fine game, and then went to pieces. The whole Madison team figured in the hitmaking.

Otto Fink, Monroe pitcher, was mainly responsible for his team's victory over Humboldt, 3 to 2. He allowed only four hits.

Arthur Sippel and Oliver Shipske of Lafayette got home runs in the game which their team won from Pestalozzi.

Lecture on Great Pyramid.

"The Great Pyramid" will be the subject of a lecture by J. A. Gillespie at the Odeon this afternoon at 3 o'clock under the auspices of the International Bible Students' Association.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

GONE FROM HOME 10 DAYS

Relatives yesterday asked the police to look for August Becker, 45 years old, of 1432 Sullivan avenue, who has been missing from his home since April 16. He has a wife and three children, who have fallen into difficult circumstances since his disappearance.

Becker was employed at the Commonwealth Steel Co.'s plant in Granite City, and left home as usual to go to work. He seemed in good spirits, according to his family, who can give no reason for his departure. He did not report at the factory.

SUFFRAGETTES, IN NEW OUTBREAK, SET FIRE TO A TRAIN

Oil Was Poured Over Seats of Cars in Preparation for Quick Destruction.

RECALL MRS. PANKHURST

Hunger Strike Martyr Must Return to Jail Monday—Miss Emerson in Seclusion.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1912, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World.)

LONDON, April 26.—Setting fire to a railroad train is the latest act of the "arson squad" of the militant suffragettes. Three compartments of an empty London & Southwestern train, standing on a siding at Teddington station, were discovered on fire early today, and though the flames were easily extinguished the authorities are again alarmed. No arrests were made.

In one of the cars was found a woman's cloak and near the cloak were a quantity of cards addressed to members of Parliament, with customary suffrage messages, and other suffrage literature.

Oil had been poured over the seats and floors of the cars and it was apparent that the women had been frightened away before they had a chance to fire all cars.

Mrs. Pankhurst must return to Holloway Jail Monday, when her license expires. The Post-Dispatch was informed today at suffragette headquarters that she will not surrender, but must be rearrested. It was stated that she is still too unwell to be reimprisoned with safety.

Fear Plot to Escape.

Until Thursday she was in a hospital at Bayswater, but was then removed to the residence of Mrs. Ayrton, an eminent scientist and one of the most munificent contributors to militant funds. The police guard which has been on duty outside the hospital day and night since Mrs. Pankhurst was taken there, followed her to Mrs. Ayrton's house, which is difficult to guard because it has a private entrance into the mews at the rear. The police are very nervous, believing that there is some plot to spirit Mrs. Pankhurst away.

Zelie Emerson, the American girl whose mother came over to petition Home Secretary McKenna to release her daughter, has gone with her mother to the Isle of Wight, where she is recuperating from the effects of her hunger strike. Mrs. Emerson has stopped all communication between the militants and her daughter, and is determined that the latter shall not again get into trouble.

Old Law Is Invoked.

Miss Annie Kenney, Mrs. Pankhurst's chief of staff, was arraigned today in Bow Street Police Court on a charge of being a disturber of the peace. The prosecutor explained that she had done nothing for which she could be severely punished and the Government, in arresting her, was taking preventive measures.

"I wanted to stop her," he said, "from making inflammatory speeches and to do this, the authorities dug up an old statute enacted during the reign of Edward III."

Under this statute the maximum penalty she can receive is six months' imprisonment. Mrs. "General" Drummond and George Lansbury were arraigned with her and all three brought their grips to court, indicating that they expected a conviction. The court was crowded and there was much disorder.

Mrs. Mary Ford of New York today denied the charges made against her at the first "court martial" of the suffrage army, which yesterday pronounced her guilty of treason to the organization. It was intimated at the trial that some of the members of the woman's organization were looked upon as spies.

LOCAL COMPOSITIONS WILL FEATURE RECITAL

Fine Program of Organ Music Will Be Given by George Enzinger.

The works of St. Louis composers will be featured in the organ recital to be given by George Enzinger this afternoon under the auspices of the American Guild of Organists. Carl Wilhelm Kern and Ernest R. Kroeger are the St. Louis composers whose compositions will feature the recital.

Enzinger will be assisted by Miss Lily H. Tiedemann, soprano. Among her selections will be two songs from the new song cycle, "Meer Lieder" (Book II), the words of which were written by Dr. Pedro Ilgen of St. Louis. This will be the first public rendition of these songs.

Enzinger's organ numbers will be divided into three groups, the first group being illustrations from the German school, the second group from the French school, and the third the works of American composers. The recital will be given at the Evangelical Protestant Church of the Holy Ghost. It will start at 3 o'clock.

REFRIGERATORS

Seeks Vindication by Law.

Gustav L. Dahlberg applied in the Circuit Court yesterday for a writ of mandamus against the Swedish National Society of St. Louis seeking reinstatement as a member of the organization. He formerly was its treasurer and asserts he was expelled by the president, Eskil Anderson, 4216 Sarpy avenue. According to the petitioner's attorney the expulsion was the result of factional trouble.

The Popular Folly of Running Away From Missouri and Going North With the Mosquitoes

BY CLARK M'ADAMS.

THIS is about the season when the people of Missouri begin seriously to plan leaving their own undiscovered State and going north with the mosquitoes. There is no stranger migration anywhere. It can only be explained by assuming that it is the mosquitoes they go for. At any rate, I was told at Lake Minnetonka some years ago by a Minneapolis gentleman who has a summer home out on the lake that when the mosquitoes, which formerly had infested that region, began to go up the Michigan peninsula, the tourists followed. He asked me if I had heard any mosquitoes, and I told him I had not. He then showed me the empty and barn-like hotels on the edge of the lake which had one time been the most popular places in the North. I think they have subsequently burned, and that no trace remains of them now beyond a few clusters of blackened piles on the edge of the water. At any rate, the mosquitoes never returned, and what was once the best loved of summer lakes is now quietly enjoyed by a few hardy Minneapolis people who can stand the stress of suburban travel.

Some years ago, when there was a movement in Missouri to build a home for superannuated editors in some place where they would not inflict their old-fashioned ideas upon the new journalism, or something of that sort, an offer of a site on the Current River was made with the assurance that it was not infested by mosquitoes. I have subsequently heard it said by many men who have fished in the North that the mosquito is no such summer pest upon the rivers of Missouri as it is up there. There seem to be years when the mosquito is almost unknown in some parts of Missouri. Last year was remarkable in this respect. Almost all the mosquitoes, apparently, went north of us. Even the St. Louis Health Department, which prepared to fight them after the manner of Col. Gorgas of Panama, could not find any mosquitoes. However, we have them; though not, seemingly, enough to make the State of Missouri as attractive to tourists as it should be.

WHEN the mosquitoes escape into some inaccessible part of the north and Missourians weary of the chase, they will discover Missouri. Few states are so lovely in summer time. It is only going to take time for people to find that out. When that time comes, there will be accommodations for tourists out in the hills and along the rivers of Missouri, and not only her own people will avail themselves of them, but the outsider as well. Last summer a party of St. Louis fishermen who were out on one of the rivers of Missouri encountered four campers from Denver. They were surprised that anyone should come from Colorado to Missouri to fish, but the Colorado people thought it the most natural thing in the world to do. They explained that they wanted to catch bass. Colorado has trout, but no bass. They explained, moreover, that there is no river in Colorado which one can descend by easy stages with a camping outfit, camping willy-nilly as one can do on any of the rivers of Missouri. They had tasted that in former years, when they lived in Missouri, and they had never discovered another form of outdoor amusement they liked as well.

The truth is that the beauty of the Missouri hills and rivers, and their suitab[illegible]r the very things in pursuit of which Mi[illegible] people travel hundreds and even thousands of miles, are not realized in Missouri. Once one discovers them, one ceases to travel to some faraway country to get the same thing. The number of people who are doing this is increasing in St. Louis every year. The country home movement in Missouri is already well upon its way, and the summer resort movement will not be long in following. If, as someone has said, the people of this country have begun to count their pennies, the comparative cost of summering somewhere in Missouri must appeal to us before very long. Possibly even H. Clay Pierce, whose summer home in Wisconsin is one of the show places of the country where the pine came from, will find virtues in the beauty of Missouri after he gets to paying his income tax.

FOR general purposes, the greatest summer attraction in any state is fishing. States like Colorado and Maine have an enormous annual revenue from fishermen. Missouri can do the same thing. It takes time, but once the fishing in Missouri streams, some of which are cold enough for trout, becomes what it can be made, there will be Chicago people going through the St. Louis Union Station as if they were bound for the front. Your fisherman is no respecter of direction. He would as soon go south as go north, if he can get the fishing.

But it takes money and stringent fish laws to make a state attractive to fishermen, even though it have all the natural advantages found in Missouri. The tourist must catch fish. That is going to depopularize a great deal of the northern country in a very few years. Indeed, it is already doing it. Colorado is much better off. The State can propagate fish faster than the tourists can catch them. One can look into a still pool on the Gunnison River, in Colorado, and see great schools of trout. The same thing can be done with bass and some other kinds of fish in Missouri.

The movement into Missouri in summer will not, though, amount to anything until the mosquitoes have all been chased across Hudson Bay or been lost somewhere in the big north woods. The pursuit of the mosquito is the great summer sport in the Mississipi Valley right now. In New York, where the situation with respect to the big city and its natural playground is very much the same, they have let the mosquito chase go off somewhere down the Jersey coast, and New York is quietly enjoying the Adirondacks, which are a few hours' run from town. St. Louis, in time, will do the same thing, and run down to the Ozarks. The other thing is just a popular folly. It is for a day. The enjoyment of Missouri, her hills and vales, her bright waters, and her convenience, will be forever.

Funny Stories of and by Statesmen at Washington

WASHINGTON, April 26.

DAVID F. HOUSTON, Secretary of Agriculture, firmly refuses to get excited about his job and burn the midnight oil. He is willing to sweat and fume over his work until the whistle blows and no longer. None of that man's work-from-dawn-to-dark business that used to be the way down on the farm.

If the Secretary were a sure enough farmer it might be different. But he is only a hired man, working by the day and he sticks to [illegible] that nothing was said about night [illegible]rk when he was hired.

It is quite the thing for a new official to think that the country will fly off of the track and smash into a gatepost unless he sweeps up clean every night, and some of them nearly break their backs trying to do it. At first, that is. They all get over it pretty quickly. But Secretary Houston has been that way from the first. He hoes corn and harries the hookworm until the sun slips over the hill at 5 p. m. and then he hangs up his hoe and calls it a day and goes up to the house for supper.

And after supper he puts on his other suit and forgets all about farm work and hookworms until next day.

Mondell Finds Third Class Means Work.

REPRESENTATIVE FRANK MONDELL of Wyoming tells how he found out the difference between first, second and third class stage coach passengers. He was starting on a stage trip across a section of the Western country when the driver separated the sheep fro mthe goats, or rather permitted them to separate themselves, according to their own estimates. Those who put themselves in the goat class did not know it at the time, but they found out later that they were the goats all right.

The driver asked them how they wanted to travel, first, second or third class. None of them knew the difference, but all who felt that they could afford it, said they would take first class. One or two split the difference on second class and the rest said they guessed third class would do.

The driver solemnly seated them all side by side, and none of them could see, for the life of them, what difference there was between first and second and third class. The first class passengers were beginning to think that they had been swindled, but when the coach came to the first hill they found out how it was. The driver stopped his team and yelled back: "First class passengers keep their seats! Second class passengers get out and walk! Third class passengers peel off their coats and push."

Tumulty Making a Reputation by Telling Martine Stories

JOSEPH PATRICK TUMULTY, President Wilson's secretary, can imitate Senator Martine of New Jersey in a way to leave nothing to the imagination and already has made a reputation as a story teller with anecdotes of the original boomer of Wilson for Governor of New Jersey, a position that paved the way to the presidency.

Here is a campaign story told by Martine to Tumulty and repeated by the latter to admiring audiences with strict fidelity to peculiarities and the profanity eliminated:

"Everybody knows how punctilious I am about keeping my speaking engagements, so when I reached a waiting audience at Necton 10 minutes late and wet to the skin, I thought an explanation from me was due.

"I told the crowd how a rich friend had loaned me his cah, a big brahsy thing, and how it broke down half a mile out of town during a violent storm.

"The thing had no top and the chauffeuh crawled under the cah carrying a monkey wrench for a bluff. After waiting for him 30 minutes, I got out and looked undeh the cah, where I found him huddled up out of the rain and smoking a cigarette.

"When I had finished telling what I really thought of him, I asked him if he thought I could get into Necton on foot. To show you the impudence of that chauffeuh, I will quote his disrespectful language, he being under the cah where I could not reach him:

" 'It's only half a mile into town, Senator,' he said. 'Go to it—you'll make it easy. You've got gas enough to run you from here to Pittsburg.' "

BUREAU TO LIST SLOW PAYERS IS TAILORS' LATEST

When New Customers Apply Now Tailor Will Call Up Information Department.

BIG FIRMS IN ASSOCIATION

Members Meet Twice a Week—Another Object Is to Push Made-to-Order Clothes.

If it so happen that the tailor to whom you go for your new spring suit should tell you that he is very sorry, but he has no room for another name on his list of customers, you may know by that sign that he has called up the Information Bureau and learned that you forgot to pay for the last tailor-made suit you bought.

The Information Bureau is the latest thing in the tailoring business in St. Louis. It is a centralized credit bureau which receives reports from all the tailors and tabulates and classifies them. This information is available to any member of the Merchant Tailors' Association.

When a new customer presents himself the tailor has only to call up the bureau to find out whether he would be a desirable risk.

The tailors do not want to convey the impression that their customers are deadbeats, according to George F. Dreimeyer, president of the association, but they do not want to furnish nobby clothes for the man who does not "pay the tailor."

The association meets every two weeks at the Missouri Athletic Club. Most of the large tailoring firms are members. The credit system is only a side-line of the organization, the tailors say, and was evolved from the little confidential questions the tailors asked each other at the meetings concerning the payment of bills by certain customers.

The main objects of the association, according to President Driemeyer, are to advertise the made-to-order clothing business, bring the merchant tailors into closer relationship, and to devise means of cultivating in the mind of the public the buying of tailor-made garments.

The officers are: President, George F. Driemeyer; vice-president, William F. Assmann; secretary, C. V. Beeman; treasurer, Henry G. Schneck.

Easton of St. Joseph, and Henry A. Hamilton of St. Louis, the incoming Grand Master, will respond to toasts. Hiram Lloyd will preside. An attendance of 600 members is anticipated.

The I. O. O. F. was organized in Baltimore, April 26, 1819, by five men. The order now enrolls 2,100,000 members.

St. Louis Tuberculosis Society Will Collect Papers and Magazines From Public.

WHOLE CITY DISTRICTED

Donors Are Asked to Tie Up Gifts Into Bundles to Aid Collectors.

The society has asked that those desiring to give papers and magazines will tie them up in bundles and place them on the front steps of the homes, where they will be collected and taken to churches and empty stores. From these points they will be taken in auto trucks on a general collection.

17 NEGRO BABIES FOUND IN MUDDY CHICAGO YARD

Cast on World From Red Light District, Penitentiary and Insane Asylum.

CHICAGO, April 26.—Seventeen pickaninnies, inmates of a juvenile home on South Ada street, have come under the scrutiny of the Illinois Legislative Home Finding Committee. The children were found in a muddy yard surrounding two small cottages. According to the negro man and woman who operated the home, they were cast on the world from the "red light" district, the penitentiary and the insane asylum.

The committee learned that three white children were sent to the place last summer. One boy died of some unrecorded illness. The others were taken later to some other institution.

The committee also learned that three negro children were sent to the home from Bloomington, Ill., a year ago.

LAST MESSAGE CONFESSION

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 26.—After writing a note in which he bared a double life, Charles L. Boucher killed himself early today. The note said:

"My name is Charles L. Boucher. I live in La Crosse, Wis. Tell my wife, who is in Waterloo, Io., to forgive me, as I also had another woman, but did not love her as I did my first. I had no divorce from my first wife, and so will leave them both. My second wife will never know, as I went by a different name. By-Bye to this world."

Old Illinois Soldier Killed by Fall.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., April 26.—James [illegible], an inmate of the Soldiers' Home, was killed by falling down a flight of stairs, walking in his sleep, early today. His neck was broken. He was a member of Company E, Forty-first Illinois Infantry.

SOME DONT'S

For Stomach and Liver Sufferers

Don't take medicine for your Stomach ailments—morning, noon and night, as usually such medicines only give temporary relief and simply digest the food that happens to be in the Stomach.

Don't permit a surgical operation. There is always serious danger in operations, and in almost every case of Stomach, Liver, Intestinal Ailments, Appendicitis and Gall Stones, the knife can be avoided if the right remedy is taken in time.

Don't go around with a foul smelling breath caused by a disordered Stomach and Liver, to the discomfort of those you come in contact with.

Don't think you cannot be cured of your Stomach trouble; worse cases than yours have been cured by Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy.

Most stomach ailments are mainly caused by a catarrhal condition. Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy not only removes the catarrhal mucous, but allays the chronic inflammation and assists in rendering the entire alimentary and intestinal tract antiseptic, and this is the secret of its marvelous success.

Don't suffer constant pain and agony and allow your stomach ailments to physically undermine your health. No matter how severe your case may be or how long you have suffered—one dose of Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy should convince you of a cure. This remedy has been taken and is highly recommended by Members of Congress, Justice of the Supreme Court, Educators, Lawyers, Merchants, Bankers, Doctors, Druggists, Nurses, Manufacturers, Priests, Ministers, Farmers and people in all walks of life.

Ask your druggist for interesting literature and convincing testimonials of cured people, or it will be sent to you direct. Address Geo. H. Mayr, 154-156 Whiting St., Chicago, Ill.

MANY COMPETITORS FOR POST-DISPATCH $100 'BOOST' PRIZE

They Submit Ten Best Reasons Why People Should Come to Live in Missouri.

NUMEROUS replies are coming in from widely separated points, to the Post-Dispatch's invitation to compete for a prize of $100 for the Ten Best Reasons Why People Should Come to Missouri. The contest will enable Missourians to set forth to the world what they know of their State's advantages and opportunities. This is not a merely literary contest or battle of wits. It will advertise Missouri far and wide, and the best reasons submitted will be utilized by the Federation of Commercial Clubs in its work of extending the knowledge of Missouri's resources and increasing its population.

A Land of Opportunity.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

1. Because for healthfulness this State is unequaled; and you have no long, dreary winter months to encounter, with no excessive dry heat in summer.

2. Because the climate is more uniform than elsewhere and no extremes of heat and cold.

3. Because you will find as orderly communities in Missouri as anywhere on the continent.

4. Because education is paramount; public schools of superior class, church schools and churches of every denomination are to be found in nearly all communities.

5. Because it is the best country known to the man or woman of moderate means; and the winter does not consume what the summer produces.

6. Because you will find a country of rich soil awaiting the settler, comprising uplands, prairie lands, and alluvial river bottoms.

7. Because you can be certain of profitable returns from whatever you put into the soil and the seasons are regular, no fear of crop failure and the country is never scourged by devastating storms or blizzards.

8. Because there are more and better opportunities for diversified farming than elsewhere, and everything grown elsewhere can be produced here more abundantly; truck farming has proved a success; products, being early on the market, obtain high prices.

9. Because no better fruit country is known, plums, pears, apples, peaches, grapes, strawberries and other berries fully maturing.

10. Because there are more opportunities for profitable and safe investment of capital than elsewhere in the United States.

H. H. STENDEL,
309 Allen Bldg., St. Louis.

A Suffragette's Reasons.

Editor Post-Dispatch:

The following ten reasons are given why people should come to Missouri:

1. In the interest of humanity.

2. As a civilizing influence to the native Missourian.

3. To uplift by intermarriage with the people of the United States.

4 To legislate for more wholesome civic government.

5. To develop the natural resources of a wonderful commonwealth.

6. To teach the Hill-Billy how to farm by modern methods.

7. To show the Missourian that good roads will build up the commonwealth.

8. To teach the St. Louisan that water (H-2O) is as good to drink as Busch's beer.

9. That by modern methods mining will pay.

10. To teach the native Missourian that it would be no disparagement to him to grant the same suffrage to his mother, wife and sweetheart or sister, that he grants to negroes, Poles, Greeks and Dagoes. For by proper suffrage and equality of all the people can the conditions so much desired, best and quickest be brought about.

For Homeseeker and Investor.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

1. Missouri offers the greatest opportunity to the homeseeker and investor.

2. Because of its geographical situation.

3. Because of its excellent climatic, soil and water conditions.

4. Because of its church, library and school facilities.

5. Because it has 24,528,000 acres of land improved and producing bountifully.

6. Because the remainder of unimproved lands is adaptable to intensive and scientific farming.

7. Because the value of farm buildings increased 81 per cent in 10 years.

8. Because the value per acre in Missouri land and buildings increased 100 per cent in 10 years.

9. Because of its cosmopolitan people and particularly the farmer, who is using his brain in addition to his muscle in securing the desired results.

10. Because it offers the greatest opportunities to the man with limited means to make a start in the world, both in the city and in the country.

A Comprehensive Ten Reason.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

1. Missouri knows no North, South, East or West. Her citizens are from every state in the Union. Her arms are open to all.

2. Thousands who have come are contented, happy and prosperous. They are the best boosters for Missouri, for they have tried her and she has not failed them.

3. Her soil is rich enough to suit the homeseeker from any section of the country. Whatever may be his specialty in crop culture, he can grow it here (with only few exceptions), and if he wants diversified farming Missouri is the best State in the Union to select.

Whatever may be the size of his bank roll, he can find an opening here, a home amid congenial surroundings for his family, and an abundant opportunity to get on in the world.

5. As good markets as the world affords. Sell your mules, horses, cattle, sheep, farm products, fruit, vegetables in the home markets at highest prices.

6. Why invest capital in manufacturing enterprises in Missouri? We have plenty of iron, zinc, superior clay, limestone, coal, etc.; plenty of water, land and other concessions to offer; no better shipping facilities in the country; investigate and your coming will be a certainty.

7. Splendid system of public schools, colleges, universities; opportunity for every child to secure an education; you can make a living, lay by something for old age and educate your children easier than anywhere else in the world.

8. Religion above par, a wholesome moral atmosphere and a genuine, old-time welcome to all, of whatever faith or political order.

9. All things considered, our climate will suit all who come; cold and dry winter, but not usually too severe; hot spell in summer of short duration; summer breeze cool and refreshing.

10. It matters not why you want to come, nor when, nor what you want to do after arriving, we will show you to your satisfaction and profit. Don't take our word, but our proof. Come and investigate for yourself and the result of your investigation will be reason sufficient for your becoming a Missourian, too.

Some Reasons From Texas.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

1. The resources are the best in the world.

2. Living is cheaper, on account of bountiful crops raised on a small piece of ground.

3. The fruits are the best flavored and most plentiful of anywhere.

4. Fine timber and cheap fuel.

5. The water is fine and plentiful.

6. The State is rich in minerals and gives employment to a great many people developing the mines.

7. There is lots of wild game and good sport for hunters.

8. Lots of large rivers with abundance of fine fish.

9. Missouri is a good stock country, hogs especially.

10. All kinds of wild fruits can be had in season for the gathering. In fact, one can live out in the woods on all kinds of nice berries, nuts, grapes, plums and lots of other stuff.

I am from Missouri and you will have to show me a better State to live in.

MRS. M. E. MERSHON,
Wichita Falls, Tex.

Abundant Reward for Worker.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

1. Because here you are limited only by lack of effort and ambition.

2. Because Missouri's door is always open to those who would add to it strength of character and skill for production and genius for developing its manufactories, its industries, its sciences and its arts.

3. Because Missouri is now beginning a forward movement which will require men of every type.

4. Because Missouri's cities have schools and hospitals which are the pride not only of this State, but are well known throughout the United States.

5. Because the occupations and the industries are so varied that you will find here the thing for which you are suited or are prepared.

6. Because the cost of living is lower than in many states, because of Missouri's ability to raise more than it consumes.

7. Because its water courses, the Mississippi River and Missouri River are a source of pleasure and profit to the people of Missouri.

8. Because land is cheap and is not drained of all its fertility. Missouri is just beginning to learn of the wonderful possibilities of its soil.

9. Because Missourians are considered most hospitable people and are ever ready to help those who have the ambition and inclination to succeed.

10. Because for your efforts and labor you get a maximum return.

WM. D. KUNKEL.

Beckons Labor and Capital.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

1. Because it is a good state to tie to permanently on account of its diversified sources of wealth, namely: iron, lead, timber, agriculture and stock raising, and the many other industries and avocations which the development of these create.

2. Because labor is in demand. Notice the "Help Wanted" columns of the leading dailies at St. Louis and Kansas City. In the Sunday issues at St. Louis April 13, leaving out what might be misleading matter such as agents and salesmen wanted on commission, the requirements in the way of help showed wants at St. Louis indicating over 500 laborers, 20 barbers, 15 stenographers, 200 bookkeepers, clerks and salesmen, and over fifty calls for men with special qualifications, such as draftsmen, dentists, chemists, druggists and skilled mechanics.

3. Because outside capital is now calling on Miss Missouri with apparently serious intentions. It is strolling with her through the iron hills of the Ozarks and squeezing her hand in the factory districts. This in spite of the fact that its self-appointed guardian, the insurance companies, is raising a row and saying all kinds of bad things about Miss Missouri.

4. Because Missouri is now a recognized manufacturing State, its two chief cities, St. Louis and Kansas City, having unusual advantages for the distribution of manufactured products to a vast territory with huge possibilities. Ideal manufacturing sites, cheap freight rates, more trunk lines to all points of the compass than any other state in the Middle West, water power created electricity giving cheap power and cheap light, cheap fuel. It has practical water transportation on the Mississippi and Missouri and the prospect of big business through the Panama Canal.

5. Because it is known to be a pleasant State to live in, being blessed with a climate conducive to health and comfort. Its cold and warmth seldom touch extremes, and yet within the belt of its golden mean is a range of interesting varieties.

6. Because Missouri is a substantial State which has ended its sleep of peaceful conservatism, and with the dawn of new activities is waking up to vigorous life, and will give you a substantial welcome; to capital, immense opportunities, and to the rank and file, jobs.

7. Because Missouri has much cheap good land for agriculture and stock raising.

8. Because Missouri has its own convenient markets for all farm products.

9. Because a big majority of its people have aligned themselves with democratic progressiveness, and it now has in office courageous officials fighting for the best common interests of its citizens.

10. Because Missouri needs and beckons big capital, can feed blast furnaces with raw material, furnish work for foundries and rolling mills, wants factories and railroads, and because it needs more labor to create supplies for present demands and to man new industries.

Homestead Land About Exhausted.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

1. Land is cheap.
2. Taxes are low.
3. Health is generally good.
4. Abundance of pure spring water.
5. Fine fruit and chicken country.
6. Fine stock country.
7. Chance for homestead land yet.
8. Plenty of churches and schools.
9. Good law-abiding people.
10. More opportunities for a poor man with small means to get a home and be self-sustaining than any state I know.

Tells Positive Cure for All Foot Troubles

Science has proven that nearly all foot troubles originate from a common cause; that of injured tissues. The following information will be welcomed by thousands of victims of daily foot torture. No matter how many patent medicines you have tried in vain, this treatment which was formerly known only to doctors will do the work. Don't waste time. Get it at once. "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of warm water. Soak the feet for a full fifteen minutes, gently rubbing the sore parts." The effects [illegible]re marvelous. All pain disappears i[illegible]tantly and the feet feel simply de[illegible]htful. Corns and callouses can be peel[illegible] right off. Bunions, aching feet and [illegible]eaty smelly feet get immediate reli[illegible] Use this treatment a week and y[illegible]r foot troubles will be a thing of [illegible]e past. Calocide works through the pores and removes the cause. Any druggist has Calocide in stock or will get it from his wholesale house. Don't be influenced to take something else instead. A twenty-five cent box is said to be enough to cure the worst feet. ADV.

Various Names Offered for Ostriches in Zoo

As Representing Both Wisdom and Unwisdom One Suggests Socrates and Xantippe.

Names for the two new ostriches at the Zoo still are pouring in. Each mail brings a big batch of letters from persons who are hopeful of winning the $25 prize offered by Jacob F. Heilrung, donor of one of the ostriches. Leonard Matthews gave the other bird to the Zoo.

Many Post-Dispatch readers have suggested that the ostriches be named Jake and Leona in honor of the donors. Others prefer names which would suggest Jacksonville, Fla., the city from which the birds were brought to St. Louis.

Your description of the seeming wisdom, yet proof of unwisdom in the ostrich suggests to me the name of Socrates, who is credited with great wisdom, yet in his selection of his wife, Xantippe, manifested a lack of wisdom. For these reason I suggest the names of Socrates and Xantippe as appropriate ones.

MRS. C. E. FERGUSON,
1443 Granville place.

ALOYS GERRITZEN,
2318 University street.

I think a good name for the ostrich couple would be Mr. and Mrs. Sahara, after the great desert from which they came. FRED SONTAG JR.,
5027 Idaho avenue.

I would suggest that you name the male ostrich Jack and the female ostrich Flora, as they came from Jacksonville, Fla. E. W. KURTZ, 3226 Bailey avenue.

ANNA LINN,
5351 Delmar.

The most well-known man in connection with South Africa, from whence the ostriches came, it without doubt Cecil Rhodes.

The best-known woman of South African birth, authoress and keenly interested in her country, is Olive Schreiner. I offer these names for adoption, believing you will receive none better: Cecil Rhodes—Olive Schreiner.

EDWARD WILLIAMS,
519 East Edwards street.
Springfield, Ill.

I would suggest the following names for the ostriches: Mr. Jacob F. Ostrich and Mrs. Leona M. Ostrich. They are names almost like the givers.

ETHEL MOREY,
4124 Walbridge place.

I would suggest that you call them Martha and George, in honor of our first President and his wife.

L. M. P.,
5166 Cates avenue.

As they came to St. Louis from Jacksonville, I would suggest that you call them Jack and Jill. G. D. P.
5166 Cates avenue.

From your description of the habits, etc., of the ostrich, I would suggest Dr. Jekyl and Mrs. Hyde as appropriate names for the two ostriches at the Zoo.
HENRY LOUIS ETTMAN JR.,
6005 West Cabanne place.

My suggestion for the names of the two ostriches at the Zoo are as follows: Male, Ossie; female, Flossie.

RICHARD R. GRANT,
4293A Cook avenue.

I believe the ostriches now in the Zoo at Forest Park should be given somewhat odd names. I would suggest Indian names, such as Lay-Big-Egg and Stick-Head-in-Sand.

J. EDWARD HARDING,
226 Pierce Building.

As suitable names for the ostriches at the Zoo, I would suggest Adam and Eve, they being the first of their kind in the garden. M. FRANCIS, 3521A Connecticut street.

I suggest "Leona" for Mrs. Ostrich's name, taken from the first name of the giver, Leonard, and "Jake" for Mr. Ostrich, taken from the first name of Jacob Heilrung, the other donor.

RACHEL MILLER,
3618 Lucky street.

GROCERS OF 37 STATES TO MEET IN ST. LOUIS

Banquets and Excursions to Punctuate National Session, to Be Held in May.

A banquet of the St. Louis Retail Grocers' Association will be one of the features of the annual convention of the National Association of Retail Grocers here May 19-22.

Cincinnati expects to send 100 on a special train with a brass band. Texas expects to have the largest delegation, although Missouri, with 20 delegates from Kansas City, as many from St. Joseph and a correspondingly large delegation from other cities, including St. Louis, will contest that honor.

Thirty-seven states will be represented. Wholesale houses of St. Louis and manufacturers are sending out personal invitations to their customers to visit the city during convention week. While only grocers will be guests at the banquet, all who come and who are in any way connected with the food industry, will be taken on a river excursion, entertained at a theater party and taken in automobiles around the city.

The Mastic Wall Board & Roofing Co., Cincinnati, Ohio
Gentlemen: Since writing you in response to your ad I have investigated seven or eight different makes of wall boards with the results that not one (except your mastic board) appeals to me as being anything but a makeshift, because none of them make a sufficiently rigid and even wall.
I have examined several walls built of various makes of wall boards and have found every one defective in being wavy and lacking rigidity, except the wall built with your mastic wall board.
I have purchased six crates of your board to finish two rooms in one of my houses.

Recipe for Dyspepsia

A Home Recipe That Will Quickly Take Away the Terrors of Indigestion.

If you are ever troubled with any of the dyspeptic ills, such as sour stomach, belching of gas, heartburn, etc., go to the nearest drug store and ask for one ounce of Polex, put up in tablet form. A tablet taken after meals or when you have an attack of indigestion, sour stomach or heartburn, will bring relief in from 3 to 5 minutes. It is useless, in fact harmful, to dump a lot of strong drugs into an already weakened stomach, to try to cure its ills. As a rule the simplest recipe is the best, and the above recipe always gives wonderful results. Anyone suffering from any form of stomach trouble, no matter of how long standing, should try this simple home recipe at once. It costs but little and all drug stores keep it.—ADV.

86,217 POUNDS OF FOOD CONDEMNED HERE IN A YEAR

Chief Meat Inspector's Report Shows Some Catfish Comes From Florida.

St. Louis has four city employes who devote their entire time to seeing that the tables of the people are not supplied with meats or fruits that will cause ptomaine poisoning, typhoid fever or other maladies. They are known officially as meat inspectors and are under the personal direction of Dr. G. A. Jordan, Assistant Health Commissioner. John H. Ritter is the Chief Inspector. His office is in the basement of the Municipal Courts building, but personally he is likely to be at almost any time on a still hunt for a barrel of too-long dead catfish from Florida, a hunk of beef from the West, by way of the East, or a box of California orange peels filled with dried pulp.

Ritter has developed theories of his own regarding the wholesomeness of foods. His experience has taught him to be wary. When he goes to a cafe for an after-theater sugger, for instance, he never orders caviare or crab meat or lobster. He even eschews the oyster.

No Fancy Frills for Him.

"I order," said Chief Inspector Ritter to a Post-Dispatch reporter, "a cheese sandwich, or, maybe, a ham sandwich. None of your fancy frills for me. I happen to know a lady who ate lobster at a fashionable cafe one night recently. That was at 11 p. m. At 2 a. m. her husband called in a doctor. She was broken out all over with a rash. Her stomach was upset for a week.

"I suppose if St. Louis were at the seashore I might like lobsters and oysters and such things, but not while we are 700 to 1000 miles from salt water."

Ritter admitted that St. Louis restaurants and hotels usually serve safe sea foods, but he remarked that some of the unsafe shipments which he has been called upon to condemn in the public interest as unfit for human food have made him a careful eater.

"Oysters, for instance," he said. "Do you know what we do with oysters found guilty of being in violation of the sanitary regulations? We dump them in the city sewers. They go where they belong."

Ritter has made his annual report to Dr. Jordan, showing that the inspection department has condemned in a year 86,217 pounds of meats and fruits, including oysters and fish. Most of the fish that was condemned came from Florida. It will surprise residents of the great catfish belt bounded by the Missouri, Mississippi and Illinois rivers to learn that the Florida catfish is shipped to St. Louis in considerable quantities.

Florida Catfish Condemned.

"Recently we had to condemn a carload of Florida catfish that was delayed because of the floods," said Ritter. "The fish were packed in sugar barrels. About a foot of ice was put on top of the fish in each barrel. The ice melted and the water ran down through the fish, souring them. We coal-oiled the whole lot and a garbage collector who has an oil and fertilizer plant on the river bank in North St. Louis hauled them to his place and rendered out the grease and oil. The bones he made into fertilizer. Nothing was lost—except the freight and the money the shipper expected to get for the sale of the fish."

Condemned meats also are taken by the enterprising garbage man, after the inspectors have poured coal oil upon them as a preventive of marketing. Grease and oil are made from such refuse. Fruits and vegetables are thrown into the river after condemnation.

Ritter's report shows that 3,258 pounds of beef were condemned, and 312 pounds of pork, 663 pounds of veal, 996 pounds of mutton, 324 pounds of poultry, 406 pounds of mutton stew, 305 pounds of sausage, 30 pounds of hamburger steak, 35 pounds of tripe and 78 pounds of pig tails and pigs' feet.

A total of 8618 pounds of meat and 77,599 pounds of fish, oysters, fruits and vegetables was condemned. Visits to the number of 8481 were made by inspectors to the various places where foodstuffs are sold or consumed. The meat markets alone had 5368 visits. It speaks well for sauerkraut, commonly supposed to be to St. Louis what the bean is to Boston, that only one visit to a kraut factory was necessary.

Ritter says most of the meat eaten in St. Louis is from the packing houses at East St. Louis.

Two Extra Charges Paid.

"It comes originally from the West," he said, "from the Dakotas, Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas, pays the bridge arbitrary tax to get to the East Side and pays it again to get back across the river—that is to say, the consumer pays both these extra charges."

Ritter and his assistants paid 402 visits to restaurants. In some of the cheaper restaurants, run by foreigners, they found that meats, cheese, fruits and vegetables were kept in the same receptacles, each absorbing the flavor of all the others.

Many housewives called up the inspectors to complain that bad meats or other food had been sold to them at their markets. In each instance an inspector took up the matter with the dealer. As a sample of such complaints Ritter mentioned the case of a negress who had bought some pork chops. The chops were shown to the manager of the market. He took one whiff and opened the cash register, handing back the money.

"I don't know whether we sold those chops or not," said the market man, "and if we did it was a clerk's mistake, but I'll pay two bits to get rid of them. Take 'em away!"

Drama "St. Philomena" to Be Given.

The drama, "St. Philomena," in three acts will be repeated May 4 by the young people of Holy Family Parish at the school hall, Oak Hill avenue and Humphrey street. The play was written by Anthony Matre, and has been produced twice before in the parish hall.

1 Full Quart Whiskey FREE

TRY IT AT OUR EXPENSE

There are all sorts of claims for superiority among distillers and Mail Order Whiskey Houses, and while we feel sure that our Fels 3-Star Whiskey can't be beat, or even equaled in quality, or price, still we are not going to ask anyone to risk their money on our judgment; therefore, we are going to give, absolutely free, one full quart bottle to test. We want you to prove by drinking it that Fels 3-Star Whiskey is pure, wholesome, fully aged, mellow as can be and above all has real whiskey strength. We want you to add half water to it if you like, and we say that you will still have stronger and better whiskey than most Mail Order Houses sell at our price. Anyone can easily understand that should we just send out bottles of whiskey free that we would be flooded with requests by some unscrupulous people and dealers and lay ourselves open to a fearful onslaught. This we cannot do, but nevertheless, the bottle is free to honest people. Now here is our proposition: We will send you one full quart bottle of Fels 3-Star Whiskey, absolutely free, along with your first order for 8 full quart bottles of Fels 3-Star Whiskey for $5.45 and we pay the express charges. After you receive the 9 full quart bottles, open one of them, test it any way you like, and if not entirely satisfactory, you have the privilege of returning to us the remaining 8 bottles, and the one extra bottle you may keep free, and we will immediately return your $5.45. Or send us $2.95 for 4 full quart bottles of Fels 3-Star Whiskey, express prepaid, and we will include one test bottle free. Test the free bottle, and if not absolutely satisfactory and the best whiskey you ever tasted at any price, just return to us the 4 bottles and keep the free bottle and we will refund your $2.95 without question or argument. With each order we give a free Gold Tipped Glass and Patent Corkscrew. Remember, we say we pay the express charges; look close before you permit some of the low prices of Mail Order Houses to get your order and make you pay the express charges.

We mean to prove superiority in the whiskey business; we mean to prove at our expense, by giving a free test bottle, that Fels 3-Star Whiskey has no equal. Our quart bottles are full 32-ounce quarts and not short quarts, and we guarantee every statement we make and back them with our paid-up capital of $400,000.00. If you want real whiskey, and not weak, watery concoctions, send us your remittance on our free test proposition. The taste is the test, that will prove more than we can write. Address orders and letters and make remittances payable to A. Fels, Mgr., or

SON OF DR. MUDD PLANS TO BECOME MISSIONARY

Princeton Freshman Hopes to Become Medical Religious Worker Among Chinese.

Friends of Dr. and Mrs. Harvey G. Mudd, of 4144 Washington boulevard, have learned recently that their only son, Stuart Mudd, a Princeton University freshman, is planning to become a foreign missionary.

Young Mudd, when seen by the Post-Dispatch correspondent in Princeton, N. J., yesterday confirmed the report as to his plans, but said he had not irrevocably committed himself to a missionary career, and that he would give due consideration to his parents' wishes.

In any event, he will be a physician, and he is shaping his college course so as to prepare him for professional training. Medical men are in great deman in foreign missions, and young Mudd has been especially attracted by the work to be done in China.

Should he become a medical missionary, he will go out under the mission board of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

J. H. BECKER GETS RECOUNT ORDER IN DELEGATE CONTEST

Judge Rassieur Specifies How Ballots in Ninth Ward Shall Be Reviewed.

FRANCIS OPPOSED MOTION

Decree Follows Closely Supreme Court Ruling in the Talty-Wells Contest.

An order made by Circuit Judge Rassieur yesterday directing the Board of Election Commissioners to recount the ballots for candidates for the House of Delegates in the Ninth Ward at the last election. This was on application of Selden P. Spencer, attorney for John H. Becker, Republican, who is contesting the right of John J. Francis, Democrat, to represent the Ninth Ward in the House of Delegates. Francis was elected on the face of the returns.

Judge Rassieur made the order after overruling a motion by Anthony Hochdoerfer, the defendant's attorney, to dismiss the proceedings.

The order, with slight variance, follows the Supreme Court's ruling directing the opening of the ballot boxes in the election contest for Mayor brought by John A. Talty against Rolla Wells in 1905. It directs the Election Board "to open, count and compare with the list of voters and examine the ballots cast in the Ninth Ward for the contestant and contestee and to compare only the numbers, if any, appearing on the ballots with the numbers on the poll books or voting lists opposite the names of the voters and to certify to this court how many, if any, unnumbered ballots were cast and how many ballots having no corresponding number were cast for either candidate."

The Court prohibits comparing of the ballots with the poll book lists so that it may be learned how an individual voted. In this way the secrecy of the ballot is maintained. The difference in Judge Rassieur's ruling from that of the Supreme Court is in the present proceedings the principals and their attorneys may watch the recount. In the Talty-Wells case the Supreme Court excluded the principals and their counsel.

Your Grandmother's Remedy for Purifying the Blood

And Renovating the System in the Springtime

Ask for Sulpherb Tablets.

What was grandmother's unexcelled remedy? Haven't you heard of it? Yes, you have! It was sulphur, cream of tartar and molasses. The main trouble with it was its nauseous taste.

A modern method puts the cream of tartar and sulphur into a sugar-coated tablet and mixes them with herbs, roots, etc., making a wonderful tonic blood purifier and system cleanser.

Just try sulpherb tablets (not sulphur tablets), but sulpherb—remember the name—and get the tablets in sealed tubes at 50c per tube.

Grown-up people and children who don't feel well, who are constipated or sluggish, or who have pimples, boils, carbuncles, ulcers and the like, can soon rid the system of these impurities by taking this good old-fashioned remedy in modern form. Their action satisfies or money is refunded by the Prescription Products Company, Dayton, Ohio. A free trial sent to any address. Buy of any well-stocked druggist.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

BREAK IN RUMLEY SHARES IS FEATURE OF TRADE IN NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

Preferred Sells From 72 to 49 During the Week; Other Issues Lower.

LONDON WAITS ON PEACE

Best Opinion Is Rise Would Follow Settlement of Balkan Dispute.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial weekly review today, says:

"To people who have been yielding despondently to the notion that political common sense has been wholly superseded, in the attitude of public men towards things connected with investment capital, by a spirit of destructiveness, certain events of this present week should be interesting.

"If there was any problem in the practical politics of the day which has really disturbed conservative men of affairs it was the confused and conflicting mass of statutes regulating rates of service of the railways.

"It has been soberly set forth by railway managers, who cannot be classed as the reactionaries of their profession, that a point was being approached, in the contest of state and Federal regulation, where the companies could not serve two masters without committing their own affairs to chaotic conditions.

This was why the expected Supreme Court decision on the Minnesota rate cases has been so eagerly awaited, and it explains the importance of the emphatic and positive stand taken by the Federal Government, this week, on the side of the railways main contention.

The Minnesota Case.

"That the attorneys for the State of Minnesota should have so quickly filed their objections to the grouping of their own case with other suits based on conflicting state regulations showed, of itself, the feeling of the advocates of unlimited state control that their constitutional position was precarious.

"But of that fact there are still other indications. Nothing in the existing situation is more impressive than the fact that, in two occurrences of this very week, the Governor of California (a candidate on the Centralized—National—Power ticket in last year's campaign) should have resorted to the extreme State's rights idea to support an untenable position in the Japanese affair, while the national administration, representing a party opposed to centralization should have publicly challenged the excessive exercise of State authority in railway regulation.

"The moral which thinking people will be apt to draw is, that plain common sense and broad-minded reasoning has by no means departed from public officials really conscious of their responsibilities.

"We are likely to have many other illustrations of the same reassuring fact as the hour for action in matters of public policy replaces the hour of random agitation.

The Railway [illegible]sition.

"So far as rega[illegible] the railways themselves, the time has undoubtedly arrived for exercise of such discriminating judgment. The effort of the railways three years ago to establish an all-around horizontal advance of some 10 per cent in freight rates, was opposed by the more judicious critics of the day and was obstructed by the Federal Government on the ground that conditions then existing in the expense account did not legitimately warrant it; but those who were then most opposed to that action will admit that circumstances have subsequently changed to an extent which must be recognized.

"It is one thing to ask an advance in rates on the ground that labor will presently apply for higher pay, but quite another thing to ask it because the wage scale has been already raised.

"The engineers' arbitration board recognized this fact and broadly intimated that relief might be sought from the Interstate Commerce Commission. There is no reason to suppose that the commission itself takes no account of such charges in the underlying situation.

"Nobody will deny that the problem is still awkward, since a rise in rates would quite possibly stimulate fresh demands by labor. But the matter must be faced in a spirit of equality and fairness when, as now seems probable, the railways and their governmental supervisors have to consider a condition and not a theory.

The Week's News.

"So far as concerns the actual incidents of the week, they did not all point in one direction. Most people of observation and experience will probably have drawn the inference that the 'tariff talk,' as an argument for despondency, is greatly overdone, since nothing has happened in the actual presentation of the lower schedules, which there was not the best of reasons for expecting, from the moment when the approval of the low-tariff platform by the electorate was assured.

"In the railway rate discussion and the general unfolding of plans for banking and currency reform legislation, this week's events can hardly be classed as unfavorable—though in both, the course of events somewhat later on, will do more to show the actual scope of such influences.

"As for the European situation, which is still an essential factor in our own, there has been no further change, and that of itself is undoubtedly disappointing.

"Back of all these larger considerations, the vexed question of suiting the terms of new railway borrowings to the investing public's present demands, remains to be adjusted.

"In this matter the facts of essential importance are, that the public in this country at any rate, has the money and is not tied up in prolonged speculation, and that most of the corporations can postpone their larger borrowings if they choose—as they could not in such years as 1906 and 1903.

The Break in Rumley.

"On the one very irritating incident of the week—the violent break in 'Rumley shares'—there are two things to be said with emphasis. One is, that new issues and new 'listings' of this sort, must be scrutinized more closely by the Stock Exchange authorities. The other is, that banks will be wise if they change the policy pursued regarding this and kindred stocks, of accepting with cheerful readiness such shares as collateral on loans, when prices for them had risen to a suspiciously high level, and then, of a sudden, shutting the door altogether to them, when a break of 50 per cent or more has taken place.

"Even on the most general principles, such action is at variance with all sound rules of banking; but the mischief is done primarily, when lending institutions tacitly ignore, not only the misleading character of prospectuses and earnings statements, but the character of the manipulation such as fixed the top prices in the 'Rumley incident' last October and November.

"The truth is, that all parties concerned—promoting bankers, Stock Exchange listing committees, bank directorates and speculating outside public—have much to learn from this discreditable affair.

"The break in Rumley preferred carried it from an opening last Monday at 72 to a close today at 52¼, after selling as low as 49. Other leading shares lost 2 to 3 points in the week. The final session closed with the market weak."

POLITICS AND MONEY CHECK FOREIGN TRADE

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, April 26.—It cannot be said that financial markets are greatly concerned over Montenegro's defiant attitude since its capture of Scutari. Nevertheless, the resultant delay in the plans for the formal settlement of the terms of peace is important, because such a settlement now would coincide with more favorable money market conditions than are likely to prevail later on.

Nor is there any surprise that the Continental State banks have this week made no move towards reducing their high discount rates, in imitation of last week's action by our bank. The money strain on the Continent is not yet over, and the general disposition is to await a further easing off of rates on our own market.

The Foreign Outlook.

It is not considered that the Reichsbank is likely to make such a move next week, on the eve of the Bourse settlement at the end of the month. Our own bank also will be slow to move further. Moreover, the Continental centers are fully aware that the strain of financing the war is still to be felt.

The main cause of the existing stagnation on financial markets here, however, is still the large amount of new security issues, actual or impending. The difficulty of obtaining a public response to low interest yielding stocks may be gathered from the fact that the Southern Mahratta Railway 4 per cent debentures for £2,500,000 sterling offered at 99 with the Indian Government's guarantee, obtained only a 10 per cent response, the underwriters having to take up the remaining 90 per cent.

The Brazilian loan next week will probably be for eleven millions sterling, the greater part being offered at London. It will probably be successful, however, since the yield is well over five per cent. It is likely to be shorter followed by a Chinese Government twenty-five million loan, of which about eight millions will come to London.

Market Is Prepared.

Much of the recent selling of stocks has been due to preparations for application for these loans and on their success depends largely the immediate course of the markets here.

The recent Japanese loan for eight millions sterling at Paris was a huge success and undoubtedly has done something to bring out the hoarded money of the French people.

Conceivably the Brazilian and Chinese loans may also stimulate confidence in a similar way, but financial hesitation pending their issue is perfectly natural.

The award of your arbitrators in the railway firemen's wage dispute seems to us reasonable. Nevertheless, it provides another instance of how your great corporations are themselves, through the increased wages and the demand for further increases, affected by the rising cost of living. It directs attention to the increasing difficulty of your railways in placing their bonds on the former easy terms.

Our people believe that President Wilson will take all possible measures to conciliate Japan. The unfortunate part of California's attitude is the extent to which it stimulates the jingo agitators of Japan itself.

Professional bull operators in American stocks are undoubtedly disheartened by the recent fall in prices at New York. But in the best financial quarters here the earlier rise was deprecated.

The general spirit of caution in high finance is sufficiently explained by the patent fact that it is in these quarters that the full measure and significance of the constant new loan creations is most fully appreciated.

BEEF STEERS DROP AGAIN; ALL OTHER GRADES STEADY

Slight Advance Early in the Week Is Lost, but Minor Kinds Hold Strong.

RECEIPTS AT NATIONAL STOCKYARDS.

	This Week.	Week Ago.	Year Ago.
Cattle	11,500	11,473	11,135
Hogs	40,000	45,461	47,369
Sheep	12,000	14,301	13,157
Horses and Mules	3,000	1,513	3,147

Receipts of native cattle the past week were about the same as the previous week. Beef steers comprised a good part of the aggregate at each session, and the quality of the run, to a certain extent, was a much improved factor. The slumps of the previous week, which amounted to a good quarter at the close, was made up to a certain degree at the inaugural session of the past week. On that day a fair showing was received and a top of $9 was established on a string of weighty choice offerings from Missouri. This figure also formed the top for the week, and values on all kinds ruled a good dime higher.

By the middle of the week, however, another decline developed, and beeves sold 10 to 15 cents lower all along the line. The week closed with values a shade lower than the previous week and a good 25@30c under the high time two weeks ago.

Butcher cattle experienced a steady trade at all times, and the weakness on beef steers did not seem in any way to affect cows, heifers, bulls, canners and cutters.

Best cows at all times sold from $6.50 to $7.50.

Bulls changed hands at $6.50@7.25.

Heifers were a prominent feature in each day's market. Opening steady, values as the week advanced ruled from steady to strong, the top for the week, $8.50, being established on Tuesday for a bunch of good-grade offerings. Bulk of these kinds cleared from $7.25 to the top.

Canners and Stockers Steady.

Canners and cutters also sold steady, the former going from $3.25@4 and the latter from $4.25@5.

Veals scored an advance from the decline of the previous week, and values at the close were quotably 50c higher. Choice ones sold this week for $9.75.

Stockers and feeders sold from steady to strong, although a somewhat curtailed supply permitted nothing toppy to be disposed of.

The quarantine supply was generous as compared to the previous week. Texas and Oklahoma were the most prominent contributors, the total consignments from these two states totaling around 75 cars, as compared to less than 50 for the previous week. Twenty cars of grassers and Mexicans grazed in Texas arrived for the opening sessions, and steers on that day sold at $6.90@7.50. The market was quoted from steady to 10c higher. Tuesday another liberal run arrived, and in a steady market Oklahoma fed steers were sold at $7.20@7.85, and Texas fed beeves at $7.50. The midweek session saw some good quality fed steers from the Lone Star State go at $7.65@7.75. The market opened weak, and at the close values were a good dime lower. Mississippi canners sold during the week at $3@3.90, cutters from that State and Alabama and Arkansas at $4.25@5.25. Butcher cows from Arkansas sold at $6.

Hogs Suffer Loss.

Hog prices took a tumble and reached the lowest basis for a good long time. The first of the week the top was at $9.15 and the bulk went at $9@9.10, but on Tuesday the top dropped under $9 and failed to again reach that figure during the week. Towards the end of the week the top was $8.90 and the bulk of the good hogs were selling at $8.65@8.80, and it was a draggy trade even at the lower prices.

Shippers and city butchers were the best buyers, and they preferred the light to medium weight hogs, that is, those weighing 170 to 215 pounds. Packers were in a very bearish mood all week, and the latter part of the week they took a big lot of good hogs at $8.35@8.50. Rough heavy packers sold towards the close of the week largely at $8@8.25.

Pigs and lights under 165 pounds suffered along with the other hogs. Southern offerings were the ones that were hit the hardest. Best lights went at $8.20@8.50, best grade of pigs $7.75@8.25, medium kinds $7.25@7.75, fair $6.50@7. Most every day there was a lot of pigs and fair grade hogs held over, but the good kinds were well cleaned up each day before the close.

Sheep Go Very High.

Another week passed with a small supply of sheep on sale, and as there was a good, strong demand, the market was active and higher and finally reached the highest basis it has been on for several weeks. A good share of the arrivals were direct from Colorado and then there was a good many westerns on sale that were fed in Missouri. A few cars also arrived from Texas.

Good quality offerings gained 30@40c during the week. Best Colorado lambs sold at $8.50@8.90, good natives went at $8@8.50, fair grades and clipped offerings $7.35@8, and the culls and poor grades $5@7. Most of the native lambs were clipped, and proportionately they were better sellers than those that were not clipped.

Yearlings sold largely at $7@7.50, with some of the very best bringing a little more. Best mutton native sheep went at $6@6.50, with the Colorado sheep up to $7.25. The Texas sheep weighed 96 pounds and brought $6.40. Stockers and thin sheep in general sold at $4@5.50 and bucks at $4.75@5.50.

The supply of horses last week was very generous, more so than it has been for many weeks past. The quality was the best that has been on the market this year. More good, big, useful horses, right out of work, were offered than for a long time, and they sold at good, stiff prices. Eastern buyers were strong in number at all times and were good buyers at every session, while the Southern takers were somewhat more numerous than they were for some time, but the fact that fresh receipts included very few horses of the Southern type hampered this trade to a large extent.

The mule trade was a shade better. Good, big draft mules and miners sold fairly well. All other kinds were neglected and did not sell to as good an advantage as they should. The Southern mule trade looked a little better than it did at the close of the previous week.

COTTON MARKET LOWER ON THE GOOD WEATHER

Texas Gets Needed Rain During the Week; Trade Reports Irregular.

The weather has been as good could be desired for cotton. In Texas, particularly in the western part, timely and beneficial rains have fallen. Texas had begun to need rain badly and a marked improvement should follow, as cotton is generally up to a good stand and well worked. In the eastern section of the belt conditions are good. Work has progressed satisfactorily. Cotton is up in a good portion of the belt and very little replanting has been necessary.

Along the Mississippi River, where there have been breaks in the levee, conditions are very unsatisfactory. Large areas are under water, a condition that is likely to continue for some time as the river is falling very slowly. Heavy rain in the Vicksburg district has not helped this section, which needs a good, long stretch of dry weather.

Prospects have improved in the main. The market has felt the influence of the good weather. Spinners are rather more confident of their supply for next season and the demand for cotton has suffered somewhat in consequence. As proven by our big 16,000,000 bale crop, eventually the prospect of a full crop will work to the benefit of producers, as it makes spinners more sure of their supply and makes less risky the selling of the manufactured product for months ahead.

Such selling creates a short interest that nothing but the purchase of the actual cotton can satisfy. It places on the books of the mills orders of sufficient volume to justify more liberal treatment of mill hands and keeps this large part of the manufacturing population satisfied. While the market may suffer temporarily from prospects of a big crop, there is no reason to believe that a big crop means low prices for any length of time.

Trade conditions generally are not so good. Export markets report business at a standstill. China and India are both out of the market, as well as the Red Sea country. Domestic buyers are not inclined to do much except at low figures and mills are not inclined to make contracts extending very far ahead except at full prices.

The labor situation in England is very unsatisfactory. A strike is imminent among mill hands in Lancashire and sympathetic strikes, of course, are likely to follow. The decline in silver has affected England's customers in the Eastern countries and trade from that direction has fallen off.

Spinners' takings are smaller than last year, but are not out of proportion with the difference in the size of the two crops. The total world's takings of American cotton to April 18, this year, were 10,103,445 bales, compared with 10,957,844 same date last year; the into sight movement to April 18 was 12,197,157 bales, compared with 14,185,681 last year; the total visible supply of American same date was 3,459,197 bales, compared with 4,080,255; port stocks were 654,500, compared with 728,824; interior stocks were 509,734, compared with 343,349 last year; interior receipts were 47,721, against 53,838; interior shipments were 85,978, against 85,763 last year.

Prices in the principal spot markets are somewhat lower than last week, but the decline in spots has not been commensurate with the decline in the future markets, especially New York, from which spots seem to have been divorced. It is said that a large short interest in May exists in New York and that Liverpool holds the long end, some 150,000 bales. The certificated stock in New York is but a fraction above 100,000 bales, and prices are not sufficiently high to attract cotton to that market. In the spot markets buyers are endeavoring to obtain cotton on the basis of New York contracts and sellers are not willing to make so great a concession.

Cotton is being sold from day to day at prices that are possibly lower than quotations, but these prices are far above the New York basis and makes hedging difficult for buyers and restricts their operations to actual orders for the most part.

Prices in the larger markets are quoted as follows: Galveston, market steady, middling 12 5-16c; New Orleans quiet, 12 5-16c; Mobile steady, 11⅞c; Savannah easy, 12¼c; Houston easy, 12¼c; Memphis quiet, 12¼c; St. Louis quiet, 12¼c; Augusta steady, 12½c.

Despite ideal weather conditions in the winter wheat fields, futures were given a sharp boost in the early trading the past week and touched the highest point so far reached on the present upturn. There was some selling as the week closed, but it mostly represented profit taking, and final sales showed minor advances for the six days' trading.

From the crop standpoint there seldom has been a season of more promise than the present one. The Kansas report issued during the week showed a condition of 89.5, against 85 a year ago, and indicated a crop of 122,000,000 bu, against 91,000,000 bu last year, and since the figures were compiled the State has had much-needed moisture over a wide area that was suffering from drouth.

In Missouri, Nebraska, Oklahoma and the central winter wheat states the outlook is for a record-breaking yield. Wheat, however, has a way of going back rapidly at this season, so it may be safe to assume that before harvest arrives the "crop killers" will have had many chances to materially lower the present estimates.

The Market's Position.

Aside from the crop outlook the position of the near futures appears to be strengthening. Foreign markets show a limitless demand for our wheat, at a season when stocks are running down in all exporting countries; when world's supplies are slightly less than a year ago; when Argentine shipments show a sharp falling off, and that country has shipped 76,656,000 bu, against 38,768,000 bu last year, and when prices are only about 5c up from the bottom of a year's decline and quotations 20c below those of a year ago.

To date the United States and Canada have exported since last July 195,067,000 bu of wheat and flour, against 133,282,000 a year ago, despite the heavy shipments from Argentine and in the face of a so-called bumper crop in Russia.

The world's consumption of wheat especially of American and Canadian and Argentine, has been the most remarkable on record, and can only mean that the entire foreign crop last year was of very inferior quality and our supplies absolutely needed by our European neighbors.

Should the export demand continue it would be an easy matter for the Chicago manipulators to put May wheat above the dollar mark before the option expires, especially as they have done the same thing for several years past under favorable or unfavorable crop conditions, and the stocks of wheat in Chicago are relatively smaller than in several years past, and world's supplies less than a year ago when the price was carried to $1.19 on a winter-killing scare, and went out well over the dollar mark, despite an almost perfect late spring.

It will be remembered also that the winter wheat crop east of the Mississippi River last year was practically a failure and the bins now empty and that the first run of new wheat to market should find ready buying from millers to fill up these bins. This is the time of the year for an advance in May wheat futures. It will be interesting to see if history repeats itself.

The Break in Stocks.

There is, however, one uncertain feature in the market situation—the business outlook and the weakness in securities. There has never been a year of depression in business when, under favorable crop conditions like the present, wheat prices have not sold very low.

The decline in securities in the past week, after the recent long period of liquidation, has raised the question whether Wall street is not marking the way, by discounting in advance a business setback, if the present tariff schedules are adopted.

Many traders are fighting shy of the bull side of grain on this account, and the point is well taken, but as the tariff rates will not go into effect for several months, it seems that the May and July options can pass without feeling any sentimental influence from a declining stock market, unless the break should become such as to cause fear of panic

As a guide to prices in the distant future, however, there seems much of importance in the movement of the stock market as a cue to the trend in grain.

Visible Decreases.

The visible supply of wheat in Europe this week amounts to 97,216,000 bu, against 94,400,000 bu last week, thus showing an increase of 2,816,000 bu. Last week there was an increase of 2,600,000 bu and last year an increase of 3,700,000 bu, when the total amounted to 93,800,000 bu.

The domestic wheat visible supply decreased 2,462,000 bu for the week, corn 5,066,000 bu, oats 1,114,000.

Total visible supply shows:

World's wheat shipments exclusive of North America are expected to be about 9,600,000; total shipments year ago were 11,760,000 bu.

In corn futures there has been more or less liquidation, and during the week Kansas City was reported to have sold a big line of corn that has been held for some months.

The ideal weather and liberal receipts have been a bear card too big to handle, but the May option still shows signs of congestion, and the shorts left may be given a few uncomfortable days before the option goes out. Oats continue to reflect fine seeding and growing weather and excessive supplies in farmers' hands for this late season of the year.

BORDEN GIRL IS RESTORED; FATHER TAKES HER AWAY

Heiress Is Found in Boston Hotel With Two Girls, and Mrs. White, Who Had Been With Them, Leaves City, and No One Will Be Prosecuted, Says Parent.

"PUNISHMENT" WAS RESENTED BY GIRL

Friend of Millionaire Says Ramona, a Good Girl, Has Been Reconciled With Father, and Will Be Put in Retreat.

By Associated Press.

BOSTON, April 26.—Romona Borden tumbled in the arms of her father, Gail Borden, millionaire milk dealer of New York, at the Hotel Touraine today and so ended what the family had decided to regard as a schoolgirl's escapade. Half an hour later father and daughter drove away in an automobile for a destination not made public.

Borden is hopeful that the affair will be forgotten soon and is determined to protect the girl from further notoriety. Miss Borden will not return to New York for some time. Her father plans to place her under medical care in a retreat to recuperate from the mental and nervous strain which accompanied her escape from the Sanitarium at Pompton, N. J., last Wednesday. There will be no legal proceedings against anyone.

Mrs. White Leaves City.

Mrs. W. J. White of Brooklyn, the wife of a chewing gum maker, in whose company the 17-year-old Borden girl came to Boston, and who exercised a strong influence over the girl, has left the city. Borden was quoted as saying, "Mrs. White has left the city through repentance."

Miss Borden was found at noon today at the hotel where she was staying with two girl friends and asked to return to her father. She promptly consented. Borden was waiting for the girl when she arrived. Later it was said the reconciliation was complete. A person authorized to speak for Mr. Borden said tonight:

"Mr. Borden's daughter has been restored to him today by the ill-advised and foolish persons who assisted her to evade his authority. The case simply is that of an undisciplined girl, who found the study and discipline her father had laid out for her distasteful and what has been made so notorious is actually nothing more than a reckless escapade of some school girls. Mr. Borden's only thought has been the good of his daughter, at heart a good girl, and a sweet girl, who now fully recognizes the deplorable consequences of her foolish conduct and is happy to be back with her father.

"Mr. Borden hopes that the matter may now be treated as a purely private affair, which it is, so that he and his family may be relieved from further notoriety."

Once before Miss Borden broke away from the parental moorings, and for that reason her father decided to place her in the New Jersey rest cure, when she was found in Washington 10 days ago. At that time she visited friends in the South, being absent from home without permission.

At Hotel With Two Girls.

She had many acquaintances, and, according to those in a position to know, thought she should have more opportunities to meet her young friends, among whom were Gladys and Violet Sheldon, nieces of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. White of New York. When she was placed in the sanitarium, she regarded it as a punishment and last Wednesday, while out walking with a nurse, jumped into an automobile and was whirled away. The identity of her companions in the car was not known. The party went from Pompton to Newark, Atlantic City, New York, and New Haven. Thursday afternoon they arrived here. The following day one of the party departed, Miss Borden remaining at a hotel with two girls.

Yesterday one of the girls was recognized by a Boston acquaintance, who communicated with Borden. He arrived here early today and local detectives promised to restore the girl to her father. The subsequent proceedings were scarcely less a mystery than the circumstances surrounding the girl's disappearance.

O. C. Kyle, who came with Borden from New York, and said he was his representative, this afternoon notified the newspapers that the girl had been restored. According to him, Miss Borden had been found at a private residence. The detectives say they had found her at a hotel. Borden refused to discuss the matter. He appeared to have suffered severely while waiting for word from the detectives and according to Kyle was almost ready to collapse when he met his daughter.

Borden was said to have declared that he would place Romona in a convent in Canada.

Mrs. T. T. Backe of New York, who was with Ramona and Mrs. White in New Haven, did not come to Boston with her.

"I am convinced that my daughter's

SHAW WANTS BRYAN TO SERVE MEATLESS DINNER

G. Bernard Thinks It Might Help Diplomats to Take Civilized View of Politics.

LONDON, April 26—George Bernard Shaw says the only mistake Secretary of State Bryan made was in offering his diplomatic guests unfermented grape juice or anything else except plain water.

All the criticism of Mr. and Mrs. Bryan's wineless banquet Shaw condemns as a gross abuse of hospitality and an affront to the social decencies. He cannot see why any host should be under obligation to supply his guests with wine any more than with any other particular eatable or drinkable.

He caustically remarks that it only shows the brutalizing effect of the drink habit when all this bother is made because a company of both sexes, composed presumably of intellectual and sober persons, is deprived for one meal of the opportunity to consume alcoholic beverages.

Shaw adds that if Bryan would start the fashion of not supplying diplomats with meat it might do something toward making them take a civilized view of international politics.

KAISER WILL BECOME OLEO MANUFACTURER

German Ruler Is to Set Pace as Pioneer in Neglected Industry.

Copyright, 1913, by Press Pub. Co. (New York World.)

BERLIN, April 26.—The Emperor William's energies have found a new outlet. On the excellent authority of a Dusseldorf trade publication devoted solely to protecting the oleomargarine industry His Majesty is about to blossom forth at Cadinen as a manufacturer of this variety of butter.

Prussia has no oleomargarine factory despite the ever-increasing demand for it among parsimonious Germans, and the Kaiser's advisers, ever on the lookout for "a good thing" for their master, have seen the financial possibilities in supplying the want.

Oleomargarine manufacturers are highly elated at this imperial championing of their product which quite recently the agrarian party in the Reichstag suggested should be dyed blue in order to disgust purchasers from persisting in consuming so unwholesome a concoction.

PIANOS RUINED IN OHIO, FLOODS ARE BURNED

Manufacturers Destroy Instruments Injured by Water to Preserve Reputation.

CINCINNATI, April 26.—A general burning of pianos has followed the floods in Ohio cities. Leading piano companies have applied the torch to every instrument in their warehouses in Dayton and Hamilton, which was damaged by the water, and have bought instruments belonging to individuals in those cities and in the flooded parts of Columbus and Cincinnati and have burned them.

One large firm destroyed 25 grand pianos which were in its Dayton store when the flood rushed through that city to the height of the second story sills. Others have followed suit. The companies' reason for this action is that a piano damaged by water can never be satisfactorily repaired, and that a piano so damaged is an injury to the firm whose name it bears.

BARGAIN THEATER TICKETS

CHICAGO, April 26.—An innovation in theater prices will be instituted at Powers Theater.

Last September many Chicago theaters abandoned all forms of free "advertising" tickets and all passes except to dramatic editors. Since then the players have complained of the small audiences. Hereafter the Powers' schedule for tickets sold in advance is to remain unchanged, but all seats unsold at 7:30 p. m. for each evening's performance and at 1:30 p. m. for the matinee performances will be sold for a general admission of 50 cents each, first come first served.

JILTED ADMIRER KILLS CHOIR SINGER, ENDS LIFE IN CELL

Mexican Also Shoots and Seriously Wounds Mother of Indianapolis Girl.

HER SUITOR FOR A YEAR

Had Been Twice Arrested for Forcing His Attentions Upon Her.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 26.—Miss Nellie Joyner, 23 years old, a choir singer, was shot and instantly killed here tonight by Carlos Gooseman, 24 years old, her jilted Mexican admirer, who is a recent graduate of the Indiana Dental College.

The girl's mother, Mrs. Sarah Joyner, who tried to save her daughter's life, was shot twice and seriously wounded. Gooseman ended his life at the police station with poison, which the officers overlooked when they placed him in a cell.

Gooseman told the police that the girl had refused to marry him, and that he had grown desperate when ordered to remain away from her home.

He formerly roomed at the Joyner home, but for the last month had been living just across the street. Twice he had been arrested because of his attentions to the young woman.

Took Girl From Home.

About a year ago, Gooseman is said to have enticed Miss Joyner from her home on the pretext of taking her with him to meet friends. He took her to a house on Hamilton avenue and in a room to themselves he is said to have threatened to kill her if she did not consent to marry him.

As the story is recalled by the police, Miss Joyner escaped by crawling out of a window, she called the police and Gooseman was arrested. Gooseman was arrested again about a month ago for forcing his attentions upon the girl, but was released on probation.

As Miss Joyner was going to a mail box tonight, Gooseman began shooting at her with an automatic revolver. He is said to have fired four or five times, when Mrs. Joyner rushed out of the house to the rescue of her daughter. Gooseman then turned the weapon upon the girl's mother. He shot at her two or three times, two of the shots taking effect.

Mormon Helps Arrest Him.

Ernest R. Scott and Clarence Cook, two Mormon missionaries who are rooming at the Joyner home, ran out of the house. Scott ran directly at Gooseman and aided in his capture.

How Gooseman kept the poison from the police is not known. He had been taken to police headquarters and had been searched by Fred Drinkut, who is connected with the police court. Gooseman had been talking with police officers and with Col. Russell B. Harrison, Mexican Consul. He had told the police of the shooting and a statement was being prepared while Col. Harrison talked with him in his cell. The statement lacked the signature of the prisoner.

Col. Harrison, with a representative of the Post-Dispatch, who had been in the cell talking with Gooseman, had just departed when Sergt. Hagerman, who had the complete statement ready for the signature, found Gooseman lying dead on a cot with an empty bottle beside him.

Gooseman said his home is at Partoto, Mexico. In a pocket were found three letters, one open and two sealed. The open letter said:

"To whom it may concern:

"I might go into details to explain the reasons for my act, but it is nobody's affair and no one is to blame but myself.

"CHARLES GOOSEMAN."

FIRE ON THREE SIDES, QUICKSAND ON OTHER

Kansas Surveyor and Party Rush Forest Blaze and Escape With Burns.

GREAT BEND, Kan., April 26.—Surrounded on three sides by a blazing fire and facing a bed of quicksand on the other, W. A. Rush, County Surveyor, and a party of assistants had a few moments of desperate terror today on an island in the Arkansas River.

The men were surveying the island. A fire that had been smoldering in the underbrush and timber burst out suddenly on three sides.

The men started for the river but one of them knew of the treacherous sands and led his companions in a dash to safety through the fire wall. All were burned about the face and hands.

BABY SMOTHERED IN BED

Infant Left by Mother Loses Life in Strange Manner.

Mrs. Lillian Hammer of 4240 Margaretta avenue accidentally smothered her 9-months-old son, Levi, yesterday afternoon. She told the police that when she arose at 7 a. m. she left the child asleep in the bed. At 10 a. m., she said, she returned to the room and found the baby still sleeping. She covered him with a feather bed, as had been her custom, to keep him warm.

At 1 p. m. Mrs. Hammer again went to the room and found the baby dead. He had crawled under the feather bed and had smothered.

KENT CONGRATULATES JOHNSON; CALLS ALIEN DEMAND IMPUDENCE

SACRAMENTO, Cal., April 26.

A TELEGRAM from Congressman W. C. Kent, congratulating him upon his handling of anti-alien legislation was received today by Gov. Johnson. The message read:

"Washington, April 26, 1913.

"Gov. H. W. Johnson: Congratulations on your brave stand. Opinion universally with you here. Any demand by foreign nations that we should regulate our internal affairs to suit them is hostile impudence. The treaty-making power is not supreme in such questions as ours.

"WILLIAM C. KENT."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., April 26.—The intention of Gov. Johnson to play politics with Secretary of State Bryan, who is coming here to try to straighten out the anti-Japanese tangle, to the disadvantage of the Democratic party, becomes more marked every day. The voting down, at his direction, of a resolution offered today by a Democrat to appoint a legislative committee to meet Bryan, is characteristic.

President Wilson's message, arranging the Secretary's visit, was directed to the two houses as well as to the Governor. But Bryan is to be taken to the seclusion of the Governor's mansion on his arrival. But Bryan is likely to upset some calculations when he views the situation on the ground.

Boycott Planned if Laws Fail.

Meantime, one of the rural newspapers of the better class, the Willows Journal, correctly expresses the thought of a large and influential class of citizens in saying:

"When Bryan is heard we will take heart and do as he suggests, but we will not tolerate the Japs. If we are outside the treaty rights, we can boycott them and also the man that sells them a foot of land."

One of the largest reclamation districts of this section recently was put on the market with a strict guarantee that no land would be sold to Japanese. And it is declared $500,000 was declined by this company for one parcel because the offer came from Japanese.

When Secretary Bryan arrives he will find the official record of the anti-alien bills full of politics. First, there was the Bradford Bill in the Assembly. Offered by a Democrat, the Progressive majority robbed it of its author's name, offered it substantially as a committee substitute and passed it, 58 to 15.

This bill, the only one so far adopted by either house, and now pending in the Senate Judiciary Committee, specificially provides in section 1 that "No alien shall acquire title or own real property within this State," excepting those who now own land, their wives and children and permitting alien ownership for not more than one year, or leasing for not longer than five years. In the corporation section this bill contains the phrase "ineligible to become citizens," which was declared objectionable by President Wilson and Secretary Bryan. That phrase is to be the chief point of contention after Bryan arrives.

Became Busy in Senate.

When the bill reached the Senate Gov. Johnson became busy. After conference with his leaders in the Senate a committee substitute known as the Birdsall bill, although it was really a substitute for the original Birdsall Senate measure, was introduced. It cut down the right to lease from five to four years, and modified the corporation clause so that it would not apply to aliens or alien corporations owning land chiefly valued for mines or minerals, or for oil or timber, or lands used for warehouse sites, wharves, refineries or factories.

This amendment was made when a British syndicate about to invest $2,000,000 in a Southern California oil land project suddenly withdrew on advice of the British Consul at Los Angeles.

The expression "ineligible to become citizens of the United States," occurs only in the corporation section of each of the bills. It was intended to meet the need for excepting from its provisions foreign capitalists who had no intention ever of becoming citizens. But it was not used in the farm purchase and tenancy clauses. The Senate bill then was clearly understood to express the attitude of the administration.

Now there is about to come, it is said, a third bill from the Governor's office. President Wilson and Secretary Bryan have objected to the expression

MRS. LILY ZEPP IS ACCUSED IN SUIT OF BREAKING UP HOME

Mrs. Auguste Schroeder Makes Allegation in Action for $15,000 Damages.

TELLS OF ALLEGED PAST

Declares She Made Sacrifices for Husband—Charges Denounced as Untrue.

Mrs. Auguste Schroeder of Maplewood yesterday sued Mrs. Lily Zepp of 3641 Utah place, wife of Louis F. Zepp, for $15,000 damages, on the allegation that Mrs. Zepp broke up the Schroeder home.

The suit follows Mrs. Schroeder's charge, made to Federal officials a week before, that her husband's name is Hans Iwersen, and that he has masqueraded under the name of her deceased former husband, Henry Schroeder, since coming here from Hamburg, Germany, 13 years ago. She told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday, for the first time, how he came to adopt the name, at her suggestion, in order to escape from Germany, when, she says, the police were seeking him on a defalcation charge.

He rewarded her, she said, by luring from home her daughter by her first marriage, Minna Schroeder; by spending her money, and by neglecting her in order to entertain Mrs. Zepp. She says in her latest suit that Schroeder and Mrs. Zepp, in February, 1912, were both at a farm belonging to her (Mrs. Schroeder) in Jefferson County.

Mrs. Zepp Prostrated.

Mrs. Zepp was prostrated last night, her husband said, from the shock of the suit. Zepp, who is a salesman for the Anheuser-Busch brewery, defended his wife against the charges, while she lay in the next room moaning and denouncing the allegations as untrue.

Zepp said he had the utmost confidence in his wife and that he had befriended both Schroeder and his wife, having helped both when they were in urgent need of help.

Schroeder came to the Zepp home while the reporter was there. He is tall and slender, of middle age, and wears spectacles.

"What do you think of it?" was his greeting to Zepp at the door. "Such a mess of lies," he continued. At Zepp's request, he told the reporter how he and his wife and the Zepps visited each other, and how all four were frequently on the farm in Jefferson County.

He said it was not true, as his wife has related, that he carried Mrs. Zepp in his arms across a brook on the farm where there was no bridge. "If you did such a thing," commented Zepp, "I would shoot you."

Replies to His Wife.

In reply to the wife's allegation that he lured from her, her daughter Minna, Schroeder said that the girl left home because of her mother's treatment of her, and that she is now married and living in Jefferson County.

Schroeder has refused, since his wife's charges as to his identity were made known, to make any statement about the charge that he is Iwersen, a fugitive.

He said that in Ferbuary his wife, through one of their three children, made a request that he sign a deed, so that she could sell some property. He refused, and he says his wife threatened at that time to "make it hot" for him and the Zepps.

Schroeder and his wife have lived apart, she said in her damage suit, since Nov. 12 last. They formerly lived at 3699 Humphrey street, and he was head bookkeeper and confidential clerk for the L. Bauman Jewelry Co., in the Century Building. In December, 1911, he was arrested on the charge of embezzling $30,000 from the firm. He was acquitted last summer.

Surrenders His Papers.

District Attorney Houts, on the strength of the wife's statement as to Schroeder's identity, has instituted proceedings to annul his naturalization papers, on the ground that they were obtained under an assumed name and by misrepresentation. Schroeder has surrendered his nat-

TRAP SET FOR AN APARTMENT THIEF CATCHES JANITOR

Negro Who Always Ate and Drank on Visits Also Helped Himself to Furnishings.

For the last month the tenants of an apartment house at 4141 West Pine boulevard have been the victims of a mysterious burglar. The thief visited the apartments in the absence of the occupants, stealing almost anything that was portable, including money, shirts, silk hose, neckties, china, cut glass and even rocking chairs.

Every visit was marked also by a notable decrease in foodstuffs, especially eggs, bacon, bread and beer. The principal sufferers from these raids were E. H. Vecker of the first apartment west, V. D. Israel of the first apartment east, and W. Ashley Gray, who occupies one of the upper apartments.

Vecker had lost 15 shirts and much of his table linen, and had hardly enough dishes left to set the table. The other two tenants were in a similar condition, except that they had lost rocking chairs along with their clothing and groceries. All robberies were committed in daylight, and no one had been able to learn how the burglar gained entrance to the apartments.

Friday the Veckers arranged their household in perfect order, took a careful inventory of the pantry supplies, and then went downtown. When they returned there was an empty beer bottle and a soiled plate on the table. Three eggs, four slices of bacon and a loaf of bread were gone.

The police were notified. They decided to lay a trap. About noon yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Vecker went away, but before they left their apartment they smuggled two detectives into the house and hid them in the parlor behind the piano.

About an hour later the detectives heard the rear door creak. Then some one came tiptoeing into the parlor. An instant later the intruder, a negro, was looking down the barrel of one detective's revolver. Then he noticed that another savage looking weapon was pointing toward him from the other end of the piano. The negro was Charles M. Smith, the janitor, who lives in the basement.

The rooms occupied by Smith were searched. They were filled with loot that he had stolen from the tenants.

When Smith was taken to the police station he was recognized as a notorious negro sneak-thief.

TOWN CELEBRATES RETURN OF A BOY WHO WAS KIDNAPED

Louisiana Mayor Leads Parade When Robert Dunbar Is Recovered by Parents.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OPELOUSAS, La., April 26.—Almost the entire population of this town turned out today to welcome home little Robert Dunbar, or at any rate the boy who is believed by C. P. Dunbar and his wife to be their 5-year-old son, who disappeared mysteriously last August. The child brought here by the Dunbars today was taken a few days ago from a traveling tinker at Columbia, Miss.

The tinker, W. C. Walters, who travels about the country mending clocks, declared that the boy was given to him a year ago by a widow in North Carolina, and therefore can not be the Dunbar child. Dunbar and his wife both express no doubt whatever that they have recovered their son.

The Mayor of Opelousas proclaimed a half-holiday for the home-coming. The Mayor, on a hook and ladder truck, headed a procession of several thousand citizens who marched behind the Dunbars to their home.

Identification Verified.

Most of the citizens agree with the Dunbars in their identification of the boy. Those who do not remember how little Robert looked when he disappeared eight months ago argue that it would be hardly possible for a child of his age to change so much in eight months that his own parents would not know him.

The Dunbars have a 3-year-old at home, and this younger brother greeted the presumable Robert with affection. The older boy seemed to be familiar with objects about the house.

Citizens of Opelousas believe that this is the concluding chapter, the happy ending, of the celebrated disappearnce case which for some months last year caused a country-wide search. The tinker, Walters, is in jail at Columbia, while the matter is being investigated. He was traveling with the boy in a tent wagon and camping out when arrested a few days ago by Jeff Wallace of West Columbia, Miss., who trailed him for a week.

Kidnaped From Camp.

A photograph of the boy was sent to Dunbar, who at once went to the Mississippi town, accompanied by Mrs. Dunbar, and made the identification.

Robert Dunbar disappeared from a hunting camp at Swayze lake, near Opelousas, where his parents were members of a fishing and hunting party. The lake was on the edge of the vast Atchafalaya swamp, and the alarm that the child was missing was followed by a dramatic night search through the swamp, the home of wild land and water animals.

The next morning it was found that the baby's tracks led toward a sandpit on a railroad at the opposite direction from the lake, and then it was concluded that he had been kidnaped. His recovery has brought no explanation of his kidnaping.

POLICE LOBBYISTS MUST TELL GRAND JURY OF EXPENSES

Cole County Prosecutor Will Investigate Acts of St. Louisans Who Pushed Salary Bill—He Will File Informations at Once if Inquiries Justify Them.

FOLK BILL IGNORED TOO OFTEN, HE SAYS

Law Which Requires Registration of All Lobby Members and Statements of Money Used Not Complied With, Says Attorney.

By J. J. McAULIFFE,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 26.—The work of the St. Louis police lobbyists, who operated here at the recent session of the General Assembly in connection with the police salary increase bill, will be investigated by a Cole County grand jury.

Searching inquiry is to be made into every detail of the $5100 lobby fund collected from police department employes, according to a statement by Prosecuting Attorney James H. Lay to the Post-Dispatch tonight.

"The report of expenditures, as submitted by the Police Auditing Committee of the Board of Police Commissioners, shows that an unusual amount of money was spent in Jefferson City to promote the police bill," said Lay.

Thinks Facts Concealed.

"On its face, this statement, wholly lacking in details, indicates that pertinent facts have been concealed.

"Three or four police officers on Feb. 12 and 13 spent a total of $350, but there is nothing to indicate how the money was expended.

"There is another significant item of $321 alleged to represent the liberality of 14 members of the police department in providing cigars and lunches for somebody. Presumably this was for the entertainment of Legislators who were guests of the police lobby in St. Louis.

"In all, there was expended about $1100 by the police lobbyists while in Jefferson City, besides attorneys' fees of $1160.

"I shall write to Chief of Police Young asking him to furnish me with a list of the 14 police department employes who compromised the St. Louis Entertainment Committee and also for itemized information as to the expenditures of each police officer who in any manner was identified with the police legislative force.

Law Ignored, He Says.

"There is every reason to believe, from the evidence at hand, that the anti-lobby law passed by the Legislature four years ago, but for some reason never enforced, has been deliberately ignored.

"Violation is punishable by a maximum term of two years in the penitentiary and a fine of $1000. The minimum punishment is 12 months in jail.

"There is another section of the law providing that an itemized accounting sworn to and attested by the persons interested in legislation must be filed with the Secretary of State within two months after the adjournment of the Legislature under penalty of imprisonment for not less than 10 days nor more than 12 months, or by a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $500.

"The statute is most drastic. It has been said that it will not stand the test of the courts, and, for this reason, its provisions cannot be enforced.

Believes Law Constitutional.

"It is my judgment, however, that the law as it stands is absolutely constitutional and is just as much in the interest of the public policy as the anti-bribery laws of the State, the infractions of which for many years were regarded as merely 'conventional.'

"Prosecutions under the anti-lobby law have not been instituted, probably for the reason that no attention has been called to violators.

"The apparent activities of the police lobby present an opportunity not merely to test the merit of the anti-lobby law but to serve notice on the representatives of corporations and other special interests that they cannot ignore the laws of the State with impunity.

"I am told that there were other lobbies besides that conducted under the auspices of the Police Department which were especially pernicious at the recent session and I shall be glad to be informed of them, and their individual affiliations.

"The regular session of the Grand Jury will not be held until early in the summer, and regardless of whether or not a special session is called, I shall undertake an inquiry into the violations of the anti-lobby act. If the evidence justifies it, I shall return informations immediately without waiting for the grand jury.

The anti-lobby law provides t every person employed for compens to promote or oppose bills or reso or to promote or oppose exec

proval of bills, shall file in the office of the Secretary of State the names of person or corporations on whose behalf he is retained, together with a description of legislation in reference to which such service is to be rendered.

The law also requires the filing of an itemized statement showing in detail all expenses incurred in connection with the legislation.

The anti-lobby register in the office of Secretary of State Roach fails to reveal the signature or name of a single person known to have been identified with the police lobby.

In 1906, the police Lieutenants petitioned the Legislature for an increase in salary and at that time Lieut. Thomas J. Donegan and Patrick McKenna, on behalf of the Police Legislative Committee, signed the anti-lobby register. At that session there were 109 legislative agents recorded, but two years later the number dropped to 28 and at the late session there were only 25 registered.

The largest "attorney's" fee paid by the 1913 police lobby was to Joseph S. Tall of Clark County, a former clerk in the Legislature, who received a total of $1750.

The expenditures of Police Sergeants W. V. Jeans and James R. Campbell, and other members of the Police Department's Legislative Committee, varied in Jefferson City from $20 to $38.50 a day. Jeans and Campbell, who received compensations for their services here, spent between them about $650.

Wanted Law Enforced.

While the police bill was under consideration, subsequent to the action of the Democratic caucus, giving the Municipal Assembly the right to regulate police salaries, Senator Carter of Clark County introduced a resolution calling on the Attorney-General and Prosecuting Attorney of Cole County to enforce the anti-lobby law against the police lobby. It was referred to the Judiciary Committee, where it died.

The police measure provided increases in salary for members of the department below the rank of sergeant. It proposed to nullify that section of the St. Louis home rule police law giving the Municipal Assembly power to fix salaries.

Gov. Major was reluctant to discuss the police lobby scandal and the failure of the Board of Police Commissioners to act on the report presented to them by the Auditing Committee.

"I know very little about the matter," said the Governor. "In one of the papers I read an article, I believe, to the effect that Joe Tall had received a fee of $1175 from the police.

"I have the utmost confidence in the Police Board and am sure they will handle the matter satisfactorily. On the legal side, the question is one for the consideration of the Attorney-General and the Prescuting Attorney of this county."

The Governor was asked if he had seen the Police Legislative Committee's report to the Police Board.

"I have not," he replied. "I have not been reading the papers much lately and don't intend to for the next two or three weeks."

uralization papers. He has employed a lawyer.

Mrs. Schroeder was found at the home of friends in Maplewood. She wept as she told her story.

"One day in Germany," she said, "my husband came home, and told me he was in trouble and wanted to go to America, but that the police would be after him, so that he could not get away.

Heard From Husband.

"I had four children, three by him and one by my first husband. To protect them, as well as him, I gave him my first husband's army discharge papers, and my first marriage license and with them he escaped, got to the United States and began life anew under the name of Henry Schroeder.

"Six months later I heard of my husband through friends. They said he was in St. Louis, and had sent word for me to come there with the children. Officers of the Government had taken all the property my husband had left, and I had to keep boarders to make a living.

"My husband met me at Union Station in St. Louis. It seemed to me the happiest moment of my life, when I felt that my children were once more to have a father's protection.

Worked as a Nurse.

"I found he was making but $10 a week, but I helped as housekeeper for a bachelor who gave us all a home, and we got along nicely. I later got into a profitable practice as a nurse, and gave my husband my earnings, which some years were $5000 or more.

"As we became prosperous, my husband joined the Liederkranz Club, and we met the Zepps, and visited back and forth. I complained at times that my husband spent so much time with the Zepps.

"One night I started out to find my husband, and met him coming out of the Zepps the rear way, with a pitcher in his hand. I boxed his ears, and he begged me to stop, and said he would go home with me to avoid trouble and publicity."

FIRM SILENT ON IWERSEN'S GOING

BERLIN, April 26.—The Norddeutsche Spiritwerke officials state that Hans Iwersen was in their employ in Hamburg a number of years ago, but they have refused to state why or under what circumstances he left.

Since the Government authorities in St. Louis have cited Henry Schroeder to answer his wife's charge that he is Iwersen and has masqueraded there under the name of her deceased husband, Henry Schroeder, the American Consul has made inquiries of the Spiritwerke. To him and to the Post-Dispatch correspondent, the company stated that it is contrary to its policy to make such Pierce public.

Mrs William J. White...

flight is due entirely to the influence that was exercised over her by Mrs. White and one of Mrs. White's nieces," Borden had been quoted as saying.

"What this influence is due to I do not know. But I know it is strong. Mrs. White was at Ormond, Fla., last March when I was there with my daughter. I brought Ramona back to Washington with me, but we had no sooner arrived in Washington than she broke away and returned to Savannah. It was following this that I sought to break up her friendship with Mrs. White and Gladys and Violet Sheldon, her nieces. My efforts do not seem to have been of much avail.

"Mrs. White is a woman who has much money at her disposal. For a long time I had known that an improper influence was being exerted over my daughter, not only by Mrs. White, but by others. I gave her $125 a month for spending money, which should have been ample for a 17-year-old girl. But I found that she was running bills in my name, and that others besides herself had been beneficiaries of her purchases.

"In order to put a stop to this, I cut off her allowance and instructed shopkeepers in Washington and New York to stop her credit. This had no effect. When she was placed in Dr. Adams' sanitorium I hoped she would recover her health, which had been impaired by her association with these women and would consent to pursue her studies in some school.

"I have been in communication with Romona's mother and I am positive that the first she heard of Romona's flight from Pompton Lake was what she read in the newspapers. Mrs. Borden and Mrs. White formerly were friendly, but I do not believe they are now on anything like friendly terms."

Girl Begged Mrs. White to Take Her, Says Woman's Friend.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Through a statement tonight by William B. Ellison, former Corporation Counsel of New York City, the interests of Mrs. Helen Sheldon White in the case of Miss Romona Borden, was set forth.

"I have known Mrs. White for many years and I know her to be a most estimable woman," said Ellison. "She has no children and has grown very fond of Miss Borden, with whom she has been intimately associated. The families have been close friends for a long time. Yesterday Mrs. White telephoned me from Boston and explained the disappearance of Miss Borden, denying she had kidnaped the girl; that Miss Borden had pleaded with her to take her from the sanitarium, and that Mrs. White was unable to resist the girl's appeals."

The stament described a visit Ramona paid to Mrs. White in Savannah last winter, joining her father later in Florida, only to appear in Savannah early in April and tell Mrs. White she had run away. Mrs. White telephoned Borden and Romona was delivered to a representative of the father in Washington about April 18.

"The next day Mrs. White came on to Atlantic City," the statement continues, "and there received a letter from Miss Borden, begging her to come to the sanitarium at Pompton Lake where Miss Borden had been placed. Mrs. White said the girl begged to be allowed to go home with her, and Mrs. White had not the heart to refuse. Mrs. White then allowed the girl to accompany her to Boston, immediately, however, telegraphing the mother, on the Pacific Coast, to come at once. I believe the mother is expected here Tuesday.

"Mrs. White futher informs me that while they were in Boston, they read in the newspapers of Mr. Borden's threats to place his daughter in some convent in Canada and the girl became terrified and shortly afterwards disappeared—where Mrs. White did not herself know.

"All that Mrs. White has done has been purely out of affection for Miss Borden. She has acted purely out of sympathy for the child and because Miss Borden has begged to be permitted to remain with her."

FRIEDMANN GETS $125,000 CASH, $1,800,000 STOCK

Contracts by Which Institutes Will Be Erected in 36 States Are Reported Signed.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Morris Fisher, President of the Eisner Mendelson Co., said tonight the contract for the American control by his house of the tuberculosis culture of Dr. Friedrich Franz Friedmann of Berlin had been completed except the signatures.

The Times says Dr. Friedmann will receive $125,000 in cash and $1,800,000 in stock in 36 Friedrich Friedmann institutes to be organized in 36 selected states, with a total capitalization of $5,400,000. It says further:

"The first payment to Dr. Friedmann on account was made today. It consisted of a check for $125,000, which will be all the cash Dr. Friedmann will receive until the fees for the treatment of patients with his turtle vaccine begin to come in.

"The American concern which will undertake the marketing of the Friedmann cure is the Eisner-Mendelson Co. Under the terms of the agreement, this concern is to organize the 36 Friedrich F. Friedmann Institutes with a capitalization of $150,000 each, each institute to retain $100,000 in treasury stock and turn over to Dr. Friedmann $50,000 in stock as his share."

CANARY GIVES ALARM, AWAKENS WOMAN IN FIRE

She Jumps With Cage From Window and Raises Ladder for Men to Escape.

By uttering shrill chirps and fluttering about in its cage, a canary gave an alarm of fire yesterday morning in a boarding house conducted by Mrs. Agnes Stark at 3033 Easton avenue.

Mrs. Stark, in whose room the bird's cage hung, was awakened by its cries and smelled smoke, which poured into the room when she opened the door. She awakened her brother, Emil Deken, in the next room, and, taking the bird cage, jumped from her window to the lawn in her night dress.

There she and Deken obtained a ladder with which painters had been working and placed it at the window of a second-story room occupied by her 18-year-old son, Sylvester, and by William Taylor, a boarder. They had been cut off by flames at the staircase.

The fire did $300 damage. It started, Mrs. Stark believes, when rats gnawed matches in a pantry. The house belongs to Michael Hester, hero of the Southern Hotel fire and former Assistant Fire Chief.

AUTO ON WRONG SIDE OF STREET, BADLY HURTS BOY

Lad, 6, Knocked Down in Presence of Mother and His Skull Is Fractured.

CHAUFFEUR IS ARRESTED

Two Men and Woman Injured When Machine Overturns on Von Versen Avenue.

An automobile said to have been running on the wrong side of the street, knocked down and perhaps fatally injured Willie Linstroth, 6 years old, in front of 3010 Newstead avenue, yesterday afternoon. The accident occurred before the eyes of his mother, Mrs. William H. Linstroth, of 2519A Prairie avenue.

She had taken Willie and a younger child to a photograph gallery, and they were on the way home, she carrying the baby in her arms. They were on the west side of the street, she said, and walking north.

Boy's Skull Fractured.

Willie was running about from the sidewalk into the street when the automobile, also going north, ran upon him from behind. He was picked up by a bystander and carried to a nearby physician's office, where it was found his skull was fractured, his left arm was broken in two places and his right hand was crushed. He later was taken home.

The automobile is the property of Mrs. N. Pepper, 15 Lewis place. She was not in the vehicle, which was driven by George Seay, a chauffeur. A man whose name was said to be May was riding in the car and was on his way to the Cardinals' ball game, Seay said. He disappeared before policemen could question him. The chauffeur was arrested.

Three persons, two men and a woman, were injured in front of 5087 Von Versen avenue at 6 o'clock last evening, when an automobile turned over, spilling its occupants upon the street.

Those hurt were Mrs. Maud Close of King's Inn, 5017 Delmar avenue, a widow; William F. Speer, a salesman of 1232 Aubert avenue, and Percy L. Rosenplant of 632 North Thirty-third street, East St. Louis.

Car Is Turned Over.

The machine, the property of Speer, who was driving, was going east on Von Versen avenue. When nearing the corner of Academy avenue it became unmanageable and swerved into the curb. The wheels struck an entry way and were thrown upward, causing the car to turn over.

Speer was pinioned for a while. He was treated by a nearby doctor. Mrs. Close was stunned. She was taken to the Deaconess Hospital, where it was said she was in no apparent danger.

After being treated by a physician, Speer was arrested on a charge of careless driving, and was later released on $800 bail. Rosenplant was only slightly injured and went home.

WHITE MAN SHOT IN SALOON BY A NEGRO

Was at Bar When Black Suddenly Opens Fire on Members of Own Race.

Edward Cruse, a white man, was shot in the head at 11:30 last night when Edward Wall, a negro, fired with a rifle at a number of other negroes in the saloon of George Mehringer, at 6891 Old Manchester avenue. Cruse was standing at the bar drinking. The shot lodged in his brain. He was taken to the city hospital in a serious condition. He lives at 7016 Old Manchester avenue.

A few minutes before Cruse entered the saloon, a number of negroes standing at the bar became involved in a quarrel. Hall, who lived near the saloon, went to his home for a gun. Before he returned, Cruse entered the saloon and ordered a drink.

When Hall returned, the men with whom he had quarreled were still at the bar. He opened the door, raised the gun and fired. The bullet missed the men he shot at and hit Cruse. Wall turned and ran. The other negroes hurriedly left the place. The police later arrested a dozen negroes in the neighborhood. They are being held pending investigation.

TRAIN KILLS MAN, GIRL'S LETTER IDENTIFIES HIM

Centralia, Mo., Resident Decapitated While on His Way to Utah.

Harry Bartholomew of Centralia, Mo., was decapitated by an accommodation train in the Missouri Pacific yards at Kirkwood at 12:30 a. m. yesterday. His body was identified last night by a man named Walker, from his home town. A letter in his pocket, apparently from a young woman, gave the first indication of his identity.

Bartholomew, a former brakeman, told men whom he met in Kirkwood Friday, that he was on his way to Utah to go into business with his brother. George Aller, a baggageman, entertained him and went to the railroad yards with him, the stranger saying he wished to see a brakeman. While waiting to see the brakeman, he was killed by the accommodation train.

Auto Stolen at Theater.

An auto belonging to E. R. Hensel, 6252 Westminister place, was stolen last night from in front of a vaudeville theater at King's highway and Kensington avenue. Hensel telephoned the county authorities to be on the lookout. He said that it was probably taken by joyriders who would later visit the cafes in the county. The car bore State license No. 3331 and is painted dark blue.

WILSON SECLUDED ON YACHT CRUISE; WIRELESS SILENT

Work Begins to Tell on President and He Takes Two-Day Trip on the Potomac.

PREPARING FOR BIG WEEK

Gathering Strength for Hearings on Wool and Sugar and a Visit to New Jersey.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—President Wilson is resting tonight on the presidential yacht Sylph, on the Potomac River, near Chesapeake Bay. He went into retreat early today for the week end, and so complete were the arrangements to give him seclusion that the commander of the vessel had not reported her position up to a late hour by wireless. The cruise may extend to lower Chesapeake Bay to give the President a glimpse of the ocean beyond Capes Charles and Henry.

The President went away to get diversion from the strain of his duties.

Dr. Cary Grayson, one of the naval aides at the White House, who has been looking after the President's health, advised a boat trip, and the President went cheerfully, leaving behind documents and letters of all kinds. He took some magazines to read if time hung heavy, and planned to take light exercise with gymnastic apparatus on the vessel, and to stop along the shore for a short walk tomorrow.

Miss Eleanor Wilson, youngest daughter, accompanied the President. The only other member of the party was James Sloan, chief of the White House secret service.

The President is getting ready for a strenuous week. The first part of next week he expects to spend in hearing arguments from Senators opposing free wool and sugar and on Thursday and Friday he will go to make his appeal to the people of New Jersey to support the jury reform bill which failed in the last session of the Legislature and to influence the calling of a constitutional convention. The President will speak on Thursday and on Friday in Jersey City, returning to Washington on Saturday.

Following the orders issued by the President a week ago, beginning a Saturday half holiday, the White House offices were closed at noon. The mansion was open. Mrs. Wilson had several engagements this afternoon and filled them. Because of these she did not accompany the President.

Mrs. Wilson Takes Flowers to Poor Boy Dying of Tuberculosis.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The sympathy and charity of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson were demonstrated, it was discovered today, by an unannounced and unostentatious visit a few days ago of the "first lady of the land" to the bedside of a poor boy dying of tuberculosis.

Dr. Gary Grayson, naval surgeon and aid to the President, who spends spare moments caring for the sick poor, in discussing Dr. Friedmann's remedy for tuberculosis told Mrs. Wilson of a little fellow who was in the last stages of consumption. He said that, although there was little hope, he was trying to prolong his life.

The President's wife, collecting a bunch of flowers from the garden, accompanied Dr. Grayson to the home of the boy in the poor district of the capital. Neighbors spread the news of the visitor.

A. E. STILWELL TRUST COMPANY TO DISSOLVE

Kansas City Concern No Longer Needed Since Its Separation From Orient Road.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 27.—The United States and Mexican Trust Co., capitalized at $2,000,000, and formed by A. E. Stillwell to finance the building of the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railroad, is to be dissolved. Liquidation of the company's assets will begin May 1. The reason given by officials for the liquidation is that the trust company no longer is needed as its interests have been separated from those of the Orient railroad.

H. D. Estabrook of a committee of three attorneys who arrived here today from New York, said the committee would take charge of the disposal of the assets so that stockholders would not lose on their investments.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Officers of the United States and Mexican Trust Co. would not discuss the dissolution announcement today. It was declared, however, that it is expected that by the liquidation of the company's assets all obligations will be paid off on a basis of 100 cents on the dollar. A. E. Stillwell, who resigned as head of the trust company after the Orient went into the hands of a receiver, is in Europe. E. Quincy Smith is president of the trust company and Arthur M. Loibond treasurer. Its paid up capital was $1,157,000; surplus and profits, $870,000; deposits, none; loans and discounts, $1,120,000; bond securities, etc., $2,100,000; cash and exchange, $24,000.

BRYAN ON A HIGH STOOL EATS MEAL FROM COUNTER

Secretary of State in Omaha on Way to California Prefers Plebeian Food to Dining Car Menu.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OMAHA, Neb., April 26.—Besieged by half a hundred pie-hunters, William J. Bryan today sat on a high stool in the Union Station lunchroom calmly eating his breakfast and talking to his old-time enemy, Mayor Jim Dahlman of Omaha.

Secretary Bryan was en route to California where he hopes to induce the Legislature of that State not to pass the alien land bill. His train waited in this city half an hour.

The Secretary of State preferred to take his breakfast at the lunch counter where he could talk with his brother, Charles Bryan, and others, rather than in the dining car. When Bryan's train pulled into the station, he was surrounded by Democrats hungry for jobs. With the pie-hunters were a number of his friends and he shook hands all around. He refused, however, to talk jobs with any of them.

Bryan flatly refused to discuss the Japanese question, but smiled broadly when asked about his grape juice dinner. He intimated that a grape juice cocktail would be about all in the drinking line that any thirsty Nebraskan would receive when he calls at the Bryan home in Washington.

"My grape juice dinner has really been talked about and discussed as freely as it deserves," said the Secretary.

While in Omaha, Bryan received a request from South Omaha labor leaders to stop here as he returns from California and investigate the Japanese situation in the South Omaha packing houses, where many Japs are employed. Bryan was told that such conditions were intolerable, both to the Japs and to the American workmen.

Attendants on the Bryan train have not received a cent in tips from the Secretary.

At Omaha, Bryan received an invitation from the Chamber of Commerce of Sacramento, Cal., to address that body while in California. He telegraphed that as he would be in that city only on business, he could not accept the invitation.

48 ARRESTED BY WEBB IN THIRD RAID ON VALLEY

Saloon Keeper on East Side Resists and Deputies Beat Him Into Submission.

State's Attorney Charles Webb, aided by Sheriff Mulconnery and two dozen deputy sheriffs and special deputies, led his third raid upon the Valley district in East St. Louis last night and in winerooms and disorderly resorts arrested 48 men and women.

A crowd of several hundred spectators assembled at Third street and Missouri avenue and watched the raiders as they proceeded from saloon to saloon, and for a time completely blocked traffic.

When deputies entered John Conner's saloon on North Third street, he attempted to resist them by force, and was beaten into submission.

At the Tennessee House on Second street, near the Broadway viaduct, 20 negroes were captured. While Deputy Sheriff Tony Stecker was guarding the rear door of the resort, there was a knock and a negro entered. Stocker searched him and found an opium layout in his possession, consisting of a pipe, a bowl and an alcohol lamp.

Special cars took the prisoners to jail in Belleville.

MRS. BOURNE GETS HER DIVORCE WITH LITTLE CONTEST

Lawyer for Wife of Ex-Senator Says Ample Income for Her Is Assured.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PORTLAND, Ore., April 26.—Lillian Elizabeth Wyatt Bourne obtained a divorce from Jonathan Bourne Jr. after a hearing in Judge Gaten's court today. No alimony was asked. Mrs. Bourne refused to say anything about property settlement, but Frederick V. Holman, her attorney, said such arrangements had been made privately as to insure Mrs. Bourne an ample and liberal income.

Mrs. Bourne told the Court that when she married Bourne he was "broke" as far as ready money was concerned, and she used her money in helping him along. Later, when she got her property back in the shape of bonds, he cautioned her, she said, to surrender them under no circumstances. She asserted that Bourne lost his temper and berated her in the latter years of her married life when she insisted on observing his caution to the extent of refusing to deliver the bonds to him. Ex-Senator Bourne had made a general appearance through his attorney, but there was hardly a contest. As a matter of form a demurrer was presented, but was overruled.

The only other witness was Dr. Douglas S. Tucker, a physician, who said Mrs. Bourne had suffered such injuries to her nervous system as were likely to be caused by the treatment of which she complained.

Mrs. Bourne announced to newspaper men that she would remain in Portland for a while and then travel.

"ineligible to citizenship." Wherefore, it is understood the new bill will extend the objectionable phrase to the other sections.

Democratic Leader Gone.

The possibility that Senator J. R. Sanford, Democratic national committeeman for California, who has presented anti-alien bills directed at the Japanese in the present and preceding Legislatures, had gone to meet Secretary of State Bryan, was discussed tonight.

Sanford was not in his seat today and a secret caucus was held by the Democrats of both houses last night. These facts were pointed to by those who believed Sanford to be hastening eastward. As to the caucus, it was intimated today, however, that it merely had decided to take no official party notice of Bryan's visit, although an informal dinner in his honor has been arranged. Prominent Democrats insisted there had been no thought among them of sending an emissary to Bryan. It was said Sanford had been called away on personal business.

Europeans in California Rush to Declare Citizenship Plans.

LOS ANGELES, April 26.—In consequence of the alien law agitation, unusual activity is being experienced in the naturalization filing offices throughout Southern California. The Federal Examiner here said today that resident Europeans, fearing a general restriction as to foreign ownership of land in this State, are hastening to qualify themselves for admission to citizenship. In many instances declarations of intention to become citizens have been accompanied by applications for entry on public land.

$45 Worth of Chicken Baked.

Forty-five dollars worth of chicken was baked when a shed in the rear of Fred C. Homeyer's home, 5426 Easton avenue, was burned down yesterday afternoon. Two old pianos in process of repair and a quantity of tools, all valued at $150, were also destroyed.

T. R. BACKS SULZER IN HIS DEMAND FOR A DIRECT PRIMARY

Governor Calls County Chairmen and Tells Them, "I Know the Game, I Won't Lose."

"LEADERS MUST CHOOSE"

He Says He'll Drive Foes Out of Party or They'll Drive Him Out of Public Life.

By Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 26.—Gov. Sulzer threw down the gauntlet today in his fight for State-wide direct primaries. He made known in no uncertain terms his determination to fight for such legislation at a conference of Democratic county chairmen, who had been called to Albany to discuss means of redeeming party platform pledges.

In his stand for direct primaries the Governor has the backing of Col. Roosevelt, who, in a telegram to the executive, voiced his support of the project. The Colonel wired:

"It is the duty of all good citizens in the State to sustain you and aid you in any possible way to secure the enactment of this primary law at the present session of the Legislature. Only by direct primary legislation can we make the people really masters of their own party organization and it is as great an offense against the people to swindle them out of their right to control their own parties as to swindle them out of the right to have their choice expressed at the polls."

In outlining to county leaders his program Gov. Sulzer spoke plainly:

"If any Democrat is against me in my determination to keep Democratic faith, I must of necessity be against him. Every Democratic chairman must now decide whether or not he is going to be with me or going to be against me in trying to carry out our platform pledges. He must either be a party to driving me out of public life or I must be a party to driving him out of the Democratic party.

"If you think I will not fight, you have another big think coming. If you imagine that I do not know the rules of the game, remember I have been in the game all my life. They beat Gov. Hughes; but I am determined they shall not beat Gov. Sulzer.

"All the power, all that is honest and all good agencies will be used by me from now hence forward to defeat and crush Democrats who would make the Democratic party of the State of New York the laughing stock of the people; who would make the Democratic party of the State a political hypocrite and a political liar."

The conference, representing about fifty of the 61 counties, adopted resolutions indorsing the bill favored by Gov. Sulzer.

POPE'S HEALTH BETTER; AMERICANS AT VATICAN

Cardinal Merry del Val Tells of the Pontiff's Interest in the Republic.

ROME, April 26.—The departure of Angelo Sarto, brother of the Pope, from the Vatican today was regarded as confirmation of the continued improvement in the condition of the Ponti...

The pilgrims, led by the Right Rev. Joseph Schrembs, Bishop of Toledo, were received by Cardinal Merry del Val in the name of the Pope.

In discussing the pilgrims Cardinal Merry del Val said: "My affection for America is deep. The interest the Holy Father has in you is so great that if an exception could be made so that he might receive anybody, it would be made for you.

"It is of America that the Holy Father said on a memorable occasion: 'That is a land where true freedom is esteemed.' Therefore, you, more than others, have every right to claim for for the Holy Father that freedom necessary for the government of the church. I am glad to note the assertion that the Holy Father's position has relation not only to one people, but has claims upon the whole Catholic world."

ST. JOSEPH GOVERNESS TO WED MILLIONAIRE

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., April 26.—Miss Adele Gorress of St. Joseph is to be married in New York City tomrrow to Marshall Greig, a millionaire fruit, asphalt and oil commission merchant of Port Au Spain, Trinidad, and with him will sail for a tour of Continental Europe.

Miss Gorress met Greig as they were coming to America on the steamship Campagnie, she as companion to Mrs. W. W. Wheeler, wife of a wealthy dry goods merchant of St. Joseph, and he to claim the body of a brother, who had fallen overboard from a ship crossing the Atlantic. The beauty of the homeless German girl attracted Greig, a canny Scot and globe trotter and they soon were engaged.

Greig returned to London with the body of his brother and Miss Gorress came to St. Joseph with Mrs. Wheeler. She was engaged by another family as governess, but soon was put at the washtub. The sensitive girl revolted and took refuge in the local Y. W. C. A. Friends advised Greig, who immediately relieved all her financial needs. Besides as a birthday present he sent a motor car purchased in London to Port Au Spain to await her arrival there.

PIERCE'S MEMORY HAZY ON DEALS FOR MILLIONS

He Testifies He Never Saw Property of Terminal Railway, Stock of Which Commerce Bank Seeks to Recover in $1,500,000 Suit Against Him.

DOESN'T KNOW HOW MANY BONDS HE HAS

Tells How He Employed Senator Bailey to Handle Transactions—Lawyer Alleges Witness Depreciated Value of Collateral Bank Held.

H. Clay Pierce, testifying in easy and chatty fashion, but with memory none too certain, waved away with a gesture yesterday questions asked him in the Nashville Terminal stock inquiry, involving millions of dollars.

The St. Louis oil multimillionaire, at his second day's appearance before Special Commissioner Muench in the National Bank of Commerce suit to recover from him the value of $1,500,000 of stock, spoke in a rather low tone. He pronounced the letter "s" in sibilant fashion, giving his testimony the sound of a succession of hisses. But his words in reply to Attorney George L. Edwards' questions were mild, compared with the rejoinders which he made to Attorney-General Hadley in the oil ouster suits of a few years ago.

Attorney Edwards Complains.

He said his memory on some matters was "very vague," and carried this vagueness so far that Attorney Edwards complained of it. It appeared that the matters were not so fresh in Pierce's memory as those which he related Friday. He told at that time, in great detail, how J. C. Van Blarcom, as manager of the Tennessee Central syndicate, had induced him to make loans through which he lost $3,000,000, and had to assume the financial burdens of the road, putting into it later more than $4,000,000.

Van Blarcom later was president of the National Bank of Commerce, which is now trying to recover from Pierce 15,000 shares of Nashville Terminal stock, said to have been worth $1,500,000 in 1905, when it was pledged as collateral for a loan.

Pierce spent an hour and a half on the witness stand, and told how he employed former Senator Joseph W. Bailey of Texas as his representative in the handling of the Tennessee Central Railway deals, following the collapse of a syndicate which undertook in 1901 to finance and build the railroad.

He asserted that he never had seen the property of the Nashville Terminal Railway, knew little or nothing about any properties it owned, and could not tell with any exactness how much of its stocks or bonds he owned. His recollection was that he owned virtually all of a first issue of $1,000,000 of bond, and $1,000,000 of a later issue.

Attorney Edwards sought to show from Pierce's testimony that he caused the stock of the Nashville Terminal to be depreciated after the stock was pledged with the Bank of Commerce as security for a loan. When the stock was pledged, according to a statement made by Edwards to Commissioner Muench in explanation of his method of examining the witness to get at the facts he desired, there was an outstanding bond issue of $1,000,000 against the company.

Alleges He Destroyed Value.

Pierce, Edwards declared, caused an additional issue of $2,000,000 of bonds to be made against the property, and acquired all or a majority of the bonds in exchange for the stock and bonds of the Briar Hills Colleries Co., which, Edwards alleged were worthless. By this additional bond issue, Edwards asserted, Pierce virtually had destroyed the value of the 15,000 shares of stock.

Edwards told Commissioner Muench that he wished to prove the value of the stock at the time it was pledged to the bank, and intimated that he would try to hold Pierce responsible for its value at that time. If the value of the stock had not been depreciated by any of the manipulations of Pierce, he said, the bank would prefer to have the stock.

Attorney Judson, representing Pierce, objected to going into many of the matters on which Edwards examined Pierce. The rulings of Commissioner Muench generally were to the effect that Edwards might inquire into any matter tending to show the value of the stock, or to show that Pierce, either personally or through his agents, controlled all the properties of the Tennessee Construction Co. and the subsidiary companies.

After Pierce, in answer to several questions, declared that he lacked personal knowledge of how the affairs of the various corporations had been conducted, Edwards remarked that the Commissioner could see that it was necessary to resort to unusual methods to get at the facts.

About the time Pierce was making the large investments in the Tennessee Central proposition it was a tradition in financial circles that his income from his holding in the Waters Pierce Oil Co. was about $90,000 a month. The Waters Pierce company was then one of the subsidiary corporations of the Standard Oil Co. and it operated in exclusive territory, making great profits. In his deposition in the Hadley cases Pierce testified that the stock of the company often paid dividends of 600 per cent a year. At that time he owned about one-third of the stock.

Pierce testified in the bank case that the Tennessee Central deal was undertaken by the Bank of Commerce Syndicate, of which he was one member, at a time when industrial promotions were general and nearly every bank and trust company was interested in one or more enterprises of that sort.

His story of how he, Van Blarcom and the late William H. Thompson, for many years president of the National Bank of Commerce, lost millions in the Tennessee Central deal was one of the most interesting narratives of a financial deal that has been told in St. Louis. About twenty others besides the three principals in the syndicate took shares in it, and all lost their money, Pierce testified.

The entire Tennessee Central promotion was undertaken, according to Pierce, to protect a loan of $400,000 which the Bank of Commerce had made to N. C. Chapman on securities issued in connection with an earlier promotion of the same deal undertaken by the Mississippi Valley Trust Co.

Pierce testified that he was led deeper and deeper into the financial entanglements of the Tennessee Central Construction Co. and its subsidiary corporations through a misplaced confidence in Van Blarcom, who was from 1901 to 1905 the syndicate manager.

GIRL GETS $100,000 IN SUIT AGAINST ARKANSAN

Miss Lota Anderson Alleged Former Mayor Broke Promise to Wed.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 26.—A judgment for $100,000 against W. C. Faucette, former Mayor and wealthy citizen of Argenta, Ark., in favor of Lota Anderson of Fort Worth, Tex., for alleged breach of promise, was awarded by a jury in the United States District Court here.

The young plaintiff sued by her next friend, Mrs. Florence Anderson, her mother. Faucette will appeal the case to the United States Circuit Court at St. Louis.

On the stand, in her own defense, Lota Anderson told in a calm voice the story of her alleged relations with Faucette since they became acquainted in Argenta in 1910. She said Faucette sent her to a St. Louis school and paid all her tuition for a year.

She said Faucette had promised several times to marry her and produced one letter written to her while she was in St. Louis and couched in endearing terms expressing his love for her.

SOCIALIST MAYOR LOSES

CANTON, O., April 26.—The Court of Appeals this afternoon reversed the decision of Circuit Judge Barnum of Youngstown, who decided on Nov. 9, 1912, that Harry S. Schilling, Socialist, had been elected Mayor of Canton, and decided that Arthur R. Turnbull, Democrat, is the legally elected Mayor.

Schilling has been in possession of the office.

SCHOOLS TO BE FIREPROOF; BOARD GIVES UP FIGHT

Five-Year Contest Ends in Promise of Protected Stairways and Fines Are Suspended by Judge Clark.

The Board of Education, which for more than five years has resisted the efforts of city officials to compel the installation of fire escapes on old school buildings, surrendered yesterday.

Harold H. Tittmann and Herman Mauch, two of the board's members, promised Judge Clark, in the Court of Criminal Correction, that fireproof inclosed stairways would be installed in all non-fireproof buildings, at a cost of $230,000, before the fall term opens next September.

The plan on which the board agrees with Building Commissioner McKelvey was that, in lieu of outside escapes, the corridors should be made fireproof and the stairways should be reconstructed of reinforced concrete, inclosed with walls of 13 inch brick, so that pupils, on leaving the classrooms, will pass into fireproof exits. Eighteen buildings, according to McKelvey, will require this work. He believes it can be done for the amount set aside by the board, but in any case, the board will have to provide for the work.

Fines Are Suspended.

On the strength of this promise Judge Clark suspended the fines of $300 each assessed against Tittmann, Mauch and nine other members and former members of the board, a week before.

Prosecuting Attorney Sidener, who has actively pressed these cases, consented to the suspension of the fines, but required that the appeals from the court's action first should be withdrawn. This was done, and if the promise to rebuild the stairways is not kept, Judge Clark can require the payment of the fines without further delay.

The board's surrender did not come until it had exhausted almost every method of resistance and delay. It sought writs of habeas corpus in the Supreme Court and later in the Circuit Court, contending that the State fire escape law did not apply to school directors in their official capacity. Every ruling was against them. The Judge who fined them was the second to sit on the case, the first, Judge Calvin N. Miller, having been disqualified on allegations of prejudice.

Victory for Post-Dispatch.

The victory of the city officials is also a victory for the Post-Dispatch, which has insisted, since the Collinwood disaster of 1908, that St. Louis should do everything possible to avert the possibility of such a calamity as that which occurred in the Cleveland suburb.

Investigation showed, at that time, that while the new buildings were fireproof and were only two stories high, the old buildings were firetraps, the third floors being in some cases reached only by narrow and inflammable wooden staircases.

The policy of the board, it appeared, was to spend all its available revenue for new fireproof buildings, and to trust to luck that no disaster would overtake the thousands of children for whom the new buildings had not been provided.

The Post-Dispatch protested vigorously against this policy, and Building Commissioner Smith and Factory Inspector Sikes, backed by Fire Chief Swingley, took up the matter. The board, after some show of resistance, promised that all the old buildings would be made safe, and prosecutions thus were averted.

Promise Only Partly Kept.

The promise was only partly kept. In 1910 the Post-Dispatch renewed its demand for protection for all school children, and renewed assurances were given.

But when, last fall, the Post-Dispatch again investigated the matter, it appeared that the work was at a standstill, and that a number of large old-style school buildings were without any means of fire protection.

Commissioner McKelvey and Prosecuting Attorney Sidener found a half-dozen buildings which were flagrant examples of this neglect, and McKelvey notified the board that these buildings must be provided with escapes. The board's reply was a refusal, with the statement that the law did not apply to the board in its official capacity. The arrests of the board members, and the overthrow of their legal contentions, followed.

Some members of the board have assumed, in discussion of the fire escape question, that it was proposed to make them put ladders on the outside of the buildings, and they have eloquently pointed the danger to children which would result. McKelvey had several times stated that he would accept any inclosed fireproof stairway, interior or exterior, which would insure safe egress. The plan finally adopted was one which he s he suggested last fall.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

EX-KING MANUEL'S ENGAGEMENT AIDS ROYALISTS' PLANS

Fiancee's Father Has Much Wealth and Wants His Daughter to Become Queen.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, April 26.—The betrothal of ex-King Manuel of Portugal and Princess Augustine Victoria, the eldest daughter of Prince William of Hohenzollern, marks an important advance in the plans of the Portuguese monarchial party, which had its headquarters in London and which is bent upon restoring Manuel to his throne.

Prince William is the head of the Catholic branch of the Hohenzollern family and is possessed of enormous private wealth, which makes him one of the richest men in Europe, being far betetr off in this respect than most of the ruling sovereigns because he has control over his revenues unhampered by any legislature of the people.

His wife, who died four years ago, was a Bourbon Princess, and his mother, still alive, was an Infanta of Portugal. She is Manuel's great aunt and is directly responsible for the match.

According to the Portuguese monarchists, Prince William has declared his intention of dedicating his fortune to the return of Manuel to his kingdom and making his daughter a Queen.

Call Themselves King and Queen.

The bride-elect, her father's eldest child and only daughter, has been practically at the head of the household for the last two years and it is expected that she and Manuel will maintain an establishment in Berlin as well as having an apartment in Sigmaringen Castle fitted up for them. But as they will style themselves King and Queen of Portugal and be in active communication with the Monarchists, it will be necessary for them to spend a greater part of the year in England.

Manuel has won a host of friends among the best class of English aristocracy since he fled here for safety three years ago after being dethroned. He is unassuming and modest and has not shown the tendency to a fast life which rumor credited him with at Lisbon. He is passionately fond of music and plays the piano as well as some professionals. Only music of the best sort appeals to him; he has an aversion for the vulgar and banal.

His devotion to music was cited by the Portuguese Republicans at the time of the revolution as one of the reasons why he was unfit to rule, but in England it has gained him influential friends among such statesmen as Arthur Balfour, almost equally fond of music himself and never happy without two pianos in his sitting room.

Welcomed by English Royalty.

Manuel has also won approbation in England by his close attendance upon his widowed mother, Queen Amelia, whose escort he seems always prepared to be, no matter what personal engagements he may have made with his own friends. Both he and his mother come and go at Windsor Castle and Buckingham Palace with a freedom of intimacy which King George and Queen Mary do not give other royalties outside of their immediate family.

Manuel is also extremely popular with the diplomatic corps in London and King George, as well as the Ambassadors of the foreign powers, have been criticized for inviting the dethroned King and his former London envoy, Marquis de Soveral, to important diplomatic dinners, where the regularly accredited Minister from the Portuguese republic has a right to be invited instead.

Clergyman Praises Eckman's Alterative

People who have lung trouble are often filled with bright hopes of recovery, only to realize that improvement is but temporary. Those who had it and used Eckman's Alterative can testify to its beneficial effects. No one need doubt it—there is plenty of evidence from live witnesses. Investigate the following:

Amenia, N. Y.

"Gentlemen: On February 9, 1908, I came to Amenia, suffering with Tuberculosis, that originated in a severe case of La Grippe. My physician gave me little encouragement. I was having terrible night sweats and mid-day chills and losing flesh rapidly, having gone from 155 to 135 pounds. I coughed and raised continually and became so weak that walking a few feet exhausted me. My father, who is a clergyman, heard of Eckman's Alterative and induced me to take it. The night sweats and chills disappeared, my cough became easier and gradually diminished and in a few days I developed an appetite, the first in months. I am now in perfect health, back to 155 pounds. I feel certain that I owe my life to Eckman's Alterative."

Sculptress Says Suffrage Will Free Women Artists

Have Been Hitherto in Bondage to Men

Miss Caroline Risque, Home From Paris, Is No Futurist, but a Strong Feminist.

A new idea is coming in art and it will be revolutionary. But it is not "cubistry" and it is not "futurism." It is votes-for-women.

How votes-for-women is going to change the whole face, and the torso as well, of art, was told to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday by Miss Caroline Risque, sculptress, of 4021 Morgan street. Miss Risque returned Friday night after two years of study in Paris. She brought the new idea with her and expects to begin working it out at once.

Even before her trip abroad Miss Risque had won local fame as a modeler of statuettes of children. While in Paris she made a bid for international recognition by a more ambitious work, a fountain, which was honored with a place in the Paris salon last May.

It was the practice of Mrs. Pankhurst, the English suffragette, to take a float across the channel to Paris and tell the women students and others there something about the cause. Miss Risque attended these weekly lectures as scrupulously as she worked with clay on the other six days, because, she says, they had a relation to art. Here is how she explained it to a reporter:

Woman Not Recognized in Art.

"Until now woman has had but little recognition in the world of art. This is because the woman artist has been but a weak imitation of the man artist. She has not expressed her own ideals and her own thoughts, but the ideas of men that were very different from her.

"But suffrage is going to make women free. She will no longer have to depend on the criticism of men for the acceptance of her work. Men will not acept a woman's work unless the woman makes it look like a man's work. All that is going to be changed and woman will be free to work out her own inspirations; and when she does there will be some remarkable changes in the viewpoint of art. Here are a few:

"Today when a woman sculptor or painter makes a figure or painting of 'Motherhood' she must mould or paint a happy face of a young woman looking down into that of a smiling babe. The men insist that it must be done that way. They insist that they know more about motherhood than the mothers themselves and they will not have the thing any other way.

"But when the woman artist is relieved of this tyranny she will do it very differently. She will not picture the happy face of the young mother and the babe. There will be no such note in her work. She will picture the self-sacrifice of the mother when the child leaves her to go out into the world.

No More War Heroes Depicted.

"War will be stripped of the last shred of its glamour when the women artists get at it. There will be no more glorious heroes done in clay or oil. Instead, we shall see depicted the sorrows of the ones at home.

"If you make a figure now of 'Sailors Lost at Sea' the men—artists and critics and beholders—demand that you show them the monstrous sea and the sailors being lost in it. But when the women artists are free to work it out in their own way, we shall see depicted the sacrifice that the sea has wrung from the homes.

"There is some sense of expression lacking in art now, and artists realize it. It is the striving after this instinctively felt want that has led to the grotesque efforts of the cubists and futurists.

Cubists and Futurists Classified.

"The cubists are crazy or insincere.

"The futurists are insincere or crazy.

"The cubists, though, do what they are sent out to do—paint or model something so that no one can tell what it is. They do the fourth dimension in art. They say volume has never been expressed. If they are painting a person they also put on the canvas the figure of the brush as it passes before their eyes, the thoughts they think are in their minds and the thoughts they think they read in the mind of the person posing, together with what is happening in the room behind the person posing. When it is all together you have the fourth dimension.

"The futurists want movement in works of art. For istance, they will paint an automobile crashing into a train. But along with that they will paint the movements of the automobile and the train. The placard that tells what the work is, is the only thing understandable about the work.

"These innovations in art will come to nothing. But the feminine impression is gowing to prevail. It is something that has merely been suppressed in art by men. Men want women artists to be forever striving for something strong, whereas woman's natural impulse is toward tenderness.

Miss Risque says one of the chief things she learned in Paris was that her former teacher in St. Louis, George Julian Zolnay, is a great instructor. She said Paul Bartlett, under whom she studied in Paris, told her to confine herself to practice on what Zolnay had taught her. Zolnay she says, is one man who helped her follow her own inspiration.

GIRL CAN'T GRADUATE; TAKES HER OWN LIFE

PINE BLUFF, Ark., April 26.—Miss Helen Philpot, 16 years old, a daughter of County Judge C. M. Philpot, who is a former national committeeman and a wealthy citizen, killed herself with a revolver in the bathroom of the family home Friday evening. Worry over the thought that she would not graduate from the local high school with the other members of her class was the reason assigned in letters she wrote shortly before taking her life.

ESCAPES FROM GOVERNOR

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 26.—When Gov. Blease left his office for a moment today, James Johnson, a notorious burglar known as "Portland Ned," paroled yesterday from a 10-year term in the State prison for robbing a safe in 1902, walked into the corridor and disappeared.

A Government officer was waiting in another room with a warrant for Johnson's arrest, charging him with robbing the Plymouth (N. C.) postoffice in 1898.

AUSTRIA TO ACT TUESDAY AGAINST MONTENEGRINS

Gives Powers Until Monday to Proceed Before Taking Coercive Measures.

VIENNA, April 26.—Austria-Hungary immediately will notify the other great powers of Europe that she has decided to take coercive measures to get Montenegro out of Scutari. The Post-Dispatch correspondent is informed by a responsible official of the Foreign Ministry, this is to be the couse in case those Powers do not declare forthwith what they are prepared to do in case King Nicholas refused to evacuate the Turkish city he has captured after a long siege.

The Powers will be reminded that they agreed that the new state of Albania shall be a kingdom, not a principality.

Austria-Hungary will wait until Monday for some decisive action of the other governments. If by that time united action is not determined upon, Austria will proceed alone to vindicate her political and military prestige.

It is reported Germany has promised to support Austria under all circumstances. Much significance is attached to a conference which the Foreign Minister and the Minister of War had this evening with Emperor Francis Joseph at Schoenbrun. The conference lasted until 5:45 o'clock, although the Emperor usually goes to bed at 8.

Bulgaria and Greece have come to an agreement, the Post-Dispatch correspondent is informed, under which Greece will retain Salonki.

Bulgarian Troops Leave Salonki for Important City.

SALONIKI, April 26.—On urgent orders from the Bulgarian commander at Seres, the Seventh Bulgarian Artillery regiment left here this morning for that place. The Fourteenth Bulgarian Infantry regiment is to follow Monday. The reason for this movement has not transpired, but the Bulgarian army has been concentrating for some time at Seres, which lies 43 miles northeast of this city and is the most important town in Eastern Macedonia. Presumably, the troops are preparing to face the Servian concentration on the Varder River. There is much rejoicing among the Greeks here over the disappearance of the Bulgarian troops from this city.

SUPREME COURT ACTION AT ONCE IN INSURANCE CASE

Expected to Issue Temporary Order Tomorrow Restraining Fire Companies.

FINISH FIGHT FOR STATE

Attorney-General Says He Will Exhaust Every Remedy to Prevent Withdrawal.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., April 26.—The seven judges of the Supreme Court this afternoon considered the quo warranto proceedings instituted by Attorney-General John T. Barker to restrain 109 fire insurance companies holding membership in the Western Insurance Union from suspending business on April 30.

The Court, it is expected, will issue a temporary order Monday.

The Attorney-General urged the court to act speedily before the companies could carry out their plan to suspend. He asked the court to do two things:

First, restrain the companies from carrying out their alleged conspiracy to suspend business on April 30.

Second, fine the companies.

He does not seek to oust them.

"What I want to do is to compel these fire insurance companies to abandon their unlawful conspiracy to suspend, and continue writing insurance in this State," said the Attorney-General.

He declared the offense of which the Standard Oil Co. was convicted and fined in Missouri to be trivial when compared with the action of the heads of the insurance companies.

"These men committed a flagrant violation of the anti-trust laws of Missouri when they met at Philadelphia and Pittsburg and adopted a resolution to quit selling insurance in Missouri and thereby cripple the State and its industries," he said.

"They have not only violated the civil provisions of the anti-trust act, but in my opinion they have also violated the criminal provisions by their agreement to suspend business simply to punish and harass the people of the State because of their laws," he declared.

The quo warranto proceedings may not mark the end of the affair. Criminal proceedings are in contemplation, but if such action is resorted to, it is declared, it will be before the Cole County Grand Jury, which will convene on May 13. Under the old anti-trust act, violation of it is made a felony punishable by jail or penitentiary imprisonment from one to five years or by fines ranging between $500 and $5000.

The Attorney-General made it clear that he would not stop until he exhausted every legal remedy which the State prescribes for the control of recalcitrant corporations. If his quo warranto fails, he will proceed by injunction in the Circuit Court of Cole County, and if that is not adequate he will not hesitate to call for a grand jury and proceed against the officers of the companies which are in rebellion against the State.

FIRE INSURANCE INQUIRY IS URGED

League of Cities Advocates State Protection and Investigation of Monopoly.

SEDALIA, Mo., April 26.—The League of Missouri Municipalities ended a two-days' convention here today by advocating strongly the adoption of a commission form of government by cities and towns of the State.

The Committee on Insurance reported that it had carefully considered the conditions existing in Missouri and deemed it unwise and inexpedient to offer any definite plan or report at this time on account of the tangled state of affairs. John P. Herman of St. Louis succeeded in getting a resolution adopted in which it was declared that every building is an asset of the community and state in which it is located and that the state has a right to insure and protect its interests against fire and tornado, and that Congress should be requested to investigate the fire insurance monopoly.

Recommendation was made through a committee that prompt investigation of the feasibility of empowering the State and municipalities of the State to provide for fire and tornado insurance, within the State, by the State and municipalities, through means which the State may devise and control, be made.

A resolution was adopted thanking the city of Sedalia, the Booster Club and public-spirited citizens for the entertainment for the delegates from the 17 cities represented in the convention.

OLD DANCES WIN FAVOR

Revival by Mother's Study Circle Pleases Young People.

The Sherman School Mothers' Study Circle, disapproving of the modern dances, on Friday night gave their first revival of the so-called "old-fashioned" dance at Strassberger's Hall, Grand and Shenandoah avenues. The young people expressed themselves delighted with the lancers, the quadrille and the old Virginia reel.

Five members of the Sherman Circle will attend the Mothers' Congress of the State of Missouri, which is to be held in Louisiana, Mo., April 29 and 30. Three of this number will be selected to report to the congress the splendid financial, social and ethical success of dance.

STRAUSS PORTRAIT

JESSE A. McDONALD.

When the people of St. Louis decided in the April election to make another effort to supplant the city charter of 1876 with an instrument more in keeping with the progressive ideas of the present time, they also selected as one member of the Board of Freeholders, charged with the duty of writing and submitting to the people a draft of a new charter, a former Circuit Judge, Jesse A. McDonald who last week was selected by his fellow members for the chairmanship of the Charter Commission.

Judge McDonald told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that he had decided ideas on city government, and on many of the provisions which he though should be included in the proposed charter, but that he did not think it would be wise for him to express his ideas in a newspaper interview. He said that he wished as far as possible to hold his mind open to receive suggestions and ideas from others. He said he believed that St. Louis would be given a new charter that would make the city government efficient and responsive to the will of the people, and which on the other hand would encourage the people to take an interest in their city affairs.

Not an Office Seeker.

One of Judge McDonald's traits of character is modesty. During a varied career as a public official he never has made any effort to force his ideas upon the community. Yet in recent years he has been importuned many times by political leaders to become a candidate for important offices or to accept appointments that would bring him into the public eye. Since he retired from the bench in 1908 he has declined to become a candidate for any public office or accept an appointment at the hands of anyone else.

The new president of the Board of Freeholders has not yet attained his 50th year. When he came to St. Louis in 1886, as a newspaper writer, the charter under which the city government is still operated was then 10 years old. Judge McDonald was born in Wabash County, Ind. Like many other distinguished citizens of the United States he began his career as a school teacher, following that up by editing a country newspaper for two years, after which he held positions as a writer on papers in Cleveland, Toronto and St. Louis.

Five Years on Bench.

Judge McDonald was graduated from the law department of Washington University in 1890, and two years later was chosen Assistant Circuit Attorney of St. Louis. He held that office for four years, and returned to private practice until 1903, when he was elected Circuit Judge for a six-year term. In 1909, upon the retirement of former Judge Daniel G. Taylor from the Circuit bench, the law partnership of McDonald & Taylor was formed.

Judge McDonald served one year as clerk of the City Council, and for a few months as secretary to George W. Allen, who filled out the unexpired mayoralty term of David R. Francis when the latter was elected Governor.

During his service on the bench, and in his different capacities as clerk of the Council, secretary to the Mayor and Assistant Circuit Attorney, Judge McDonald had an opportunity to study the present city charter, and in some instances had to consider its various provisions in the decision of cases.

Judge McDonald was counsel for the investigating committee sent to St. Louis by the Missouri Legislature of 1899. This was during the Ziegenhein administration. Senator Elliott W. Major, now Governor, was chairman. The committee investigated various departments of the city government. A shakeup in the Boiler Inspector's office was the first result of the inquiry. The Excise Commissioner's office, then run on a fee basis, also was investigated.

In addition to the experience gained in public office and private practice, he is a student of municipal government. He is familiar with its defects, and it is the belief of his friends and of his associates on the board that he will have great influence in framing a charter that really will deflect the demands of the people for a more modern and effective organic law.

Judge McDonald is a member of the American Economical Association and the American Academy of Political and Social Science, two organizations which devote much attention to matters of government. He is also a member of the American, the Missouri and the St. Louis Bar associations, an instructor in constitutional law school, and a member of the Law School, and a member of the Advisory Board of the University.

During the past 10 years Judge McDonald has watched with eager interest and sympathy the movement which has revolutionized the political sentiment and ideals of the country, and which has found its best expressions in the State and national governments. City governments have lagged behind the State and Federal governments in effectiveness and efficiency, but it would not be surprising to Judge McDonald's friends to find him in the charter board fighting for a city charter that would make the government of St. Louis as effective and progressive as the most efficient and modern government of the leaders of the progressive states.

Judge McDonald has one principal recreation—and that is trap and wing-shooting. He is an expert with the gun, and always keeps a few well-trained bird dogs. He is a member of the Racquet and Noonday clubs, lives at 4542 Berlin avenue, is married and has two children.

PUBLIC MARKET PLANNED FOR GRAND AND OLIVE

St. Louis County Farm and Market Bureau Endorses Project to Cost $400,000.

Plans for a great public market in the vicinity of Grand avenue and Olive street, in which farmers may sell their products personally to the consumer and thus eliminate commission men, were endorsed yesterday afternoon in Clayton at a meeting of the St. Louis County Farm and Market Bureau, which has a membership of 226 farmers.

The enterprise was suggested by B. M. Nevins, president of a real estate and investment company. He declared the market could be erected for $400,000, which he engaged to raise, and that after the plans are adopted the structures could be built in 90 days.

Following the meeting, the officers of the bureau filed an application for incorporation in the Circuit Court at Clayton, representing that the aims are to better market conditions, to employ an agricultural expert as a "farm adviser" for St. Louis County, and to encourage farmers to avail themselves of instruction in scientific agriculture.

The officers are Henry Meyer, president; John G. Rinkel, secretary, and E. G. Bayer, treasurer. The organization was promoted by A. C. McKibbon, editor of the Clayton Watchman-Advocate.

A Post-Dispatch want ad will sell it—anything, from a trunk to a tenement—from a range to a ranch.

BRITAIN TO SEND DISTINGUISHED MEN TO PEACE MEETING

Lord Weardale, One of Delegates, Hopes for Union of English-Speaking Races.

Copyright, 1913, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World.)

LONDON, April 26.—Lord Weardale, head of the British delegation to the Anglo-American Peace Centenary, which sailed from Liverpool today for New York, said to the Post-Dispatch before his departeure from Euson Station that the delegation were leaving in the best of spirits, with high hope for the fruitful consummation of their work for the future consolidation of the English-speaking people and the peace of the world.

Asked for his opinion of Secretary Bryan's peace proposals, Lord Weardale said that though Mr. Bryan was his great personal friend, he had not had an opportunity of considering the Secretary's proposals, but no doubt they were framed in a way likely to realize the object devoutly desired by all nations.

The Hon. Niel Primrose, Earl Rosebery's second son, perhaps is the most interesting personality among the delegation. He is not only good-looking, but has a distinguished and charming manner, with his father's musical voice and also something of his elusiveness.

But while Lord Rosebery, beginning as a Liberal, gradually became a Tory, his son is reversing the process. He supports all the Liberal measures which his father has denounced, and, having marked parliamentary aptitude, he is an attractive speaker, with excellent abilities. He would be a much more prominent politician if he had not inherited the full measure of his father's passion for sport. Primrose is essentially a sportsman in every sense of the word.

Lord Weardale is the Dean of the International Police Arbitration movement and is one of the most agreeable and clever of men. Springing from the noted Tory family of Stanhope, he developed in the teeth of all caste and all family influences into an advanced radical. The Earl of Stanhope, another member of the delegation, is the present head of his family. He shares the peace proclivities of his uncle, though remaining true to the Tory principles of his family.

Sir Herbert Maxwell, former Tory member of Parliament and the party whip, is an accomplished writer on Scottish history, archelogy and natural history.

The Hon. C. T. Mills, M. P., is the heir of Lord Hillingdon, millionaire, of the great banking firm of Glyn, Mills & Currie. He is one of the youngest members of the House of Commons and a golfer.

Moreton Frewen, who married one of the Jerome sisters, is as well known in America as in London.

Sir George Reid is agent general of the Australian Commonwealth. He is a clever speaker and is often described as Taft's "double."

Shirley Benn is young Waldorf Astor's colleague in the representation of Plymouth. He has large interests in Canada and is popular.

H. S. Perris, secertary of the delegation, is one of the most ardent and devoted international peace propagandists in Great Britain.

KRUPP CONCERN IS ASSAILED IN THE REICHSTAG

Socialist Deputy, Dr. Liebknecht, Also Makes Attack on Minister of War.

By Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 26.—Dr. Karl Liebknecht, the Socialist leader, continued in the Reichstag today his revelations in connection with the methods of armament concerns, which, he said, though living on international hostility, were run on internationalized capital.

He cited a contract between certain leading small arms and ammunition factories—two in Germany, one in Austria and one in Belgium—principally backed by French money, by the terms of which, the deputy alleged, an agreement had been reached to eliminate competition and to guarantee mutual profits.

Dr. Liebknecht pointed out that German companies were selling arms to Russia and that another concern largely capitalized with French money was furnishing armor plates to Germany and, he asserted, all these companies were engineering war scares in order to insure contracts.

The Socialist leader today introduced the names of Emperor William and the German Crown Prince, mentioning that although the Vorwaerts printed in 1910 a letter showing that an attempt had been made by a German arms syndicate to procure the publication in French newspapers of false news regarding the strengthening of the French Army, with the object of causing a reflex action of German opinion, the Emperor later did not hesitate to appoint Herr von Gontard, director of the syndicate, a life member in the Prussian House of Lords.

Herr von Gontard is a son-in-law of Adolphus Busch of St. Louis.

Referring to the Crown Prince, Dr. Liebknecht recalled that the heir to the throne had been demonstratively applauded in the Reichstag during the campaign of the war clique against the German War Minister in 1911.

Gen. von Heeringen, the Minister of War, replied briefly to Dr. Liebknecht. The Minister ignored the charges launched by the Socialist Deputy and declined further to comment upon the Krupp incident, in which a representative of the gun firm was alleged to have bribed certain officials of the German War Office, in order to obtain information as to pending military contracts.

In conclusion, he declared that the attacks of the Socialists on the War Minister were an honor to him, proving that he was doing his duty.

The majority then passed the Budget Committee's amendments, doing away with the posts of commandants at Dresden, Darmstadt, Karlsruhe and Stuttgart, and 10 out of 65 adjutants attached to the staffs of the German Princes.

The War Minister agreed to drop the 10 adjutants, promising a final arrangement of the matter in the next budget. It is understood that he will negotiate in the meantime with the Princes for a reduction of their staffs.

The House also voted to eliminate the standing appropriations for supplying Generals with horses, although Gen. von Heeringen warned the Deputies that it would make it difficult for officers without private means to accept promotion to a generalship.

Allen Hancock and George Hall Win Loving Cup at Gymkhanasia.

The fifth annual Missouri Athletic Club Gymkhanasia, which opened Friday evening, came to a successful close last night when a majority of the 300 spectators at the Durbar of the Rajputs of Delhi danced the turkey trot on the floor of the club gymnasium.

Preceding this finale was the grand Hindu trot contest, which the program announced was open to all registered A. A. U. trotters. The trotters, as the Grand Vizier announced, would be judged by the following paces: Trot, hug, glide, canter, tickle and tango.

The public was left to judge the various heats and decide by their applause which of the contestants set the most calorific pace. After a heated struggle Allen Hancock and George Hall were awarded the first prize, a gold loving cup valued at 10,000 lakhs.

More than 100 members of the club wore Oriental and Indian costumes. "The streets of Delhi," consisting of a number of booths, were located in a square about the Durbar, which was situated in the center of the gymnasium.

MOOSERS ASKED TO REDEEM PLEDGE TO REDUCE TARIFF

New Illinois Representative, Lawrence B. Stringer, Tells Victor Murdock, in House Speech, That Progressives Must Keep Promise or Repudiate Platform.

THE DAY IN CONGRESS.

SENATE.

Fisheries Committee decided to recommend confirmation of nomination of Hugh M. Smith as Commissioner of Fisheries.

Kern resolution for investigation of West Virginia coal strike ordered favorably reported.

HOUSE.

Representative Campbell introduced a bill to create a bureau of public highways and appropriate $24,000,000 for use among states.

Representative Bartlett introduced bill to reduce first-class postage to 1 cent an ounce.

Recessed at 5:15 until 7:30 p. m.

Adjourned at 11:07 p. m. until 11 a. m. Monday.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Confronting Progressive members of the House with a plank in the national platform of their party pledging them to immediate revision of "excessive tariff schedules," without waiting for their proposed nonpartisan tariff commission, Representative L. B. Springer, a new Democratic member from Illinois, called upon the new party Representatives in the House to support the Underwood bill if they wished to carry out their platform declarations.

First, defending the Progressives against onslaughts by Democrats and Republicans and declaring that they represented more than four million voters and had the right to claim that their party was the "second great party in this nation," the Illinois Democrat emphatically denied that they represented a "protection party."

"You declare that the Progressive party favors a nonpartisan commission," declared Stringer. "That is true, but that plank in the Progressive platform concludes by saying that 'the work of the commission should not prevent the immediate adoption of acts reducing those schedules generally recognized as excessive.'"

"I call the attention of the gentleman from Kansas to the statement and if he and the Progressives of this body, whom he leads, desire to carry out the declarations of their platform, and I believe they do, they will be compelled by the logic of those declarations to join with us in the passage of this pending measure.

"That platform denounces the Payne-Aldrich bill as 'unjust to the people'," the speaker continued. "It declares for an income tax and I say to the gentleman from Kansas that his conferes have already said to us that if they fail to keep faith with the people and fail to carry out the pledges which they have made, they will meet the condemnation which they deserve."

Payne and Dixon.

The day's debate further was enlivened by the first exhibition of feeling between majority and minority leaders in the tariff discussion, when Representative Dixon of Indiana, Democratic member of the Ways and Means Committee, attacked the Republican tariff, declaring it was in effect an increase over the former Dingley tariff in that the average rate of the Payne law was 1.71 per cent higher than the Dingley law, with the statistics of 1907 as a basis.

"The statistics which the Ways and Means Committee presents today show the gentleman's statement is utterly unfounded, and false," shouted Representative Payne.

Both participants in the colloquy announced they would bring representatives of the Ways and Means Committee to prove their contentions.

Payne and Murdock Clash.

A clash between Representative Payne of New York, ranking Republican on the Ways and Means Committee and author of the present tariff law, and Representative Murdock of Kansas, the leader of the Progressives, over the division of time for speech making on the minority side of the House chamber, enlivened the otherwise monotonous proceedings this afternoon.

Representative Kent of California, Independent, announced he would vote for the Democratic bill, because it represented a lowering of the tariff, but he disagreed with many of its provisions.

Representative Anderson of Minnesota, Republican, said the bill placed the Democrats on record as free traders.

Representative Bailey of Pennsylvania, who announced himself as a free trade Democrat, declared that while in his opinion, the Underwood bill did not go far enough in lowering rates and enlarging the free list, it was a "step in the right direction."

Representative Treadway of Massachusetts, made a detailed criticism of the rates in the Underwood bill, practically in the wool, cotton and silk schedules. He declared the measure would ruin manufacturers of textile in this country by subjecting them to competition with European manufacturers who secure cheap labor.

Representative Lafferty of Oregon, a Progressive, the fifth member of that party to speak today, attacked the manner in which the Underwood bill was prepared.

"It was written," he said, "by Underwood, and underwritten by Woodrow. I would suggest that it be called the 'Woodrow-Underwood bill.'"

NOTED SPEAKERS URGE REPEAL OF CANAL TOLL LAW

They Hold, at International Law Meeting, Question Is for Diplomats.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Speakers at today's meeting of the American Society of International Law maintained that the United States was under a moral and constitutional obligation to submit the canal tolls controversy to arbitration. It also was held Congress should at once repeal the tolls exemption act and submit the matter to diplomatic negotiation.

Hannis Taylor, former minister to Spain, declared on the settlement of the controversy hinged the century-old friendship between the United States and Great Britain and voiced an earnest plea to Congress to repeal the tolls act to permit diplomatic negotiations for an amicable adjustment of the question.

Amos S. Herschey, professor of International Law at the University of Indiana, was another speaker who desired to see the question submitted to arbitration. He said that unless Congress sees fit to repeal that part of the Panama Canal act regarding the exemption of coastwise tolls, the United States is under an undoubted international obligation to enter into agreement with Great Britain to arbitrate the controversy.

A letter from the late Prof. John Westlake of London was read. He maintained it was necessary "that an injury be actually sustained before a justifiable action arises."

The discussion was participated in by Edmond F. Traube of Louisville, N. D. Harris of Chicago and Gen Peter C. Haines, U. S. A., retired.

The following officers for next year were elected: president, Elihu Root of New York; vice-presidents, Chief Justice White, Justice William R. Day, Philander C. Knox, Andrew Carnegie, Joseph H. Choate, Jown W. Foster, George Gray, William H. Taft, William Marrow, Richard Olney, Oscar S. Straus, Jacob M. Dickinson, William J. Bryan and Horace Porter. James Brown Scott was re-elected secretary and Chandler P. Anderson, treasurer. A banquet tonight closed the meeting.

The creation of a permanent court of international law at The Hague in place of the present Hague tribunal was discussed by Minister Loudon of the Netherlands, at the banquet. From this he entered upon the establishment of an academy of international law, the first session of which is to be held this summer at The Hague. Should this first session be a success, the donation of more than a million dollars has been promised by Andrew Carnegie for a building and the necessary chairs on international law subjects.

Greggers W. W. Gram, Minister of State of Norway, made an address of felicitation upon the excellent relations existing between the United States and Norway.

Prof. Albert B. Hart of Harvard University deprecated the modern tendency to violate international treaty obligations on the slightest pretext.

FORMER PASTOR GOW TO ASK BOARD FOR PARDON

MONTGOMERY CITY, April 26.—Clyde Gow, a reformer preacher of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who is serving a four-year term in the penitentiary in connection with the murder of Miss Elizabeth Gleason of Lincoln County, Mo., today published a notice that he would apply for a pardon or a parole.

Gow has been studying law in the penitentiary and probably will follow that profession. It was stated today that the case of Dr. W. A. Hemphill, who was tried and convicted in the same case, will be dismissed. Hemphill was senteced to two years in the penitentiary, but secured a new trial.

FUGITIVE UNDER A 13-YEAR SENTENCE MADE GOOD; FREED

Pardon Is Granted to Kansan Who Killed Man in 1892, Then Broke Jail.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOPEKA, Kan., April 26.—A Kansas man, convicted of murder in the second degree, sentenced to 13 years in prison, who did not serve a day of the sentence and who has not even seen the prison, has been granted a pardon by Gov. George H. Hodges, because the man had "made good." He is Volley L. Smith, now an assistant engineer in the United States Navy, a man with a record for efficiency and bravery in the service of his country.

Smith was sentenced to prison at the crest of the wave of Populism. He was prosecuted by a man who knew no law, was not even admitted to practice, and he was defended by two of the shrewdest attorneys in Kansas.

But great legal ability failed to do Smith any good, as the Populists had little faith in lawyers and less faith in the courts and a Populist jury found him guilty and demanded punishment. That the sentence was never carried out was due to Smith's own efforts and probably with the aid of a Sheriff.

In the winter of 1892, Volley Smith, then a boy of 17 years, drifted into Minneapolis, Ottawa County, Kan. He went to work with an ice crew putting up natural ice. The boy seemed to have a sort of a habit of "getting in bad" with other people. He was cross and crabbed and made cutting remarks about everything and everybody. Naturally he drew the ire of the older men of the crew and men began "picking" on him.

Delighted in Baiting Boy.

Among the crew was George Allen Wilson, about 25 years old and more or less of a bully. He took particular delight in baiting Smith. They quarreled almost incessantly and about anything.

One day Smith made some slighting remark about a girl that Wilson had taken to an entertainment, and Wilson heard about it. He sent word to Smith to meet him at a restaurant one Sunday afternoon to settle the difficulty. Wilson incidentally made a few remarks to the messenger about what would happen to Smith when they should meet.

The boy was not a coward and he decided to go to the restaurant. But first he went to a hardware store and bought a gun. Wilson was so much older and larger that Smith determined to be prepared to defend his life, as Wilson had threatened to beat him "within an inch of his life."

When Smith got to the restaurant the landlady made a remark and Smith flared back. The woman slapped his face. Just then Wilson came in, grabbed Smith, choked him and bumped his head against the wall.

Smith tried to escape, but another man grabbed him as he was running for the door and held the boy until Wilson came up and began talking and preparing to give Smith a fine pummeling. While he was being held by another man, Smith drew his revolver and shot Wilson through the heart.

Populist Jury Convicts.

The killing attracted much attention in Ottawa County and the Minneapolis courthouse was crowded when the case was called for trial. Some of Smith's friends, who believed the boy was not guilty of crime, sent to eastern Kansas and employed two well-known criminal lawyers to conduct the defense. On the other hand the commissioners of Ottaway County sent to Salina and secured R. A. Lovett to assist County Attorney E. A. Halderman with the prosecution.

Halderman had been elected County Attorney of Ottawa County on the crest of the Populist wave in Kansas. He wasn't elected because he was a real, sure enough lawyer; but because everyone had confidence in the man's integrity and he was a first-class campaigner. Further than this, the trained judiciary and members of the bar were not in high standing with the Populists just at that time.

With the trial of the Smith case at hand, Halderman realized that something must be done. He knew that the men conducting the defense were shrewd, clever lawyers, and he feared the worst. But Halderman's natural cleverness won. He succeeded in getting a jury of reliable Populists, who hung fervently on the County Attorney's remarks and promptly returned a verdict of second degree murder. Smith was convicted March 3, 1892. He was sentenced to 13 years in prison. The case went to the Supreme Court, but that tribunal affirmed the decision of the lower court.

Escapes From Jail.

It was a few days after the decision came down from the Supreme Court that the Minneapolis jailer announced one morning that his boy murder prisoner was missing. No one has explained fully just how Smith escaped. No one seemed to make a very diligent effort to return the boy to jail. County Attorney Halderman was perfectly satisfied with the result of the trial. His record as a trial lawyer had been vindicated and whitewashed and varnished by that Populist jury and besides Halderman was not retained by the county to personally chase criminals. Stories of the case, as they drift down from 20 years ago, also indicate that perhaps the Sheriff—himself a Populist—was also a bit timid in pursuing the slayer of Wilson. Then the county gradually forgot the case.

Smith went to the Pacific Coast and joined the navy as a stoker, the lowest grade employe in the service. He worked hard, was always on the job, never drank, was willing to do more than his share and got promotions each year, first to supervising stoker with a gang under him, then foreman of the boiler room, then as an oiler in the engine room, and on up through the various grades of the power branch of the service, until now he is an assistant engineer. He studied all the time he was in the service and is one of the expert marine engine men of the navy.

Prosecutor Gets Pardon.

His mother lived near Minneapolis at the time of the murder and later in Minneapolis. For 15 years she gave up her son as dead and moved to Oklahoma. Then one day a letter followed her from the former home to her home in Oklahoma. One day Halderman, the man who prosecuted her son, was at Enid, Ok. He met Mrs. Smith on the street and talked to her about her son.

As the result of that meeting and the information communicated to him by the mother, Halderman returned to Kansas and began working to get the pardon for the young man. All of the county officials of Ottawa County, now living, the five surviving jurors who tried the case and many others who knew the case, urged the Governor to grant the pardon.

Halderman did not tell Mrs. Smith that he was trying to get a pardon for her son.

"I just decided to do what I could to set the matter right," Halderman told the Governor. "I decided to get that pardon if it took 10 years. Volley ought never to have been convicted. Halderman admitted to the Governor that he had prevented evidence being presented to the jury that would have resulted in an acquital. He did not tell the Governor what this was, but asserted that it was of such a nature that no jury could or would have convicted the boy of the murder.

No effort had been made to get a pardon for Smith and no effort had been made to capture him. For four or five years the officers of Ottawa County have known just where Smith was and it is probable that the naval authorities would have turned him over to the State of Kansas at any time upon demand. But no one in Ottawa County now believes Smith deliberately murdered Wilson and all believe that he shot in self-defense and should not have been convicted.

The full pardon, restoring to Smith his rights as a citizen in Kansas has been sent to him and another copy has been sent to his mother at her last known address. The home of the mother is not definitely known, as she has moved twice since Halderman last saw her.

SHECKARD'S DRIVE IN TENTH INNING WINS FOR CARDS

Huggins Starts Rally in Extra Session That Culminates When Ex-Cub Drives in Winning Runs, Score 6-5

By W. J. O'Connor

JAMES TILDEN SHECKARD projected a single, one of five in a turbulent tenth inning rally, that scored Magee and Mowrey and routed the Reds at Robison Field yesterday afternoon. The ultimate count was 6—5 for the Cardinals.

The Britton entry, under a good ride by Jockey Huggins, who applied whip and spur in the added lap, came from behind and won going away. There wasn't a man out when Sheckard shot forth a single that clinched the verdict.

When Huggins faced the music in the extra round, his team was two runs to the bad. The little manager had reached first each of his four previous trip to the plate and he responded in the tenth with a sharp single to left. Magee staggered Fromme, who relieved Benton in the first round, with another single to right, Hug hurrying to third. Fromme was derricked and J. Johnson, a Winnebago Indian, was called in.

Koney Beats Out Bunt.

Mowrey kept up the cannonading by lifting a single to short left, Hug scoring. Koney went up with instructions to sacrifice and he laid down a beauty bunt and beat it out, filling the bases. Then came Sheckard, a Cub cast-off, who had registered four successive swat failures in his previous attempts. Jimmy got a toe-hold and drove a wicked liner down the left field foul line. Magee cantered home while Mowrey legged it hard and slid under Bescher's throw for an eyelash decision.

Curtain!

It was a wholesome victory and should do a lot to put the Cardinals on a firmer base from which to continue their operations.

When Hug led the tenth inning charge, the enemy was entrenched behind what seemed a safe lead. They had routed Harmon who started on the hillock. Big Bob was wild and after struggling along in a desultory way for five rounds, he blew a tire in the sixth, when he walked Bescher and Bates and beaned Tinker.

It was at this ticklish juncture that Polly Perritt was called in. Polly was a bit wild himself and got in the hole hurling to Hobby. As a result the latter cracked a single to right, scoring Bescher; but when Bates also tried to count, he came to grief on Sheckard's great throw to McLean. Larry tagged well, diving into Bates' cleats. The fans breathed easy when Marsans fanned for the second out, but Egan surprised with a double that Magee messed up and Tinker raced home.

Grant walked, filling the hassocks, but Charley O'Leary broke up the Red rally by spearing Clark's grounder back of second and shooting the runner dead at Koneyville.

The Cards, especially Huggins, Mowrey and Koney, kept hustling and they won by a desperate finish.

SALLEE TACKLES REDS TODAY; HUNT RELEASED

HARRY SALLEE, the Higginsport Huckleberry, will hurl today's game against the Reds, Manager Huggins announced last night. Sal started Thursday's bout, but registered a failure. He probably will be opposed either by Ralph Works or Recruit Harger.

Ben Hunt, the towering southpaw who hails from Tacoma, Wash., has been turned back to the club whence he came. He was purchased under an optional agreement that he would make good. Hug has two southpaws left in Sallee and Willis.

Tinker's Attempt to Outwit Hug Gives Sheckard a Chance to Star

JIMMY SHECKARD, hero of the day, slipped into the box score through Joe Tinker's attempt to outwit Manager Huggins in juggling pitchers and batters. When the game opened Tinker sent Benton to the firing pit. Steven Evans started the game in right field for the Cards. However, when it came time for Evans to bat against Benton, there were three men on, so Hug benched Steve and called for Teddy Cather, a right-handed hitter.

After Cather had broken into the game by having his name announced, Tinker deftly benched Benton and called in Fromme. Then up jumped Hug, who was perched on third base, and called for Jimmy Sheckard, a veteran left-handed hitter, to swing a club against Fromme's side-arm shoots. Jimmy failed in the first round but he delivered beautifully in the tempestuous tenth.

Benton's wildness gave the Cards a chance to choke the sacks in the first round. Hug was hit and after Magee died, Mowrey and Koney walked, but on Sheck's fly to Bates, Hug was doubled at the plate.

The Tinkerites gleaned their first run in the third, when Clark opened with a walk. After Fromme fanned, Bescher also walked and Bates came through with a single, scoring Clark. Bescher went to third, Bates then died stealing and Tinker raised to Oakes.

The Cards went into the lead in the fifth, thanks to Magee's terrific triple. O'Leary started trouble with a single to left, but McLean fanned. O'Leary then stole second. Harmon's best was a pop to Grant, but Hug inserted a single and O'Leary stopped at third. Charley and Hug counted on Magee's drive past Marsans. It was a homeric swat.

The Reds took the lead in the sixth when Harmon retired with the bases filled. Polly Perritt came in to pitch to Hobby, who singled to right. Bescher scored, but Bates was out, Sheckard to McLean. Larry tagged well. Marsans fanned for the second out. Egan doubled, scoring Tinker next. Grant walked, filling the bases. Then O'Leary gloved Clark's embryo single and chucked to Koney for the out.

The Cards squared the count in the eighth. Hug was hit, advanced on Magee's out and scored on Mowrey's single.

The Reds took what seemed a commanding lead in their half of the tenth. Hobby singled and moved up on a passed ball. He went to third on Marsans' single, and Marsans moved up on Oakes' toss to the plate. Reb figured Hobby would try to score. Egan popped to O'Leary, but Grant singled through the box, Hobby and Marsans scoring. O'Leary made a sensational stop back of second on Clark's roller and tossed to Hug, forcing Grant. Mowrey whipped out Fromme.

Perritt gave Bescher a big lead in the ninth and he stole second. It wasn't McLean's fault.

Perritt is credited with the victory. The Reds thumped him hard, but he got great support. The defeat is charged to Johnson.

"Five dollars for you, Egan," yelled Umpire Brennan when the Reds, on the bench, got noisy in the tenth.

Fromme gave McLean three wide ones, then curved over three strikes in the fifth. Larry isn't hitting.

BOBBY GRESHAM LOSES BOUT TO K. C. A. C. BOXER

Undefeated M. A. C. Amateur Punished by Nate Johnson—Local Club Loses Meet.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 26.—Four boxers from the Kansas City Athletic Club demonstrated their superiority over the quartet of biffers from the Missouri Athletic Club of St. Louis at K. C. A. C. here tonight and the fifth lost to his Mound City opponent in the return dual boxing championships for the leadership of the Western A. A. U.

In three of the four bouts won by the local battlers there was little question of superiority, in the fourth matters were nearly even. The feature event of the evening was the first of the card between Nate Jackson and Bobby Gresham. The two boys pummelled each other until both were nearly exhausted at the end of the second session. In the final round Jackson came back and had his man all but knocked out when the bell rang. There was no disputing the decision. Jackson fought the best fight exhibited among amateurs here for years, while Bobby was no slouch. He had the crowd climbing over the ropes in the last session.

Fleming Loses Decision.

In the 125-pound class Tommy Murphy, K. C. A. C., was given the decision over Tom Flemming, M. A. C., at the end of the fourth round. Three sessions were not enough to show the local lad's class, but in the fourth he had it all over the Cherry Circle batter.

The third fight of the card was the only decision that could be disputed by the Mound City boxing contingent who came here headed by Eddie Randall. Jimmie Connors, K. C. A. C., was handed the honors over Harry Claves, and the scrap was nearly even throughout the going.

Charley Ferguson, K. C. A. C., had it all over Richard Garton in the 145-round division.

In the last bout, the 158-pound section, Loren Sternheimer, M. A. C., beat Joe Miller of the local athletic organization after the biffing had been stretched four rounds to hand the decision. From the opening bell until the last decision was announced there was something doing.

MILLERS TO MEET BEYERS AT PASTIME PARK TODAY

Both teams won in the first series last Sunday. Rube Petri will be paired with Schoendiest as the Belleville battery, while Tex Hall and Grimmins will work for the Millers.

Other games scheduled for today are between the Belleville Maroons and Typos at Belleville and the Wacker-Henderies and Alton Blues at Alton.

McKinley Nine Takes Lead by Beating Soldan

South Side High School Team Outplays Rivals at All Points.

The McKinley high school baseball nine caused another surprise by decisively defeating the Soldan High team, Saturday morning at Pastime Park, assuming the leadership in the race for the supremacy in the High School League.

Coach Schiek's proteges were not considered serious contenders for the title in the pre-season form.

McKinley garnered a total of 16 hits off of Hollocher, the Soldan twirler, while on the defense they were charged with two misplays. Heimueller, who was so instrumental in defeating Central High last Saturday, was again effective and only allowed seven hits.

The score by innings:

Innings—	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	T.	H.	E.
McKinley	0	1	1	1	0	1	3	0	x—7		16	2

Batteries: McKinley—Heimueller and Brock; Soldan—Hollocher and Ruel.

Central High and Yeatman High teams will play off their postponed game Monday afternoon at Pastime Park, the game to start at 3:30.

EAST ST. LOUIS TEAM TO PLAY 999S TODAY

The East St. Louis team of the Interstate Trolley League will buck the 999s, who are trailing the procession, this afternoon at Lansdowne Park. Bresler or Becker will work for the East St. Louis aggregation, while Bubb and King will be in the points for the 999s.

The Belleville Peters will entertain the New Douglas team at Belleville, while the Harrisons go to Mount Olive. The Belleville Peters are leading the league with two victories and no defeats.

Deputy Sheriffs in Baseball Game.

Deputy Sheriffs assigned to the courthouse and those assigned to the municipal courts building played a game of baseball at Manion's Park yesterday afternoon. The municipal building team won by a score of 7 to 4.

The feature of the game was the batting of Bud Gray and Arthur Edens. Edens made a three-base knock in the eighth, which materially assisted his team. Ed Wright got much applause from the spectators on a brilliant catch.

Kissell and Friesmayer were battery for the courthouse team and Stanton and Dreyer for their opponents.

MISSOURI WEIGHT STAR SETS MARK IN DISCUS THROW

Talbot Beats Sheridan's Figure With a Toss of Over 142 Feet.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 26.—Western runners took two of the three big events at the annual Carnival of relay races and field events on Franklin Field, today, the University of Illinois winning the one-mile relay college championship of America, and Michigan taking the two-mile relay national championship.

The University of Pennsylvania won the other big national championship, the four-mile contest.

In winning the two-mile relay, Michigan cut two-fifths of a second off the record, the runners covering the distance in 8 minutes flat.

The Pennsylvania freshmen, with Meredith, the Olympic champion, won the one-mile freshman relay national championship in the record time of 3 min 25 4-5 sec. The former record was 3 min 26 4-5 sec. The clipping of this record was due to Meredith's running, who covered his quarter mile in 50 seconds.

Talbott Sets Record.

A new world's record for the discus throw was made by L. Talbott, formerly of Pennsylvania state college, and Cornell. He threw the weight 142 feet ½ inch. The world's record is 141 feet 4 3-8 inches, made by M. J. Sheridan in 1911.

Nicholson Ties Record.

John Patrick Nicholson of Missouri University furnished a queer surprise in the 120-yard high hurdle race. Nicholson won his heat in 15 1-5 seconds, tieing the world's record. Shortly after, in the semi-final, he was unplaced in 15 3-5 seconds, knocking down so many hurdles he was disqualified.

Nicholson won this event at the Penn relay games last year.

Thatcher, another Missouri U. representative, finished second in the discus.

Stone Weakens in Ninth and Sox Beat Browns, 1-0

Stovallites Get 2 Hits

"Lefty" Russell, Chicago Recruit, Outgames Stovall's Young Right-Hander and Not a Brownie Gets Past Second Base.

By Clarence F. Lloyd.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sporting Staff.

CHICAGO, April 26.

DWIGHT STONE, the Browns' tall right-hander from the Ogden (Utah) club, hurled an excellent game against the White Sox this afternoon, but "Lefty" Russell—not the former $12,000 Mackman—pitched a bit better and Callahan's clan won, 1—0, evening up the current series.

Russell blanked the Browns for nine rounds allowing but two hits. Both came in the same round, but Wallace, who poled the first, was the only Brownie to reach second base. He got there when, after making his single, Stone scratched a base hit through Russell.

Stone Good in Pinch.

While Stone was found for seven hits, his game was good enough to win nine out of ten contests, but today he had no chance of being bracketed as his mates failed to collect a single run. The fact that he was hit harder and did not show the same good control as Russell indicated that he was forced to pitch a more strenuous contest than the Sox. Men were constantly on bases, but Stone came through in nice fashion until the fatal ninth round when he weakened and yielded the winning marker.

Starting this frame Schalk singled to right and moved to second on Russell's sacrifice, Agnew to Stovall. Rath coaxed his third free ticket and after Lord lifted a long fly to Williams Schalk raced to third, but Rath hugged first. He pilfered second a moment later undisturbed.

With men on third and second and two gone, it was up to Shanon Collins, the husky right fielder, delivered the needed blow. It was a long drive midway between Johnston and Walker, and would probably have netted him a triple, but only a single was needed.

HAMILTON TO TACKLE BENZ IN FINAL GAME

CHICAGO, April 26.

THE Browns wind up their stay in Chicago and also their first Western trip in the third game against the Sox tomorrow. In an effort to win the odd game, Manager Stovall will probably use Earl Hamilton, the clever young southpaw, whose last out resulted in a victory over the Naps, Tuesday.

Joe Benz or Frank Lange will probably pitch for the Sox. After the game the Browns depart for St. Louis.

While Stone weakened in the last frame and allowed the winning run to go over, Russell on the other hand seemed to tighten. In fact the Browns' ninth, with the heavy end up, saw the men retired in one-two-three order. Johnston was a victim on strikes, Schalk throwing him out. Williams also struck out, while Pratt's best effort was a foul to Schalk.

Besides the two hits Russell issued only a pair of passes, one going to Stone in the third with two down, while Williams coaxed the other in the fourth, with one dead. Neither got past the initial cushion.

Death of Shotton's Brother Robs Browns of Fleet Center Fielder

THE death of Frank Shotton, younger brother of Bert Shotton, the Browns' speedy center fielder, made it necessary for Ernie Walker, the former Montgomery fly chaser, to show in the middle pasture. Like the most of his mates, he was fooled by Russell's shoots, failing to connect safely in four efforts at the plate. He made a couple of nice catches, however. He'll remain in center until Shotton returns.

The star fielding play of the game was turned by Jack Johnston in the seventh. Schalk stung a long liner to left, but the Longview citizen raced back to the fence and grabbed the ball while on the dead run. It took a triple away from the kid backstop.

Both umpires were harsh with the Browns. In the sixth Collins put a long liner safely in left. Johnston made a quick recovery and a beautiful peg to Wallace, who seemed to have nipped Shannon sliding into second. Even Sox rooters groaned when they saw Wallace put the ball on the runner, but Ferguson called him safe. In the Browns' sixth O'Loughlin called Pratt out on a horrible looking third strike. Derrill protested.

When Borton was hit by a pitched ball starting the Sox eighth, Manager Callahan sent Zeider in to run for him. In Chicago they usually will give odds if Zieder is on first with none gone he'll score. In this case he didn't, although he got around to third on Mattick's sacrifice and Schaller's long drive to Walker. Weaver's best was a top to Stone.

Cal made a switch in his outfield. Davy Jones, the ex-Tiger, who has been performing in left field, was benched in favor of Walter Schaller, another former Jungaleer. Schaller got a single and also coaxed a pair of passes from Stone.

A drizzling rain just before game time held the attendance to about 4000.

Russell is a former Fort Worth (Texas League) hurler, his outing today was the third of the season. He has performed in nice style in games against Cleveland and Detroit.

Auto Polo Games Postponed.

DALWITZ FORCED TO LIMIT TO WIN BOUT WITH WEST

Garrison Finish Is All That Saves Charley at New Stag A. C. Show.

By Harry S. Sharpe.
The Post-Dispatch's Boxing Expert.

The Stag Athletic Club, 3621 South Levee, broke into the professional boxing game last night and entertained its members with three eight-round bouts that were of more than ordinary interest.

In the main event Charlie Dalwitz of this city, boxing Emmett West of Moreno, Ill., at 128 pounds, had a narrow escape from defeat and only won out by his excellent work in the last three rounds. In the early rounds of this bout Dalwitz was out-boxed by West and resorted to much rough work, such as hitting while holding and when breaking from the clinches, for which he was several times cautioned by Referee Tommy Sullivan and threatened with disqualification unless he desisted.

Dalwitz Puzzled at Start.

Dalwitz was very aggressive, but in the early rounds seemed somewhat slow and was made to miss many times by the clever work of West, who scored frequently with a straight left and overhand right. This latter blow seemed to puzzle Dalwitz and he seemed unable to avoid it. If this blow had been one with force to it Dalwitz would have fared much worse.

The turning point came in the sixth round, just after its commencement, when Dalwitz landed a hard left swing to the jaw and West was knocked down, but rose at once without waiting for the referee's count. A moment later West went down again from a hard right smash. He again failed to remain down for the count, and when he got up was very wobbly, but managed to save himself by clinching.

To make matters worse for West, he shortly afterwards collided with Dalwitz head-on, and his right eye was almost closed as a result. For the next two rounds West was swinging wildly, while Dalwitz was doing some good boxing and hard hitting, and at the end of the bout he was the winner by a comfortable margin.

Kern Shades Henley.

In the semi-windup John Kern of this city was the winner over Pete Henley of Philadelphia. This bout went the limit and the weight agreed upon was 145 pounds. Kern is said to have been just under this, while Henley was reported to have weighed in a fraction less than 135. When this became known it was freely predicted that Henley would be knocked out by the hard-swinging Kern, but the latter found Henley a tough piece of fighting timber.

The Philadelphia man showed himself to be an experienced boxer and displayed good generalship, saving himself many times by timing Kern's swings and falling in to them to break their force. In addition, he used good footwork to keep Kern from setting himself for a hard swing or punch and was successful in this most of the time.

Kern was very aggressive and did manage to get home some hard blows, but on these occasions Henley emerged with a smile. Kern was much the stronger and crowded Henley continually, but the latter covered cleverly when caught in a mix-up.

Harry Ockel outpointed Jack Harrington in the preliminary at 140 pounds. The bout went the limit and was very close, but Ockel landed the oftener and his boxing style was better. Both the boxers landed some hard blows, and in the fifth round Harrington landed one that almost put Ockel out.

Though no decisions were rendered in the ring, Referee Sullivan, after the bouts, gave it as his opinion that Dalwitz, Kern and Ockel were the winners.

The bouts were given before a packed house.

MERE BULK WILL NOT LAND TITLE FOR CARL MORRIS

Oklahoma White Hope Shows Lack of Skill and Speed in Bout Here.

IS IGNORANT OF RULES

Big Fellow's Avoirdupois and Power Alone Defeated Belmont.

By Harry S. Sharpe,

Referee for Local Clubs and the Post-Dispatch's Boxing Authority.

The introduction of Carl Morris to local ring followers satisfied a curiosity to see him, but his showing was a decided disappointment. He gave no evidence of being a boxer, and 's a rough-and-ready mauler of considerable ability only because of his great size and strength. He is extremely cumbersome in his movements about the ring, strikes out awkwardly, and his blows have no snap and precision. Besides this, he appears to have but little knowledge of ring rules and generalship.

Morris makes a much better impression out of the ring than in it. He talks glibly of past experience and future plans to win the championship, but his actual accomplishments in the ring fail to bear out his theories.

Morris Weighed Over 218.

When pitted against Kingdon Belmont in the ring of the Future City Athletic Club in this city last Tuesday night, Morris probably outweighed his opponent all of fifty pounds or more. He announced his weight as 218 pounds, but some good judges placed it at 230 or better. He claimed to be in good condition, and looked it, with the possible exception of some little rolls of fat about the waist, but as he is a man of immense stature it is likely that he must carry a little extra weight at all times in order to preserve his health, as he would stale very quickly if reduced to leanness. He is no longer green to the ring, has been boxing with considerable regularity and has recently had the benefit of tuition and workout by "Kansas City" Jack Johnson, a gigantic negro of more than ordinary boxing ability.

Notwithstanding all these advantages, Morris was unable to land a single punch on Belmont that had knockout force to it. Belmont was counted out in the third round, but it was because the strength of the smaller man gave way before that of the larger one in the pulling and tugging that took place in this bout and not because of punishing effect from blows.

Mere Weight Counts.

Terry Turner, a middleweight of Cincinnati, whom Belmont met before the Future City Athletic Club on Jan. 10 of this year, hit the St. Louis man cleaner and harder blows than Morris did, and Belmont was the winner on points at the end of eight rounds. What clean, hard punches had failed to do on that occasion, weight and strength accomplished when Belmont met Morris.

Weight and strength alone, however, will not suffice to win the heavyweight championship, and this seems to be about all Morris has. At least it appears so, judging by his mediocre work against Belmont, who is a mere novice at the game, having graduated not so very long ago from the amateur class in this city after a few bouts because of the scarcity of amateur heavyweights who could box him.

Since becoming a professional he has not engaged in many bouts, so that his experience is quite limited. Considering this lack of experience, extreme nervousness and great difference in weight and strength it does seem as if Morris, aspirant to the world's championship, should have had but little difficulty in defeating Belmont by scientific boxing method.

Morris Hits at Random.

There were times in that contest when Belmont drew his gloves close to his face and crouched for protection, sometimes in front of Morris and sometimes to the side, when a Corbett, a Fitzsimmons, a Johnson or a McCoy would have deftly brushed aside a protecting glove and shot in a punch that would have ended matters then and there, but Morris belabored Belmont at random, with no precision to his blows. At these times Belmont was not holding onto Morris, and the latter's excuse th[illegible] he was unable to show much box[illegible] ability because of Belmont's per[illegible]ency in clutching him about the [illegible]y does not hold good in these in[illegible]nces.

Morris' ignorance of the Queensberry rules are hardly to be tolerated in a boxer of his experience and aspirations, and the fact that Belmont was just as bad doesn't make matters any better for Morris. If he is the boxer he claims to be, there was no occasion for the rough tactics indulged in by him, even though Belmont was a constant offender, and he should have been able to win easily enough on straight boxing ability.

Belmont Also at Fault.

Belmont's repeated violation of the rules gives Morris an excuse and prevented his being disqualified, because both were guilty of flagrant violation and one deserved disqualification just as much as the other, and the only remedy that appeared possible was to stop the bout and refuse to permit either of them to continue.

Stopping a bout for a technical violation of the rules should be a last resort, made necessary only when admonition and other methods have failed. If the rights of the spectators and the spirit of sportsmanship are to prevail, then these contests are not to be won or lost upon a mere technicality, but upon boxing merit. There are times, of course, when disqualification is deserved and is necessary to protect the sport and all concerned. When a boxer is doing all he can to observe the rules and his opponent is violating them by deliberately boxing unfairly, then disqualification of the latter is necessary in justice to the former. When both share equal guilt this necessity does not arise, except when a contest degenerates into a fight without regard to rules, and then it is stopped because it ceases to be sport.

When NOT to Disqualify.

It often happens that a boxer violates a rule without intending to do wrong, and will correct his mistake if called on to do so. It is true that the blow delivered cannot be recalled, but if that blow be one that does not appear to have injured or reduced the chances of the man struck from winning, it seems to me that the spirit of sportsmanship does not cry out for a disqualification, though a caution against repetition be justified.

Speaking of a boxer who hits in violation of the rules and then says he "doesn't quite understand the rules here," a local critic remarks that "Sharpe dislikes to disqualify him before the crowd has had the slightest run for its money."

I confess there is some truth in this statement, because I believe that the club member is entitled to see the performance he has paid for unless it is necessary to stop it in order to prevent an injustice being done.

My critic goes somewhat further when he says, "Either Sharpe is wrong or the rules under which local boxing is pursued are wrong." Perhaps it is a little of both. The rules will bear amendment, and my interpretation of them may or may not be correct. There is no authority on the subject. The rules are ambiguous in many particulars, and there is no defined interpretation of them, nor has there ever been. It is probable there are no two referees in America who give the rules exactly the same interpretation. Common sense has had to prevail in their interpretation, application and enforcement, guided by the spirit and reason which prompted the writing of and adoption of the code.

St. Louis Hurdler Who Tied World's Record Yesterday Lost in Semi-Final

J. P. Nicholson

JOHN PATRICK NICHOLSON of St. Louis, captain of the Missouri University track and field team, lived up to his reputation for in-and-out performances over the "big sticks," yesterday, when he competed in the 120-yard high hurdle race at the Penn U. relay games, Philadelphia.

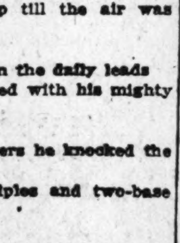
Nicholson won his heat in the big event, almost a national championship, by doing the 120 yards in 15 1-5 seconds, tieing the official world's record for the event.

In the semi-final, however, Nicholson fell into his bad habit of knocking over the obstacles, going "through" so many hurdles that he was disqualified. The semi-final was won in 15 3-5 seconds, two-fifths slower than Nick's performance in the previous heat.

This is the third time that Nicholson has equaled the world's mark for this event. Only one performer has ever surpassed this mark. Fred Kelley, Olympic championship winner, competing for the University of Southern California, recently won the event in 15 seconds flat.

The mark, however, has not yet been made official and will not be until later in the year, when the A. A. U. committee investigates it.

SPORT SALAD



By L. C. DAVIS.

'TWAS EVER THUS.

A star there was and he used to shine
In many departments of the nine.

He led the batting and fielding, too,
And cussed the ump till the air was blue.

His name appeared in the daily leads
And the public thrilled with his mighty deeds.

And out of the pitchers he knocked the spots
With home runs, triples and two-base swats.

He ran the bases with reckless dash
And caused the records to go to smash.

In short, this star was a demon right
And had a cinch on the calcium light.

He wore a cap with a rubber band
In order to let his head expand.

So, he said to the boss: "I must have more pay;"
But the boss replied with a firm "Nay, nay."

Then the star held out and the boss gave in
And signed him up with a sickly grin.

And the papers printed the gladsome news
And all the rooters did then enthuse.

The star returned to the game once more
And they gave him flowers and cheers galore.

He doffed his hat to a lusty shout
And the pitcher proceeded to strike him out.

He set himself for an easy fly
And the pellet plastered him in the eye.

The same thing happened again next day
And the Boss' head took a tinge of gray.

And forever after the air he smote,
For all the pitchers had got his goat.

And of all sad words of tongue or pen
The saddest of all are: "Stung again!"

CUBS BATTER PIRATES' PITCHERS AND WIN 7—2

PITTSBURG, Pa., April 26.—The infield of the Pirates went to pieces today in the ninth and Chicago won, 7 to 2.

After Butler, in the last inning, had slipped up on what looked like an easy double play, the Cubs made four runs on a two-bagger by Phelan, base on balls to Zimmerman and Bridwell and a wild throw to the grand stand by McCarthy.

Saier's home run into the bleachers with Zimmerman on first in the second inning gave the Cubs their first two runs. O'Toole, who relieved Adams in the third, pitched fine ball, but his support in the infield was not good.

STENGEL'S HOMER HELPS SUPERBAS BEAT GIANTS

BROOKLYN, April 26.—Brooklyn and New York had a battle royal before a big crowd today, the locals winning 5 to 3 by better hitting. Long drives for extra bases played a big part in the scoring, which was confined to three innings. Brooklyn began it in the fourth, when Cutshaw scratched an infield hit and came home on Hummel's triple. In the next, Smith led off with a single and scored on Fishers' triple, the latter tallying when Stengel singled to center.

New York tied the score in the seventh on hits by Doyle and Herzog, an intentional pass to Myers and a long triple by McCormick, batting for Wiltse. The winning runs were made by Brooklyn in the same inning, when, with two out, Ragon, batting left-handed against Crandall, hit safely and scored with Stengel on the latter's homer to center.

30 SCHOOLS WILL BE REPRESENTED IN STADIUM MEET

Leland Stanford, Northwestern, U. of California and Others to Send Teams.

By Robert C. Newman.

Thirty colleges have announced that they would have representatives here to compete in the big athletic carnival to be held at Francis Field under the auspices of the Missouri Valley Conference May 31.

According to Arno Krause, secretary of the Committee on Arrangements that has charge of the affair, Missouri, Illinois, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa State, Drake, Western Reserve, Kansas Agricultural, Nebraska, Wesleyan, St. Louis U., Tulane of Florida, Northwestern, Rolla School of Mines, Westminster, Grinnell, Simpson, Purdue, Drury, Colorado, U. of Southern Colorado, Ohio State, Cincinnati, Leland Stanford, James Milliken and the University of Southern California accepted the invitations that were sent out.

Last year the meet was held at Des Moines, but only the schools of the Valley conference were represented.

This year, however, through the selection of the big stadium as the scene of competition and the facilities for reaching St. Louis by out-of-town teams, nearly a hundred schools have been invited to compete. The meet may be staged annually here, as far as the Missouri Valley Conference is concerned, but that is contingent on the success of the local event.

Meet Will Cost $3000.

This year it will take in the neighborhood of $3000 to defray all the expenses of the athletes.

The big concrete stand will be divided off into sections to accommodate the rooters of the Valley Conference schools. The general admission will be 50 cents, 75 cents for grand stand seats and $1 for the box seats.

About 30 more colleges are expected to be heard from within the next week, and the best athletes west of the Alleghenies will be seen in action here.

Horine, the world's premier high jumper, is included in the list of entries by the Leland Stanford University, besides many other notable track stars who were members of the Olympic team. The Northwestern University will send here its relay team that lowered the Western Intercollegiate record a week ago Saturday.

JAYHAWKERS WIN SECOND BATTLE FROM TIGERS, 6—4

LAWRENCE, Kan., April 26.—Kansas made it two straight, defeating Missouri here this afternoon in their baseball series, 6 to 4. Coach Frank sent Bishop, the big Kansas twirler, back at the Tigers, and while they found him for more blows than yesterday, they were unable to get a lead at any time. Bishop won yesterday's game for Kansas, 2—0.

Kansas began the scoring in the first session, the entire team batting and three men scoring off Helmquist's delivery. Capps went in and held Kansas for two innings. Two more Jayhawkers counted in the fourth and another in the sixth.

Missouri scored in the second, two-baggers by Wolsey and Brainard doing it. The Tigers started a rally in seventh, getting three across as result of three baggers by Helmquist and Palfreyman, a walk and Capps' single. Bishop struck out the next two.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Footwork Won't Help You, John.

PERHAPS no more exasperating predicament ever confronted an already exasperated manager than John McGraw of the Giants is now trying to sidestep.

McGraw badly wants to protest the Philadelphia game of Friday, when Substitute McCormick's single, scoring a run that would have won the game, was not allowed because the umpire had not finished announcing the substitution to the crowd. The game went to a tie, afterwards, and McGraw thinks he and his team were robbed of a justly earned victory.

But McGraw can't consistently complain, for two reasons.

McGraw Is on Record.

REASON one is that he once argued with the same Umpire Klem, to have one of his men excused on the very same ground. Two years ago Devore was sent in to run for Meyers and was caught napping off first base. The putout was made before the umpire—Klem, by the way—had finished his announcement of the substitution. McGraw contended that Devore was not in the game until the announcement was official, and therefore was NOT out.

This indicates that McGraw must appreciate the justness of the rule that was enforced against him.

New York Positively Provincial.

THE other and chief reason why McGraw can't complain is that the entire episode is due to the backwardness of the New York club in not providing an announcer instead of imposing that duty on the umpire. Every other club in the League has a hired man to do this work, which is in no way connected with the position of umpire. Had the club been up to date the official's back would not have been turned to the play and the mixup would not have been possible.

It looks very much like retribution and may be the means of ultimately bringing about a system of enunciators to carry official news from the "ump" to the spectators.

Mere Rules Don't Stop Ban B.

IT is interesting to note that, although the rules of baseball have Tyrus Cobb suspended for failing to sign his contract on time, he will play Sunday.

Ban Johnson says so. And what Big Ban says, goes—except at banquets—whether its down in the book or not.

Johnson, Saturday, wired the Detroit club to use Cobb, pending action by the National Commission, which will not take place until Wednesday, when Tyrus is to be washed whiter than snow by the commission.

Imagine President Lynch issuing any such order as that and getting away with it!

A Benificent Despot.

BAN JOHNSON is an example of the virtues of autocratic government under a capable despot. For Ban IS a despot. But not a single backward step has baseball taken since his rise to power. Here are a few of the good things that have come to pass since the Big Stick of the baseball world began to flourish:

Suppression of rowdyism on the field.

Substitution of English for profanity among players (reform not altogether complete).

Increase in size and convenience of baseball parks.

Average increase of about 30 percent in salaries of baseball players.

Reduction of the playing time of games by 30 minutes.

Interest of women aroused in baseball.

Organized baseball solidified and made alive again.

Increased dividend for every club in the American League.

He Earns That $25,000.

THESE are only the patent things he has done. Organized baseball owes him even more for what he has done behind the scenes: The wrecks he has prevented, the wars he has averted, the weaknesses he has bolstered and the needed changes he has introduced.

Ban may occasionally come in for a rap or two, now and then, for not playing according to rule. But if he fractures regulations it's generally because he wants to leap quickly to a good result without being delayed by red tape.

Fins and Feathers

WRITTEN BY JOCK BELLAIRS

WITHOUT much fear of bad results, crappie, sunfish, goggle-eye and catfish anglers may go out now. The word has come in from most of the resorts that fishing is getting ripe. So you will make no mistake unless you happen to go to some stream where the water has not had time to settle and lower.

Little invitation seemed necessary. Last Sunday thousands went out. It was a cold, nasty morning, yet the trains which drop one off at this and that spot were well patronized, and the street car lines, ferries and wagon trails had their share.

Long Lake, I am informed, drew perhaps the lion's share. Hundreds went there. The luck was not good, yet all came away satisfied. There was the dyed-in-the-wool advocate who went to Chouteau Slough. Crappie rewarded some of those who went there. Murdock Lake panned the best. If I am correctly told, the catch of crappie in the old place has been remarkable for the past two weeks. The fish have been large and firm. Better, they have given some thrill in the taking.

Beaver Dam lake, up at Macoupin, is ripe. Frank S. Rhodes, the host, cared for a lot of the locals last Sunday. There was "Posey" Sam Goodman, G. Candy, Sam Smith, M. Singer, Dr. A. Rothchild, C. M. Harrington, T. Rueshing and Fred Ahern. All landed creels. Goodman had 25 striped bass and crappie, Candy 20, Singer 20, Rueshing 25 and the others enough to warm the pan. John Murphy, A. W. Shipp and E. E. Stevens caught 50 between them—crappie and striped bass. Charles Hotze brought in 20. H. Benham, the frog hunter, R. Schenkemeyer and E. Schmitt each had a fair mess. Francis Woeber tells me you cannot "fall down" at the lake right now.

Murdock Anglers Enriched.

It is impossible to keep close tab on the catches at Murdock Lake, because John Coopersmith has forgotten how to write. But last Sunday there were 14 at the place. Harry Weise had a bunch of four friends and each caught some jim-dandy specimens of crappie. Jim Gillis, the egg man, was on hand, and, as usual, sought his favorite spot down about the apple tree bend. He landed some beauties. Hugh Madden had a splendid mess when he got home. He sends me word that the crappie he caught were all stretching the scales around the pound mark. Martin Van der Mieden, the yeast man, had some daisy rises and managed to land a good creel. They all report the lake in splendid condition, just right as to depth and in clear, cool shape. In fact, they declare it better than ever.

The Knobel Club crowd went down to the Black River quarters in goodly numbers. Henry Repetto started things by sending up word that he had landed 14 great big crappie. That took Fred Suhr, Frank Becker and son Frank and Charles Crozet down last Sunday. They were followed Monday by Andrew Koenig and Pete Anton and later by more of the boys. I got word back that the water is in good shape and the boys will be able to bring back some good fish. Most of them expect to get home today.

Pair Have a Hard Time.

Last Saturday afternoon, the first off of the season, W. H. Rhedemeyer, chief clerk, and B. M. Benjamin, chief claim clerk of the Illinois Central Railroad, East St. Louis, went to Phalen's to celebrate the event, I am told. All afternoon they fished, waiting patiently. The fish, knowing they were new on the job, failed to accept the bait. Late in the day Rhedemeyer was almost pulled into the lake. He called his able assistant and they managed to land a 75-pound fish. In the struggle they lost their oars, but this didn't affect the situation at all, although they were a half mile midlake. Benjamin, being an expert swimmer, took to the waves and towed the boat ashore, while Rhedemeyer held the fish.

TRENDALL FIGHT SHOULD CLASSIFY PIERCE MATHEWS

Whether He's a "Comer" or a "Dub" Will Be Brought Out Tuesday.

Man of Mystery, Pierce Mathews, is in a fair way to be solved, Tuesday night, when he boxes Harry Trendall in the eight-round feature event of the Future City Athletic Club's weekly show, Tuesday. St. Louis followers of the game have been unable to classify Mathews. In the two or three professional bouts he has fought in or near St. Louis he has shown anything but class. His best effort was when he dropped Danny Cullen, on the East side, at the windup of a short fight. For that bout Cullen had trained at a lid club.

As an amateur Pierce showed fairly well but was beaten as often as he won.

But away from home Pierce has been a bear-cat, apparently. In the Southwest, in Kansas City and in Springfield, Mo., they think Pierce has a lookin with some of the big guns of the lightweight class. He won bout after bout in Springfield and was the meal ticket for Billy McCarney and Lute McCarty, when these members of that white hope championship team were on their insoles in Springfield. A long illness kept him out of the fray for some time, after which he came to and disposed of Cullen handily, his last out.

Cullen Is No "Dub."

Cullen was a stout lad, with some fighting ability. He put up a tough opposition here against Leo Kelly and appeared better than a mere mark. But he was in no shape when he fought Mathews, who showed little for five rounds.

Pierce fought previous bouts here in which he appeared positively awkward. But he is a stout-hearted lad, with a punch and coolness. His awkward style has more method in it than appears on the surface.

If he has anything in reserve it will have to come out against Trendall. Harry is going well, now, and is in good trim. Trendall is a tough lad and if Mathews makes even a fair showing against him, the stories of his good work away from home will have won support.

Magiri Once a Wrestler.

The Future City Club's feature match for the following Tuesday, May 6, is arousing as much interest as the Trendall-Mathews affair. It will be the third meeting of Art Magiri and Marty Rowan. If there is any edge between this pair, it takes a hair line to mark it off. The boys will come in at 150 pounds and both will be at their best. Magiri has taken up wrestling work to make him more rugged for this bout, as Rowan is a rough-and-tumble lad of great endurance. Magiri was a wrestler before he took up the fight game and is one of the few mat men to ever make good at boxing.

Frankie Constant, the deep-chested youngster from Springfield, Ill., who was brought here to make a killing by his backers, stung them plentifully in both bouts he has so far fought. In the last one Constant started to make it a whirlwind affair. He did, but the tornado struck him instead of his opponent, George Ortlep, who punched Constant so severely and quickly that the bout had to be stopped almost ere it started.

Constant is true t ohis name, for he will try again against Ortlep next Tuesday, at the Future City.

The Clover Leaf Dramatic Club of St. Charles appears to have been the scene of the development of two fair boxers in Al Gilbert and Ortlep, both of whom have been winning regularly.

Benny McGovern has been idle for some days. He expects a match with either Willie Purcell or Kayo Mars, both of Cincinnati, the bout to take place here.

Kid Peppers, who has been nursing a bad arm for some days, is ready for the ring again. A bout with Willie Krug will probably be his next effort.

Brown Nine Beats Princeton.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 26.—Brown had no trouble in defeating Princeton, 8 to 1, today. Eayres, the Brown pitcher, held the visitors to four hits and struck out 14 men. Score:

Lungs Affected By Rheumatism

Pneumonia, Bronchitis, Phthisis, Asthma and Anemia Often Directly the Result of Rheumatic Blood.

If you have a persistent, nagging bronchial cough beware of cough remedies. They are merely local in action, and if they do relieve it is the narcotics that do it. What you require is a blood purifier, a searching antidote that removes from the circulation the acid poisons that by their reflexes attack all weakened, susceptible spots and thus create local symptoms. The very best remedy known is Swift's Sure Specific. You will find it on sale in any drug store at $1.00 per bottle. It goes straight into the blood, becomes an internal blood bath, wonderfully stimulates the increase of red corpuscles, cures all the local fever spots and irritations, increases appetite, you take on flesh and feel a wonderful sense of renewed strength. Hundreds of people worried beyond control at cough, pains in the chest, sore throat and constant expectoration of thick mucus have experienced the most wonderful change after using S. S. S. All doubt and apprehension is gone, those peculiar pains and ache vanish, there follows a period of most intense rejoicing to find that worst fears were based entirely upon a mistaken notion that cough and chest pains come from the lungs. These are rheumatic conditions, and you will quickly realize it after using S. S. S. for a few days. Get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day at the drug store and then say good-bye to all those pains that have worried you.

SHOULD MOTORISTS PAY LICENSE FOR OPERATING CAR?

Supreme Court Decision on This Question to Be Secured by American Automobile Association.

Should a motorist pay a State and city license fee? The question of carrying to the highest court in the land the constitutionality of the automobile registration tax will be considered at the next meeting of the Executive Board of the American Automobile Association. While there has been an acquiescence for several years on the part of motorists in accepting this tax when the money was employed in highways' progress of one kind or another, especially in those states where it was paid in lieu of a personal property tax, the Legislatures of the past winter have shown such a marked inclination to increase fees to an exorbitant degree that the A. A. A. officers have taken up the matter with the state divisions of the national body. President Laurens Enos appointed a special committee to prepare and present a report at the meeting to be held in Baltimore, May 8.

William H. Hotchkiss of New York is chairman of the committee, with Lewis R. Speare of Massachusetts and H. M. Rowe of Maryland as his associates. Charles Thaddeus Terry, chairman of the A. A. A. Legislative Board, who has had much to do with the framing of motor laws in many parts of the country, will assist the committee in the preparation of its report, which is going to be unusually thorough.

Where the registration tax has been in lieu of all other taxes, and the money used exclusively for road maintenance, as in New York State, there has been slight objection on the part of the motorists over the unconstitutional discrimination against one class of road user, as long as the amounts paid were within reason. The protest recently has accumulated strength in those states in which the owners of motor-driven vehicles are called upon to pay a registration tax, personal property tax, and still another tax for the driving of the car. Double taxation and discrimination against one class of road user are the two points which invite attack on the ground of unconstitutionality.

The case that may be carried up originated in New Jersey, which State calls for three payments by the automobile owner: Registration of car, driving license and property tax. The A. A. A. State organization instituted the suit which has had adverse decisions in the New Jersey courts.

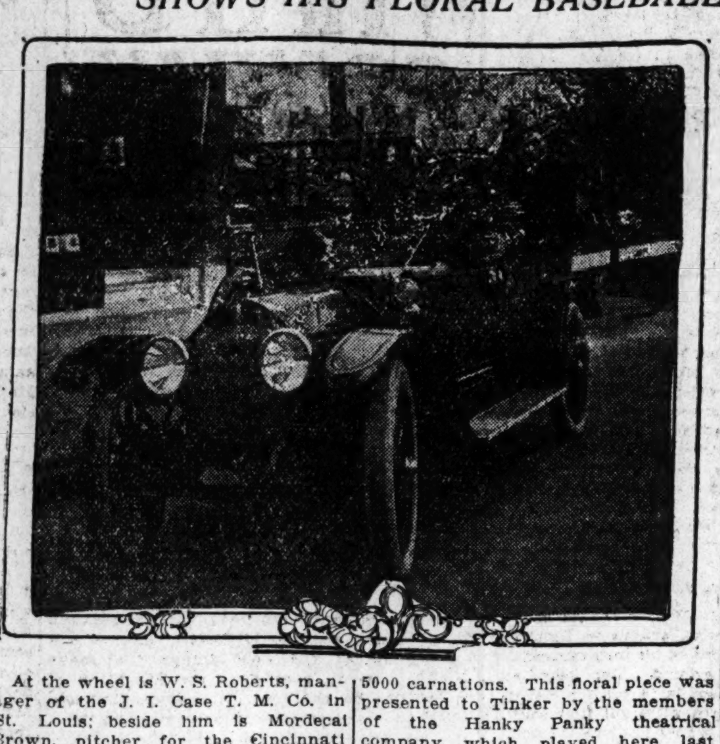
WILL SELL THE VELIE

W. J. Carter, late of the Oldsmobile St. Louis branch, is the vice-president and manager of the Velie Motor Co. of Missouri, which was incorporated last week to handle the Velie car in St. Louis and Missouri. Other officers of the company are J. A. Level, president; J. R. Level, treasurer; C. F. Swartz, secretary. B. R. Level and C. D. Cannon, together with the officers, form the Board of Directors. Plans are being drawn for a three-story fireproof concrete salesroom and garage at Lake and Delmar avenues. Until the new building is completed the company will occupy the building used formerly by C. F. Swartz, at 5143 Delmar, formerly the agent for the Velie.

MONSTER ELECTRIC SIGN

The most striking electric sign in St. Louis is that of the Bagnall Automobile Co., on top of the building at Thirteenth and Locust streets. It shows in brilliant colors with wheels turning, a Cole "66". It can be seen for a long distance and Nelson S. Gottschall, manager of the Bagnall Co., is as proud of it as a boy of a new jackknife.

MANAGER TINKER OF THE REDS SHOWS HIS FLORAL BASEBALL



At the wheel is W. S. Roberts, manager of the J. I. Case T. M. Co. in St. Louis; beside him is Mordecai Brown, pitcher for the Cincinnati Reds, and in the rear seat is Joe Tinker, manager of the Reds. Tinker, who owns the car in which they are sitting, is holding up an immense baseball which is made of 5000 carnations. This floral piece was presented to Tinker by the members of the Hanky Panky theatrical company which played here last week. He was at one time a theatrical manager and many of the members of the Hanky Panky company were in his company on the road, hence the floral remembrance.

AUTO CLUB YEAR BOOK MINE OF INFORMATION

The 1912-13 "Year Book" of the Automobile Club of St. Louis is now on the press, and will be in the hands of the members in about two weeks.

This manual is of great value to automobolists and is only given to the members of the club. It will contain all of the State automobile laws, including those passed by the recent General Assembly; also all of the city ordinances pertaining to automobiles or other motor vehicles, as well as all of the traffic regulations. In addition to this it will contain all of the committee reports which will show the work accomplished by the club in the interest of automobilists and the good roads movement.

The annual election of officers of the club for the ensuing year will take place Monday, May 5.

AGENTS FOR ADAMS TRUCK

The first Adams truck in St. Louis is being shown by the Lewis Automobile Co. The Lewis Co. is now located in handsome quarters at Walton and Washington avenues and, in addition to the Moon car in the local territory, will handle the Adams truck which is built in ton, ton and a half and two ton capacity with bodies to order.

DUSTING A CAR SPOILS THE FINISH

"The first thing to do in cleaning an automobile is to avoid wiping the dust from the body with a dry cloth or a wet one," said Joseph A. Sahlecht, Jackson agent in St. Louis.

"The days are coming when automobiles will need frequent cleaning to keep them looking spic and span, but the finish will remain good for a much longer time if the cleaning is properly done.

"Even the finest dust will scratch the surface of the varnish and paint that makes your car look so fine; and it is worse than foolish to attempt to wipe off mud stains. The only proper way to remove dust and mud is by washing. A heavy stream of water should be the first course, and this should not strike the car with great force. It should be directed slantwise against the sides of the body, and plenty of it used. If there is much mud on the wheels or body it should be allowed to soak well and soften before a sponge is applied; and then a constant stream of water should flow over the part being washed. A good soap should be used to remove grease or oil—never use gasoline.

"If a man wants to take especial care of his car's appearance, it is well to shower the body thoroughly with water if a trip is to be made through mud or rain. This will prevent spotting of the varnish by mud and water."

No-Rim-Cut Tires
10% Oversize

No Extra Price

We cut the price on No-Rim-Cut tires about 11 per cent in April.

Partly because of lower rubber—partly through multiplied output.

Now these oversize tires—these tires that can't rim-cut—are sold as low as any standard clincher tires.

Your Choice

Now, at the same price, you have this choice:

You may get a hooked-base clincher tire of which 23 per cent become rim-cut.

Or you may get, at the same cost, a No-Rim-Cut tire which never can be rim-cut.

Or you may get, without an extra penny, a tire ten per cent larger in air capacity. An extra capacity which, on the average, gives 25 per cent more mileage.

They are content with their tire mileage, only because they don't know what their neighbors get.

But hundreds of thousands have come to No-Rim-Cut tires. And legions of new users start every month.

Goodyear tires, because of this new type, far outsell every other tire.

Over a million sold in the past 12 months. That's more than we sold in 12 years before that.

Come see these tires. See the non-skid tread, the oversize, the No-Rim-Cut feature. You are bound to adopt them then.

What Men Buy

Of course many tire users, out of fixed habit, cling to old-type tires. Some have used them since bicycle days.

ST. LOUISAN INVENTS PUNCTURELESS TIRE

The Duplex inner tire is the invention of a St. Louisan and the promise made for it is that it will eliminate all possibility of tire punctures. The new non-puncturable inner tire is patented by Stanton Palmer, a well-known local tire man. Palmer has had much experience with tire fillers and to meet the objections made that they were not sufficiently resilient his new tire was evolved.

In effect the tire filler is made to compromise with the ordinary air filler, in Palmer's invention. Next to the outside, or street side, of the casing is a cushion of cellular rubber-like substance, already familiar to tire users, which is not affected by heat, cold or moisture, will not crumble, harden or flatten. This is put into the casing in elliptical shape and covered with an inner casing to hold it in place and reinforce the outer casing and prevent pinching. Inside this ellipse an ordinary inner tube is placed and then blown up so as to fill all of the remaining space inside the casing. The effect of this is to give a thickness of tire filler next to the street too deep for any but a three-inch nail to pierce and the air resiliancy is given by the regular inner tube. The Duplex, says Palmer, can be put in and taken out as also can the air tube, as readily as the present style of inner tube, without special tools of any sort.

The manufacturers are the Duplex Inner Tire Co., 3029 Locust street, which has just been incorporated by a number of well-known and financially solid St. Louis men. It is to be sold by dealers generally.

ENGLISH HAVE DOWN-TOWN NON-STOP RUN

Recently the English motorists have taken up a new form of motor car endurance, which bids fair to be one of the most popular contests in England. The Royal Automobile Club of England recently held what they call "a non-stop, high-speed contest," through the crowded streets of London. For eight consecutive hours such thoroughfares as Picadilly Circus, Regent street, Oxford street and Trafalgar Square, and so on, were traversed. The rules of the contest were that the car must be kept in high speed and must not make an involuntary stop throughout the run. Can you imagine driving a car up and down Broadway or Olive street for eight hours on high speed without stalling the motor? Such a proposition is what the contestants of this trial were up against. A wire was received from the London dealer of the Paige car that the entire run was made in a Paige car without being penalized a single point.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

GLIDDEN TOUR STARTS TO THE WEST JULY 11

July 11 is the date decided upon for the start of the A. A. A. National Reliability Tour—the Glidden tour. Arrangements are rapidly being made by the Minnesota State Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of Minneapolis, in co-operation with the A. A. A. Touring Information Board.

The route as decided upon leaves the Twin Cities, following the Northwest Trail to Fargo, N. D., where a northward turn is made to Grand Forks, and then west following the general line of the Great Northern Railway through North Dakota and Montana to Havre. So far it follows the route of the St. Paul-Helena run of the Minnesota State Association of two years ago. From Havre a new line will be surveyed nearly direct across Western Montana to Glacier National Park, which will be the formal end of the tour. After running into and through the park a rendezvous has been arranged at Kalispell, Mont., coincident with the good roads meeting of the Montana Good Roads Congress, which has already been arranged.

A large number of entries have already been made, particularly from St. Paul and Minneapolis, and it is expected that the list of participants will be as large as in any one of the former tours, irrespective of the fact that the tours have been made in more populous territory.

Glacier Park is a terminus of unusual importance from the fact that automobiles are allowed on the Government roads there, as is not the case as yet with Yellowstone National Park. Participants will be encouraged to return over the roads through Missoula and Butte (or Helena) to Livingston and Gardiner, where they may leave their cars and make stage trips in Yellowstone National Park.

Entry Blanks are now ready and can be had from Dr. C. E. Dutton, Pillsbury Building, Minneapolis, Minn., or from the A. A. A. Touring Bureau, 437 Fifth avenue, New York City.

COLE PRODUCTION IS TO BE DOUBLED

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 26.—The future production figures for the Cole will double, a $150,000 addition to the present plant on East Washington street will be built, and the organization generally enlarged as the result of plans promulgated by President J. J. Cole of the Cole Motor Car Co., following his tour through the Southwest, the Pacific coast and the Canadian Northwest.

Declaring that the automobile has only scraped the surface of the possibilities for the industry in the country west of the Mississippi and that the future for the motor car in that section of the country is only in its infancy, Mr. Cole with his customary progressiveness declares that he is going to make his organization large enough to meet the demand that will be made upon his factory for cars.

Why the Hupmobile has become The Car of the American Family

"32" 6-passenger Touring Car
fully equipped, $1200

F. O. B. Detroit, including equipment of windshield, mohair top with envelope, Jiffy curtains, speedometer, quick detachable rims, two folding and revolving occasional seats in tonneau, foot rest in tonneau, rear shock absorber, gas headlights, Prest-O-Lite tank, oil lamps, tools and horn. Three speeds forward and reverse, sliding gears. Four-cylinder motor, 3¼-inch bore and 5½-inch stroke; wheelbase, 126 inches; 33x4-inch tires. Standard color, black. Trimmings, black and nickel.

Hupmobile

In quality and soundness of construction and materials—
In style and good looks—
In ability to cover a stated number of miles of road in a day—
In stamina and durability—
Even in passenger capacity—
The Hupmobile meets the larger car on a dead level of equality.

These characteristics are so pronounced—and have played so large a part in the wonderful spread of the Hupmobile's popularity among all classes of car buyers—that the Hupmobile has truly become the car of the American Family.

The Big Car's Prestige

It is because of these qualifications that the Hupmobile meets the approval of and comes within the reach of the man of moderate means.

It is because of them, again, that the man who drives a car of higher cost and greater size, is glad to invest in a Hupmobile and proud to place it beside his other cars, no matter how famous their names or how much they cost.

The prestige of the big car for the upkeep of a small one—that's what the Hupmobile stands for—and you will find its benefits and pleasures beyond any price.

The Car of the American Family

It has broadened the social life of hundreds—yes, thousands—of families.

It has broken the monotony of city-bound days; it has taken them to the country for week-ends, afternoon picnics, fishing and hunting trips.

It has brought them into closer touch with friends who had long remained at the end of a telephone wire or a mail route.

It has become, in short, what the carryall was to many families before the motor car came into being.

For you and your family, the Hupmobile will do all these things.

And if the family numbers more than four, you can have the six-passenger Hupmobile at a slight additional price, and an advance in upkeep that is scarcely noticeable.

You have long known of the Hupmobile's reputation for economy. Aside from the initial cost, the Hupmobile will mean important savings in the low cost of maintenance—the rarity of repairs and the small consumption of oil and gasoline for the mileage obtained.

The Hupmobile is widely noted for its fuel economy; and in this respect we invite comparison with any other car of equal weight and size. The Hupmobile's lightness also means longer tire wear.

Read what our new factory manager said when he had been through our shops.

Our new factory manager, S. G. Humphrey, came to the Hupp plant several months ago.

After he had become acquainted with our methods and our shop practice, he said to General Manager Hastings:

"I have been engaged in the manufacture of automobiles for some thirteen years. I have been intimately in touch with the business methods employed in factories making cars selling at $5000 down to $500.

"In no factory with which I have been connected has the inspection, from the initial inspection of the raw material to the finished car inspection, been as close and rigid, and the limits of variation allowed so small, as they are in the Hupp Motor Car Company.

"I believe you are spending too much time and money in these departments."

"It is Hupmobile policy," Mr. Hastings replied, "and always has been, to be most strict in these matters. And we have no intention of ever abandoning that policy."

And this is only part of the story.

It goes back to the quality of materials used—the goodness and toughness of the steels; it includes the character of the mechanical design; its simplicity, the compact construction of the unit power plant; the remarkable effectiveness of a single oiling system for motor, clutch, transmission, etc.

And back of all this is the sincere purpose of the Hupp Motor Car Company to give you, in the Hupmobile, a car of moderate price that compares, in construction and performance, to the highest priced productions.

Steadily Grows in Favor

We feel that we are doing this. We feel that we have done it from the very first.

And the Hupmobile's steady and healthy growth, the favor it has found among car owners of all degrees in all parts of the country, seem to us to be more convincing proof that we have fulfilled our mission.

Build your summer plans around a Hupmobile.

Give your loved ones such a summer as they have never known, with this sturdy Car of the American Family.

Get a Demonstration Now

Let it be the center of your summer activities, aside from business—and even there you will find it a great comfort and convenience.

If you can afford any motor car, you can afford the Hupmobile. And you will find that no car—at any price—can give you more, save in bulk; but many at a like price, do not give less than the Hupmobile.

The Hupmobile dealers will gladly demonstrate the car for you and your family. All you have to do is arrange the time. Do that now.

GOUX MAKES HOUR WORLD'S RECORD

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 26.—Shattering all previous speed records, not excepting those of aviation, Jules Goux, the French motor pilot, has succeeded in covering 106 miles, 307 yards in an hour, driving the Peugeot car which he will pilot in the third annual 500-mile International Sweepstakes Race, at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30. The best record made in a motor car heretofore was that of Percy Lambert, who, driving a Talbot car, made 103 miles 114 yards in an hour. Goux's new record beats that of Vedrine, the aviator, who held the world's speed record, having made a flight at Chicago in which he covered 104¼ miles in an hour.

THE NEW HUPMOBILE

The new Hupmobile car for 1913 is the "32," a six-passenger touring car which sells for $1200, fully equipped. The wheel base is 126 inches and the tires are 33x4, oversize. The Hupmobile in three styles and one delivery body is essentially a family car yet in the roadster style, a car for the business man, and it has gained an immense sale and popularity. The car is sold in St. Louis by the General Motor Car Co., 3953-54 Olive street.

FOR FEDERAL AID FOR GOOD ROADWAYS

While the effort to obtain National Government participation in the highways progress of the country accumulates force, the various states, one after another, are adopting legislation providing for the establishment of state highway departments. According to information received by the A. A. A. National Good Roads Board, which keeps in touch with the state automobile bodies and aids materially in their work, there will be, as a result of recent legislative action, road departments in Maine, Montana, Missouri, Colorado, Idaho, Arkansas and Texas. This makes plainly apparent that the move for Federal action has not caused any 'laying down" on the part of the staes, which have their proper part to perform in the general roads development.

Of the addresses given at the second Federal aid convention in Washington, called by the National Good Roads Board, none contained a more comprehensive summing up of the situation than the remarks of Representative Wm. P. Borland of Missouri, who, among other things, said:

"I believe that the good road question is the biggest question, without exception, now facing the American people. In Congress, we are trying earnestly and sincerely to deal with this problem of the extent and character of Federal control and Federal aid to good roads. There are difficulties confronting us.

"Some of us believe in a continuous system of roads; roads that go somewhere. We believe that Federal aid, if it comes at all—and it must come—must mean a better type of roads, long roads, roads of higher class, roads of a more permanent character, roads that go somewhere, roads that mean something in the development of the country."

TIRE DEMAND ENORMOUS

"Although the spring season has barely started, there is every indication that the volume of tire business this year will exceed by a great margin anything ever before known," says J. D. Anderson, general sales manager of the United States Tire Co. "Tire manufacturers this year are brought face to face with the stirring problem of taking care of the biggest demand for tires of all descriptions that ever has been known in the history of the industry. Something like 5,000,000 pneumatics will be needed to shoe America's automobiles, and in addition there are about 50,000 motor trucks to be taken care of and a flock of motor cycles approximating 250,000 in number. This means that in order to keep all of these vehicles running, tire factories will be pushed to their utmost capacity."

TRUCK TIRES TO DROP

"There will be another 10 per cent reduction in truck tire prices," says C. W. Martin, manager of the motor truck tire department of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Akron, O. "This cut will take place immediately, and is the second cut which has occurred since the first of the year. This reduction is made possible not only by reason of our increased manufacturing facilities, but also by the recent drop in the price of crude rubber."

ADVERTISING AN ECONOMY

John N. Willys, president The Willys-Overland Co., Toledo, O., says: "The man who says 'I wouldn't buy that car because its advertising increases the cost unnecessarily' is making the mistake of his life. He is overlooking an economic principle, tried and proved, that has more than any other one agency to do with bringing within his reach a really high-class product at a reasonable price. He is as much mistaken as the farmer who would prefer hand harvesting to the purchase of an automatic binder.

"Money spent in extensive and judicious advertising is the best investment in the world today for everyone concerned; for the manufacturer, the dealer and the purchaser of a motor car. The product that is not advertised will not sell readily, no matter how attractive are quality and price. The grocer or other dealers who have on their shelves goods that are not advertised will bear witness to the truth of this statement. Wholesalers and manufacturers who do not use printers' ink will attest to its truthfulness by the cost system figures for their sales department. Any salesman in the world will tell you that advertised goods can be, and are, sold at much less cost than those unknown except to a comparatively small coterie of users.

"Successful advertising is a sure indication of quality, for without value of the product, no advertising could succeed. The manufacturer and everyone connected with the distribution would lose reputation and money, for the public will not long continue to be gulled. Advertising is no more an extravagance than is the use of good seed or good machinery by the farmer."

HOME ON FLAT TIRE

"A car can anways be driven home on a blown-out casing, if an extra tube is carried, and on a punctured casing, even if no extra tube is in the car, if the driver knows the trick," says Joseph A. Schlecht of the Mound City Buggy Co., the St. Louis Jackson representative.

"Suppose the shoe has been blown out, and there is an extra tube aboard, but no blowout patch or shoe is in the kit. Burlap can be secured without much trouble. Inflate the tube partially, wrap the burlap—cut into strings—around it fairly tight, and mount the tube and casing in the usual way. Burlap is tough and hard to cut and it usually will get you home.

"But if you happen to be caught without an extra tube and you get a puncture or blowout, you don't have to go home on a flat casing and rim-cut it. Take the casing off and pack it full of rags, newspapers, hay, straw, beans, oats—anything you can get that will answer the purpose. The idea, of course, is to get something into the casing that will substitute for air and hold the casing in fairly good shape until you can get to a repair shop or a supply station. I think it pays to know things like this, because they not only save a man money but a lot of trouble on the road."

500 MILES HARD RACE

Ray Harroun's recent statement that he doubted the ability of Bob Burman to drive the entire 500 miles of the big race at Indianapolis on Memorial day, is regarded with some surprise by spectators who have witnessed the races of the past two years.

Harroun declares that the strain of driving 500 miles under sustained high speed is too great to be borne by flesh and blood. This statement he derives from his experience in finding the first 500-mile race too strenuous for his own constitution.

Those who remember Ralph Mulford's smiling face and springy step as he dismounted from his Lozier car after driving the entire 500 miles of the 1911 race are inclined to disagree with Harroun's estimate of the limit of human endurance. Mulford's average time for the five century event was 74.47 miles per hour, making the fastest 500 miles ever driven up to that time by one man. A year later Joe Dawson bettered Mulford's record by driving the entire race unrelieved at a still greater speed. Seven of the first ten drivers who finished the race of 1911 drove the entire distance without relief and most of them were in excellent shape at the finish.

Similar conditions prevailed in last year's contest, thus seeming to prove that Harroun's necessity for relief was the exception and not the rule.

TRUCK GRINDS FEED

A striking little lesson in the emergency value of the motor truck comes from Minnesota: William Kresch, a farmer living below South St. Paul, bought a Kissel Kar one-ton truck and placed it in service on August 1, 1912. Mr. Kresch was highly pleased with the eficiency of the machine from the start, but worried some about having his investment tied up during the winter. Finally an idea occurred to him. He jacked up the rear end, blocked the front so it could not move, took off one tire, made a light wood block around the wheel, hitched a belt to it and is now grinding feed, sawing wood and cutting fodder. Mr. Kresch grinds, with the motive power of his Kissel-Kar Truck 100 sacks of feed every week. It formerly cost him six cents per sack to have this ground, and he had to carry it four miles to the mill and back again. This occupied three-quarters of a day of his time.

THE NEW REO EQUIPMENT

Telling of the merits of the 1913 Reo line, the Kardell Motor Car Co. announces that it has electric lights, set-in-dash lights, left-side drive, simple center control, oversize tires and no levers in the way and 50 per cent overcapacity. The company is now showing the 1913 line at its salesrooms, 4150-56 Olive street, and the interest in them among local motorists is great.

TRUCKS DO GREAT WORK

Two light Studebaker trucks have been steadily at work in Dayton, ever since the flood, operating a transportation line between that city and Springfield, O., and bringing in a steady stream of supplies. The trucks were lent by the Studebaker corporation and are in charge of factory drivers.

DEFINES WARNING SIGNAL

SEATTLE, Wash., April 12.—By a new law, which has just gone into effect, all adequate automobile warning signals may be used in Seattle, provided the motorist does not sound more than two abrubt blasts of his signal in succession at any one time. The long blast of any signal, or the continuous blowing of the same is forbidden. Furthermore, the law makes it mandatory that the motorist sound his signal whenever danger exists to pedestrian or vehicle from the approach of the automobile.

An adequate signal is defined as one producing "an abrupt note sufficiently loud to be heard over the noise of traffic."

Up to the time of the passage of this amendment, motorists were forbidden to use the common type of high-powered electric signal, as this was reserved for the exclusive use of the police, fire and health department automobiles.

Few cities require an adequate automobile warning signal as much as Seattle. Many months of the year both rain and fog are common, and the extremely hilly nature of the city makes it impossible, in many instances, for even slow moving automobiles to come to a stop suddenly as is necessary in emergency.

It was the imperative need of the general use of a high-powered signal and the increasing number of accidents resulting from the use of the bulb horn, that were responsible in a great measure for the change.

MOTOR CARS FORCE ROADS

District Manager Jackson of the Marion Motor Sales Co., 808 N. Twelfth street, St. Louis, has returned from an extended trip over his territory with the report that Marion sales promise to eclipse all records this season. He suggests as a motto for dealers this: "Sell cars to force good road building" instead of the old one "Build roads to help sell cars."

There is Strength all through the
PAIGE 36

STRENGTH in a motor car—such strength as is in the Paige "36"—is a guarantee of safety and endurance. A warranty of economy.

There is strength all through the Paige "36." Strength in the 4-inch deep pressed steel frame. Strength in the drop-forged front axle and the floating type rear axle—axles that are strong enough for a car of twice the weight. Strength in the drop-forged steering knuckles. Strength in the big 34-inch wheels. Strength in the brake control.

There's strength and safety in every part and every detail of the Paige. And there is sturdiness, too, in the sheet steel body and the heavy, firm fenders.

We want you to come see the Paige "36." Come take it all apart, figuratively speaking, and see how strong it is.

The Paige "36" touring car, completely equipped, including Gray & Davis electric starting and lighting system, at $1275 is the one real sensation of the year. Five body types.

Paige "25," a smaller car, is just as remarkably priced at $950. Two types, roadster and touring.

The DOCTOR'S ADVICE
by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Elwood Sts., Dayton, Ohio, enclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Kit" writes: "I am far below normal weight. I suffer with headaches and am nervous to the point of exhaustion. If you can tell me something to help me I shall be very grateful."

Answer: I can prescribe nothing so effective as a thorough course of three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets. These tablets will aid in extracting the nutrition from the food which will increase the red blood supply, overcome nervousness and you will become plump and healthy. This treatment should be continued for several months, as it takes time to change the tissues and cells of the body.

"Sarah" says: "Can anything be done for one who is bothered with rheumatism. If so, please reply."

Answer: You can be entirely cured of your rheumatism if you take the following: Mix by shaking well and take a teaspoonful at meal times and at bedtime and you will soon be cured. Comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; syrup sarsaparilla comp., 5 ozs.; wine of colchicum, one-half oz.; sodium salicylate, 4 drams; iodide of potassium, 2 drams.

"Ray" writes: "Can a sufferer from bronchial trouble be relieved? Doctors do not seem to help me. What would you suggest?"

Answer: To cure chronic cold, sore throat and bronchitis, I would advise the use of concentrated essence mentho-laxene. Purchase this at any drug store in 2½ oz. packages and mix according to directions given on bottle and you will very shortly be cured of all bronchial trouble. This will not only relieve, but will cure, and is very pleasant to take.

"Hulda" says: "I cannot eat without great distress after eating. I am sleepless and restless, nervous and irritable. Can you tell me anything that would cure me."

Answer: Your trouble is all due to your stomach, which causes the nervous, restless feeling. Take tablets triopeptine and you will soon be cured of all this trouble. These are packed in sealed cartons and are pink, white and blue tablets to be taken after meals. Take the pink tablet after breakfast, white after dinner and blue after supper. If this is continued the curative agencies will soon restore natural digestion.

"Miss M." writes: "I suffer greatly with my nerves, and almost on the point of nervous prostration. I cannot sleep and am hysterical at times. Can you help me?"

Answer: Many women, old and young, who have suffered as you do, have been cured by using the following tonic restorative treatment: Get from your druggist 1 oz. tincture of cadomene (not cardamon) and 3 ozs. syrup of hypophosphites comp., mix, and take a teaspoonful before each meal. Always shake well before taking.

"Miss T. R." asks: "Do you think a weight of 190 pounds is too much for a girl of medium height; and what can I safely take to reduce about 30 pounds?"

Answer: Your weight is excessive and if it increases it may cause much suffering and embarrassment. I advise the regular use of 5-grain arbolene tablets, which are sold by most pharmacies in sealed tubes with full directions for self-administration.

"Carpenter" writes: "My liver and kidneys are in a bad condition. I have dizzy spells and dark spots before my eyes. Also have twinges of rheumatism. Can I be helped?"

Answer: To cure kidney and liver trouble use three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur). These are packed in sealed tubes with full directions for taking. They act pleasantly and tone up the bowels and liver and purify the blood. They are convenient, effective and highly curative.

"Phoebe"—The following will cure your children of bedwetting: "Get 3 drams of tincture rhus-aromatic; 1 dram tincture cubebs and 1 oz. comp. fluid balmwort. Mix, and give the child from 10 to 15 drops in water about one hour before each meal."

"Maude" writes: "I have suffered a great deal with catarrh. It gives me headaches, affects my eyes and my breath is awful. Can you prescribe something to cure it. Only my nostrils and throat are affected."

Answer: I have prescribed antiseptic vilane powder and grateful letters from hundreds indicate that it is speedily curative, but must be used occasionally to prevent a recurrence. Get a two-ounce original package of vilane powder; use a half teaspoonful to a pint of warm water. From the palm of the hand snuff the water through the nostrils until thoroughly cleansed, two or three times daily. Mix a level teaspoonful of vilane powder with an ounce of lard or vaseline and apply well up into the nostrils twice daily and your catarrh should soon be cured.

"Cuda" writes: "I am troubled with itching scalp, dandruff and my hair is falling out. It is harsh and brittle."

Answer: Plain Yellow Minyol is the best remedy for itching scalp, falling hair and dandruff that I know of. It can be bought in 4-oz. jars, and if used according to directions will cure all diseases of the hair and scalp. If the hair is harsh and brittle and you are bothered with those straggling locks, the use of minyol will restore that soft, fluffy appearance and bring back the intense natural color. HARVESTER CONTRACTS HAD MONOPOLY CLAUSE

Witness Testifies in Kansas City Trial That Agents Were Exclusive.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 26.—The taking of testimony at Kansas City in the Government anti-trust proceedings against the International Harvester Co., was concluded today. Robert S. Taylor, special examiner for the Government, Government attorneys, and attorneys representing the International company, will go from here to Sioux Falls, S. D., to take evidence of implement dealers in that trade territory regarding competition in the sale of agricultural implements.

T. E. Donnellan, general agent for the Harvester company, testified that in the five years that he has been associated with the International Harvester Co., he had never spoken to an implement agent about the handling of International goods to the exclusion of those manufactured by any other company. He declared, though, that he knew a clause covering this point was contained at one time in contracts which agents had signed for him.

DID YOU EVER WEAR OUT YOUR TIRE?

Of course not! Puncture—blowout—pinch—rimcut, then a new tire. Kan't Creep inner tires solve the problem—double the mileage—stop your worry—enable you to wear down the tire to the last shred of fabric.

K. C. INNER TIRES STOP PUNCTURES AND BLOWOUTS

Why? Because it is an overlapping inner casing around the tube, of tough resilient material moulded by special process to the exact shape of the casing. It can't pinch or creep. It prevents blowouts. It insures you against trouble and guarantees your tire a double life. Approved and recommended by tire manufacturers.

EDITOR, WITNESS AGAINST STEEL TRUST, BANKRUPT

S. B. Kaufman, Who Supplied Copy of Trade Agreement, Boycotted After Inquiry.

HOME BANKS AGAINST HIM

Merchants Told Him They Must Withdraw Trade or Lose Mill Operatives' Custom.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Steel Trust interests have got their vengeance on one of the witnesses against them by driving him into bankruptcy, so it is alleged in a complaint filed with Representative A. O. Stanley by S. B. Kauffman, for many years the publisher and owner of the Daily Union at Coatesville, Pa.

Kauffman says he is the victim in question, his paper having been sold yesterday by the Sheriff. His business troubles, he adds, bear out the prediction he made to Stanley, July 24, 1911, that the testimony he was then giving, not of his own suggestion or volition, against the Steel Plate pool of 1900-1906, would result in his financial ruin.

Kauffman furnished to Chairman Stanley of the House Committee Investigating the Steel Trust a copy of what was alleged to be the original pooling agreement of the "Steel Plate Association of the United States." The agreement was dated May 9, 1900, and included the Carnegie Steel Co., Jones & Laughlin, the Illinois Steel Co., the Crucible Steel Co. of America, the Otis Steel Co., the Tidewater Steel Co., the Lukens Iron & Steel Co., Worth Bros. Co., the Central Iron & Steel Co., the American Steel & Wire Co. and the Glasgow Iron Co.

$1000 Fines Frequent.

The constituent companies apportioned among themselves all shipments of steel plates. The company that dared violate the agreement was held liable to heavy penalties and it was said that $1000 fines frequently were imposed.

Each company was required to make a monthly sworn statement of shipments, production, etc., and any member shipping more than his apportioned amount was required to pay a penalty on each pound in excess, the fine being divided among the other members of the pool or combine.

J. R. Van Oermer, sales agent of the Lukens Iron and Steel Co., testified before the Stanley Committee that when it was discovered that the pooling agreement was illegal, the printed copies were called in and burned.

"The plan was nipped in the bud," testified Van Oermer, "but the agreement was lived up to in practice for nearly six years, and the prices for steel plate were the highest in the industry."

Kauffman testified before the Stanley Committee that he was employed to put the pool agreement into type at his shop, and that shortly after he had delivered the printed copies to President Huston of the Lukens Iron and Steel Co., Van Oermer came to the Kauffman shop.

How One Copy Survived.

"Mr. Van Oermer told me," testified Kauffman, "that the president of the Illinois Steel Co. had told Mr. Huston the latter had made a great mistake in having the agreement printed. Van Oermer said the president of the Illinois Steel Co. had said he might be sent to jail if the agreement were discovered. Van Oermer searched all about my place, even to the wastebasket, to see if he had all the copies. When this investigation was started my brother told me he had a copy of the printed agreement at his home, and I got it."

Kauffman alleges in his written complaint to Stanley, that his paper virtually has been boycotted by the business people of Coatesville since he testified, nearly two years ago.

The Lukens Iron and Steel Co. and the Worth Bros. Co. are at Coatesville. A. F. Huston, president of the Lukens company, also is president of the Coatesville Trust Co. William Gibbons, who was president of the Chester Valley Bank, is connected with the Huston interests. W. P. Worth, of the Worth Bros. Co., is president of the National Bank of Coatesville.

Kauffman says that his paper virtually was boycotted by the Huston, Worth and Gibbons interests. The three banks transferred their advertisements to a rival paper, the Record. Mercantile concerns told Kauffman that they would have to quit him or run the risk of losing the trade of mill operatives.

Stanley stated today that he is investigating the charges of Kauffman and may call attention of the House to the matter.

7420 WANTS LAST SUNDAY

—that was the number of separate classified advertisements printed in the big want directory. It was just 514 more than appeared in ALL the other St. Louis English Sunday newspapers of that day.

Today's big directory, with this paper again contains more than 7000 want ad offers—and again is bigger than ALL the others combined.

Don't miss the "wants."

President of
The Mail Order School

I want to help men and women to success. My own success has caused me to be called "The Wizard of the Mail Order Field." I KNOW what others MUST KNOW to succeed. MY FREE BOOK TELLS HOW TO GET A BUSINESS OF YOUR OWN.

If you are one of the thousands of slaves of the pay check, grinding away the best years of your life for some other man's profit, let me show you how, while you are still earning a salary and with very small capital, you can embark in a business that will free you forever from the grinding, body-racking wage slavery. Let me show you the way to financial independence and happiness. I will supply you a carefully devised, elaborately worked out and completely equipped set of 20 plans to select from and embark on. I will explain everything to you from basic idea to full operation. This will include how to handle the business when you get it, and how to develop it as your facilities and capital increase. The whole mail order plan will be supplied you. It is the most complete, thorough and invincible instruction possible, each plan capable of earning you a splendid income. A FEW DOLLARS STARTS YOU.

Then by putting your profits each week back into your business you can grow rapidly. "Start in and grow a spine; wade out of your self-pity and find the man in yourself." I show you how to make the start with just a few dollars, and the postman will soon wear a path to your door laden with letters and orders for the things that I show you how to sell.

"RISE, GO ON AND UP! The road is clear. A glorious future summons you to the battle of betterment. DARE ON, YOU WHOSE SOULS ARE BRUISED WITH PAST DEFEATS. Twist your frown into a smile, because fortune awaits you in this business, if you will let me start you NOW."

St. Louis' ONE BIG Boarding Directory

BIGELOW, ASSISTANT U. S. CHEMIST, QUITS

He Was Suggested for Reprimand in Taft's Report on Fight Against Dr. Wiley.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Dr. W. D. Bigelow, assistant chief of the Bureau of Chemistry, whose name figured frequently in the controversy which preceded the resignation of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, left the Government service today. Before he came to the bureau, he was connected with various educational institutions throughout the West.

Bigelow became involved in the celebrated controversy in the department of agriculture, which resulted from the Bureau of Chemistry's employment of Dr. H. H. Rusby of New York. After investigating the case, President Taft refused to ask the resignation of Dr. Wiley, which had been recommended by the Personnel Board of the department and Attorney-General Wickersham. It had been recommended that Bigelow be allowed to resign. President Taft in his finding said Bigelow had been overzealous and suggested a reprimand.

JULY 1 TIME LIMIT FOR ENDING PACIFIC MERGER

Attorney-General Says Extension to That Date Might Be to Public Interest.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Attorney-General McReynolds today told the Supreme Court that an extension of time to July 1 for dissolving the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific merger might be greatly to the public interest, but he "emphatically" opposed an extension beyond that date or the granting of discretionary power to the lower court to extend the time.

The Attorney-General's position was stated in a brief in reply to the request of the Union Pacific attorneys for modification of the mandate so as to authorize the lower court to extend the time for the submission of a plan of dissolution.

ROBBERY SUSPECT CAUGHT IN OZARKS AFTER LONG CHASE

Two Officers Trail Alleged Burglar for Two Days and Nights and Nab Him.

C. T. Blackburn, Marshall at Eldon, Mo., and C. I. Demmert, a special agent for the Rock Island Railroad, brought a prisoner to St. Louis last night, whom they said they had captured after trailing him for two days and nights through the brush of the Ozarks. The prisoner said his name was R. C. Stone and that his home was in St. Louis, but he would give no further information concerning himself. He is suspected of a number of Postoffice robberies.

The Postoffice at Greenburg, Ind., Labadie and Rose Bud, Mo., were robbed on successive nights last week and Marshal Blackburn and Dammert got on the trail of the robber near Gascondy in Osage County. They followed him through the brush, guided by camp fires which the fugitive started with heaps of letters taken from mail pouches. Charred fragments of the letters were found in the ashes.

They came up with Stone Friday afternoon on a bridge over a little mountain creek in Osage County. He was wearing a number of articles of clothing that corresponded with a description they had of clothes that were in a suit case that was stolen from the express office in the Freeburg Postoffice.

Stone was put in the holdover and is being held for the Federal authorities.

The St. Louis Symphony Orchestra will be taken on a tour through the Southwest early next month. Arthur J. Gaines, manager of the orchestra, has just returned from an advance trip through the territory to be visited.

CURRENCY COMPTROLLER HEADS TRUST COMPANY

Lawrence O. Murray, Finishing 5-Year Term, Steps Into High Banking Position.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—That those who hold responsible positions in the Treasury Department are always taken care of after their terms expire, was made manifest again today when it was announced that Lawrence O. Murray, whose five-year term as Comptroller of the Currency expired today, will become president of the United States Trust Co. of this city, succeeding Eldridge E. Jordan.

Jordan becomes chairman of the board of this institution, a new position created today by the Board of Directors. Murray is expected to assume his new duties Monday.

President Wilson has before him the names of several candidates to succeed Murray. Pending the appointment, Deputy Comptroller Kane will act as Comptroller.

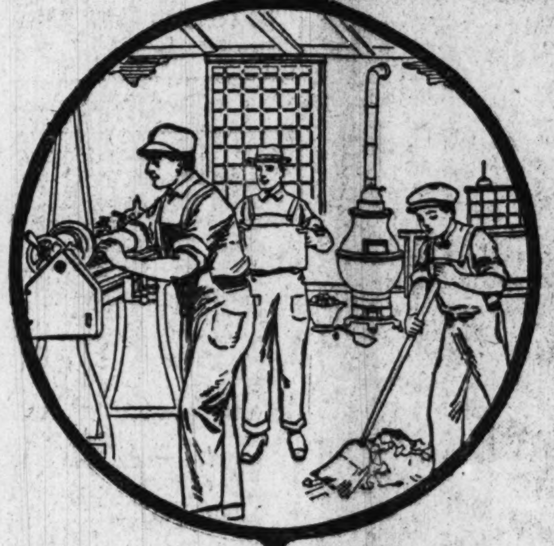
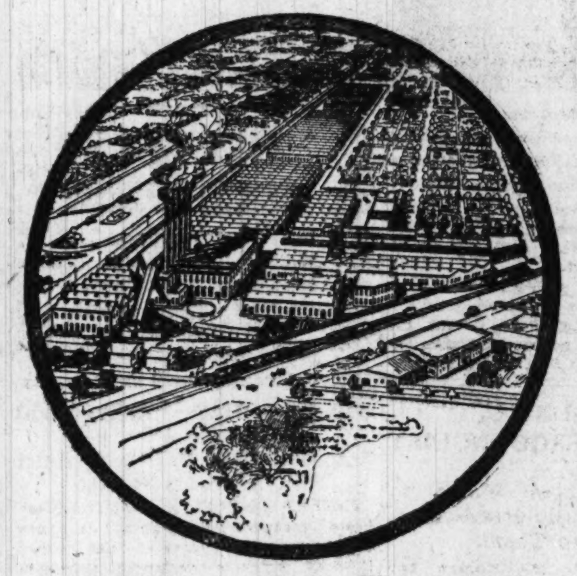
Forty Years Building a Great Factory



The little room on South Water Street, Chicago, where the Jeffery business started before the great fire of 1871.

Rambler
Motor Cars



The Jeffery works at Kenosha, Wisconsin, where 96 per cent of all Cross Country parts are made.

IN a little one-room shop on South Water Street, Chicago, before the big Chicago fire of 1871, Thomas B. Jeffery, with two helpers, a man and a boy, laid the foundation for the great organization behind the Cross Country car.

In forty years from this modest beginning, twenty-one of which were devoted to building up the bicycle industry, this organization has grown, until today five million dollars are invested in the Jeffery factory equipment alone, and every dollar's worth of it is paid for.

EVERY intelligent man and woman in America surely recalls the fact that the Rambler bicycle was the most popular bicycle of its type during the days of bicycle progress.

Fifteen employes of this company have been in the organization for twenty years and over; fifteen from fifteen to twenty years; twenty-one from ten to fifteen years, and three hundred and thirty-three from one to five years.

THE factory ground area today is one hundred and four acres and the floor area twenty-five acres.

Ask your banker what the name of Jeffery stands for in the motor car industry and consider well before you choose a car the standing and experience of the maker.

A beautiful four-color reproduction of the Cross Country, from an oil painting by R. Philip Brainard, is ready for mailing. See the Cross Country by all means, at any Jeffery branch or dealer's display room, but send for the picture anyway.

Results Most Feared by Mankind

WARNER'S
LIVER

Greatly reduced fac-simile of package and bottle

Ask any man or woman what disease they fear the most. If they think before replying, the answer will usually be Bright's Disease.

Ask them why, they will tell you that kidney disease is most dreaded because of its tendency to advance from the early stages of the trouble to the dangerous, or fatal stage, generally before the sufferer realizes he or she is dangerously ill.

This fear and worry on the part of humanity is needless—for, if the cause is properly cared for—the effect is done away with. Nature has equipped humanity with an effective system of danger signals, so that if the warning of a peculiar lame back, torpid liver, inflammation of the bladder, is heeded—relief can be speedily found in the use of

BIG AMES TRACT, WEST OF PARKVIEW, TO BE SUBDIVIDED

Fifty-Five Acres Susceptible of Division Into 12,000 Front Feet, and It Is Estimated Proceeds From Sale of It Will Reach $850,000.

EARLY IMPROVEMENT, WITH RESTRICTIONS

Place Will Be Known as West Parkview, and Is to Be High-Class Residential Property—Flats and Apartments Excluded.

By Berry Moore

The Ames tract, west of and adjoining Parkview, according to an announcement yesterday by the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., is to be subdivided and improved on a grand scale.

It was announced that 3200 front feet of the tract had been sold from the blue prints of the subdivision to the Federal Investment Co., of which W. H. Carroll is president; George F. Bergfeld Real Estate Co., and the Modern Realty and Investment Co., of which N. S. Wood is the leading spirit.

The subdivision project and the sale of the lots were promoted by the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. in conjunction with Elmore Cave & Co.

There are 55 acres in the tract, which is susceptible to subdivision into 12,000 front feet. It is estimated that the proceeds of the sale of the subdivision will approximate $850,000.

Immediate Improvement.

Contracts for the sale of the lots provide for the immediate improvement of every fifth lot, insuring the erection of twenty or more houses at the inception of the project.

The prices at which the initial sales have been made have not been disclosed but the proceeds, it is understood, will suffice to pay for the street or municipal improvements.

The blue prints of this subdivision disclose the fact that the triangle lying between Parkview and the Ames tract, has been acquired from the Berdith Realty Co., the developers of Parkview, by the Ames Realty Co., of which Henry Semple Ames is president, and has been incorporated in the subdivision plan.

Street Cars in Alley.

The tracks of the Clayton branch of the Hodiamont or Suburban Railway, which turn west from Melville avenue into Kingsbury boulevard, and thence south along the west side of the triangle, will run south through the alley west of West Gate, the alley being virtually a continuation of Melville avenue to Washington University junction. Thus the street car line will form the division between the two subdivisions.

The subdivision will be dedicated as West Parkview, the improvements being planned to harmonize with those of Parkview, although the two subdivisions will be under different ownerships and control.

The Ames, which is a perfect rectangular tract, extends from Parkview on the east to Pennsylvania avenue on the west, and from Kingsbury boulevard to the northern limits of the Washington University reservation.

The tract by virtue of its location is essentially high class residential property.

Will Have Only Three Streets.

West Parkview will have only three streets. These will be continuations of Kingsbury boulevard, Waterman and Berlin avenues. Kingsbury will be a boulevard 90 feet wide, while Waterman and Berlin will be only 60 feet wide. The lateral or side streets, on which none of the lots will front, will be Adelaide Trinity and Ames avenues. The first runs through to University City.

The exclusiveness of the addition will be accentuated by handsome entrances which will be erected on Pennsylvania avenue at the head of each street.

A 30-foot street to be known as University Drive will extend along the south side of the subdivision. Thus West Parkview will be removed from the tracks of the Clayton branch of the Hodiamont or Suburban Railway, which forms the division between the subdivision and the Washington University reservation.

Thirty Blocks Purchased.

The Federal Investment Co.'s purchase embraces 30 lots of 50 feet each, including the entire north side of Waterman avenue, extending from Trinity avenue to Pennsylvania avenue, one block in length. Its other holdings are on Berlin avenue and Kingsbury boulevard. The Bergfeld and Modern Co. lots are on Waterman avenue, between Adelaide and Trinity avenues.

Negotiations are practically closed for other heavy purchases in the tract.

Although the restrictions call for only [illegible] buildings it is understood that the houses planned by the inaugural purchasers of the lots will range from $7500 to $35,000. The Federal Investment Co. and the George F. Bergfeld Co. have led in high-class buildings throughout the residential sections of the city, but more recently in Parkview. The restrictions exclude flats and apartments.

There remain for builders, according to real estate men, only 27 lots in Parkview, the demand for them indicating that this subdivision will soon be entirely out of the market. The interest displayed in West Parkview forecasts its early absorption, realty experts declare.

City Water and Sewers.

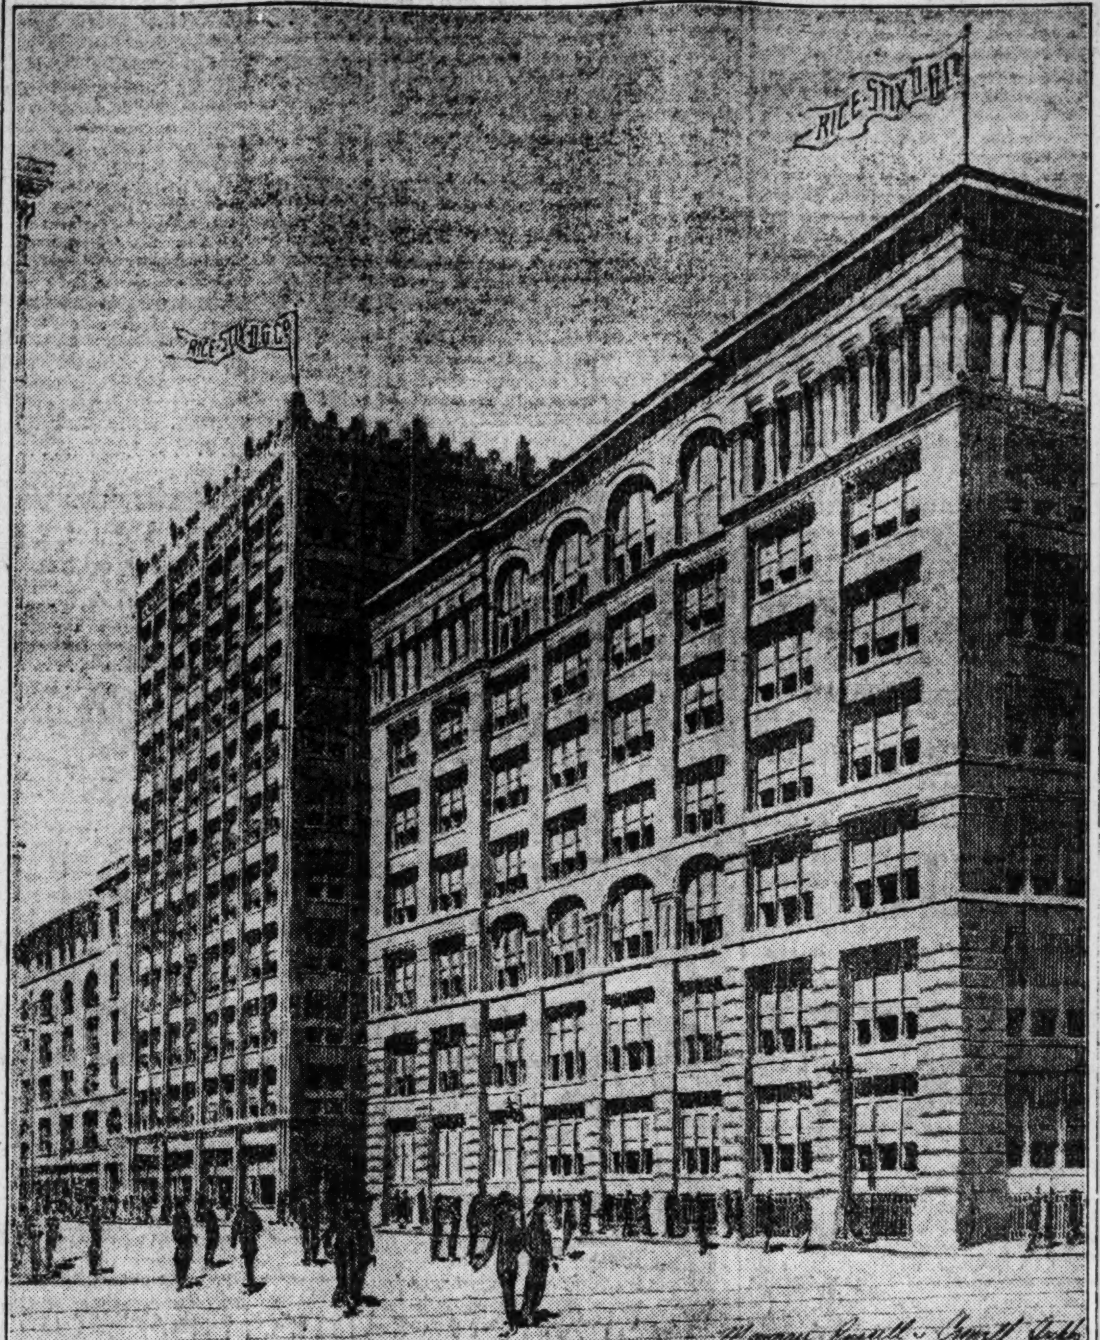
Several years ago E. G. Lewis contracted for the purchase of the Ames tract for an addition to University City, which lies on the west, for $400,000, but forfeited $2000 which he had paid to the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. as earnest money.

The improvements, including city water and sewer mains, the contracts for which have been let, will be made under the supervision of Julius Pitzman, who has drawn the plans for the subdivision. Contract for making Pennsylvania avenue, which is the north and south outlet of University City, has also been awarded.

The upbuilding of University City, which now includes Maryland Terrace and Forsythe place, is a feature of the St. Louis realty market.

The launching of West Parkview, it is predicted, will mark an epoch in the growth of the city.

Splendid Structure of 10 Stories to Be Built as Annex by Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co.



RICE-STIX D.G. CO.
RICE-STIX D.G. CO.
Mauran Russell & Crowell Archts.

The new 10-story annex to be built for the Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co., at the southwest corner of Tenth and St. Charles streets, in the rear of the company's present establishment on Washington avenue, will be one of the handsomest of the newer downtown edifices.

Plans for the building have been drawn by Mauran, Russell & Crowell, and plans are also being made, under the supervision of Isaac S. Taylor, for modernizing and extensively improving the company's present building.

The news of the company's plans has been received with great satisfaction by other Washington avenue property owners, east of Twelfth street, as it is felt that the company will be a big factor in maintaining property values in the neighborhood.

The renewal, for a 10-year period, of the company's lease on its old quarters, was announced last Sunday, but the announcement did not at that time include the important fact of negotiations for the land in the rear of the building. It was announced in the middle of the week that the lot, fronting 106 feet on Tenth street by 63 on St. Charles street, had been bought for $160,000, through the Mercantile Trust Co., for the trustees of the Liggett & Myers estate, and that the lot, with 60 feet frontage on St. Charles street, between Tenth and Eleventh, had been bought from the Timken Real Estate Co. of Canton, O., for $60,000. The Charles F. Vogel Real Estate Co. represented the Timken interests.

New Building for Motor Car Co.

The Hudson-Phillips Motor Car Co. has leased from the plans a two-story building to be erected by the Delor Realty Co., George T. Burdeau president, at 2307 Locust street. The site is 50x155 feet. The rental is $5000 a year for a term of 10 years.

The Art Publication Society, of which James G. Blake is president, is now on Grand avenue and has leased the second and third floors of the four-story building, 916-918 Olive street. The lessee is the Red Ring Realty Co., of which Harry L. Block is president.

This lease will lead to a greater concentration of the company's business in St. Louis. The space is 50x100, well lighted and a modern elevator from the Olive street corridor is being put into the building and extensive improvements are being made, fitting the place for the publishing business. This lease takes all the vacant space in the building save the second floor, for which several tenants are negotiating.

PRIEST OF "SUN CULT" WILL UNDERGO INQUIRY

Illinois Committee Wants to Know Fate of Children Committed to Them.

CHICAGO, April 26.—Otoman Zar Adusht Hanish, "Little Father" and High Priest of the "Sun Cult," has run afoul of the Curran Investigating Committee of the State Legislature.

The Curran Committee, which has been investigating "baby farming" in Chicago, this afternoon issued a subpena directing Hanish to appear before it on Monday and tell of the system in vogue of surrendering little children to the cult of which he is the head. Blank subpenas for a large number of Hanish's men and women aids and other members of the "Sun Temple" on Lake Park avenue, also were issued.

The disappearance of "Little Billy" Lindsay from the "Temple" will also be investigated. Hanish is under indictment in the United States Courts on charges of having sent obscene literature through the mails and by express.

"We will go to the bottom of the whole matter," said Chairman Curran. "We want to know all about Hanish."

That not more than two-thirds of the contributions for charitable purposes are used for benevolent work was disclosed by the committee in the testimony of Wilfred S. Reynolds, superintendent of the Illinois Children's Home and Aid Society.

Refugees arriving here from Hermosillo, the Sonora State capital, say that banks and many of the mercantile houses are closed, and that the laboring classes face starvation.

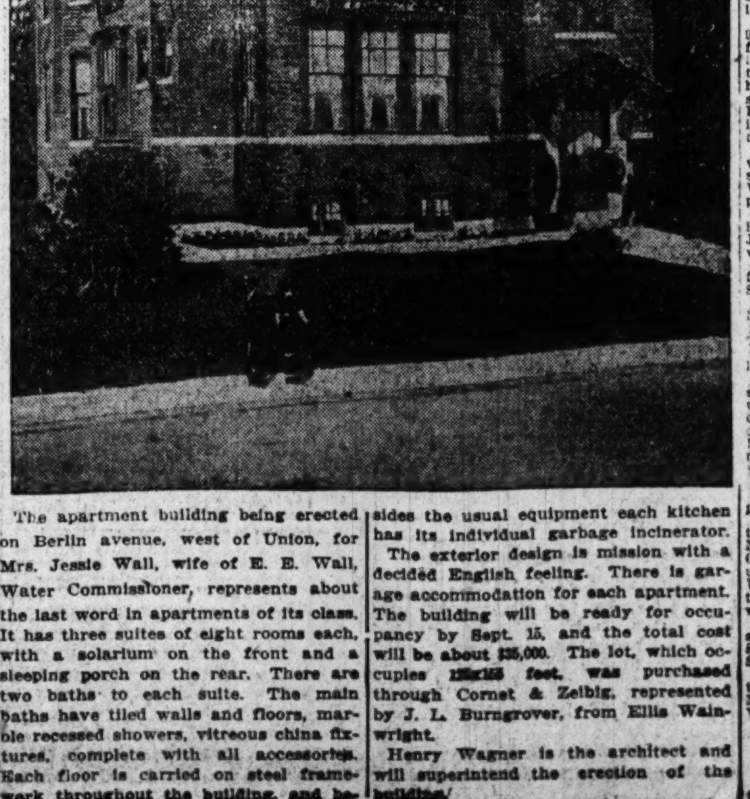
The surplus moneys were increased today by $750,000 received from the Mercantile Trust Co. for the first consignment of the $2,500,000 in bonds.

Garage for Each Family at New Apartment



The apartment building being erected on Berlin avenue, west of Union, for Mrs. Jessie Wall, wife of E. E. Wall, Water Commissioner, represents about the last word in apartments of its class. It has three suites of eight rooms each, with a solarium on the front and a sleeping porch on the rear. There are two baths to each suite. The main baths have tiled walls and floors, marble recessed showers, vitreous china fixtures, complete with all accessories. Each floor is carried on steel framework throughout the building, and besides the usual equipment each kitchen has its individual garbage incinerator.

The exterior design is mission with a decided English feeling. There is garage accommodation for each apartment. The building will be ready for occupancy by Sept. 15, and the total cost will be about $35,000. The lot, which occupies [illegible] feet, was purchased through Cornet & Zeibig, represented by J. L. Burngrover, from Ellis Wainwright.

Henry Wagner is the architect and will superintend the erection of the building.

This is the same property that the Nicholls-Ritter-Goodnow Realty Co. sold to Mr. Johnson some time ago, and it is now sold to Mrs. Kienstra for a home. BARNGROVER AND SPECHT TAKE OVER GREER CO. RENTALS

Experts in Sales Department of Cornet & Zeibig Obtain Old Business.

James L. Barngrover and William S. Specht have taken over the rental business of the Greer Real Estate Co., which in the future will be operated as Barngrover & Specht.

The Greer Co., of which R. C. Greer is president and E. W. Greer vice-president, has for more than half a century ranked with the leading real estate agencies of the city.

Both Barngrover and Specht have been connected with the firm of Cornet & Zeibig, Barngrover for eight years with the sales department and Specht for 20 years with the leasing and rental department. Previously Barngrover had been connected with Charles F. Vogel. He has promoted many important sales of both residential and business holdings.

Specht has been instrumental in the promotion of many downtown leases, in which line of business the concern will give special attention. As a stenographer, in his early days, for Cornet & Zeibig, Specht was a student of details of the realty business and is regarded as an authority on notarial and probate matters.

A week ago E. W. Greer married the divorced wife of Russell E. Gardner, from whom she received as alimony $100,000. They are now in the East on their honeymoon.

Since their departure, $500 in gold has been received from R. C. Greer Jr., of San Francisco, Cal. at the Greer Real Estate office, as a wedding gift for the happy pair.

E. W. Greer and R. C. Greer, it was announced, will devote their attention in the future to the sale of farms and timber lands. They will have offices in the Fullerton Building adjoining those of Barngrover and Specht.

Every Home Needs This Fine Remedy

A Mild, Reliable Laxative-tonic Is Something That No Family Should Be Without.

MRS. J. W. ANDERSON

No well-regulated home should be without a laxative, for there is scarcely a day in a family of several persons that someone doesn't complain of a headache, of sleeplessness, or show the first signs of a cold.

A laxative then becomes a necessity or what was a trifling congestion at the beginning may run into a serious cold or fever. No harsh remedy is needed, but simply a mild laxative-tonic that will make the liver active and stir up the bowels. People who have tried a great many things, and are themselves heads of families who have seen the little ills run to big ones, will tell you that there is nothing better than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which you can obtain at any drug store for fifty cents or one dollar a bottle, the latter being the family size.

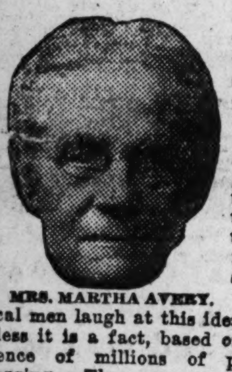
Among the great believers in Syrup Pepsin for constipation in old or young, and as a general household emergency remedy, is Mrs. J. W. Anderson, Osawatomie, Kan., who writes after using one sample bottle and two dollar bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin: "On the plea of the duty that everyone owes to fellow sufferers, I appeal to all such who are bowed in spirit, broken in health and discouraged with life, not to give up until they have given Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin a fair trial." Syrup Pepsin is scientifically compounded and its purity is vouched for. Mothers give it to tiny babies, and grown people, taking a little larger amount, find it equally effective. It is mild and gentle, pleasant-tasting and free from griping.

It does not hide behind a high-sounding name and is absolutely free from any prohibited ingredient. Families who once use Syrup Pepsin forever after avoid cathartics, salts, pills and other harsh medicines, for these only do temporary good, are nauseous and a shock to any delicate system. Such things should never be given to children.

If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin and you would like to make a personal trial of it before buying it in the regular way of a druggist, send your address—a postal will do—to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 417 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed you.

YOU NEED A TONIC.

Pe-ru-na is One of the Original Spring Tonics of This Country. It has Stood the Test of Time.



MRS. MARTHA AVERY.

In all countries where the four seasons are well defined, winter, spring, summer, autumn, most people find themselves in the spring of the year in need of a spring tonic. Some medical men laugh at this idea. Nevertheless it is a fact, based on the experience of millions of people every spring. The common experience of mankind cannot be "laughed out of court." A spring tonic is demanded.

The crisp, stimulating air of winter has given place to the langorous, enervating, soporofic influences of spring atmosphere A spring tonic is needed. No better one can be selected than Peruna.

The symptoms which indicate the need of a spring tonic are: First, sleep poorly. Second, always tired out. Third, very nervous. Fourth, sometimes have foolish fears. Fifth, confusion of the senses. Sixth, brown moving specks before the eyes. Seventh, subject to spells of prostration. Eighth, dark circles around the eyes. Ninth, system out of order generally. Tenth, food seems to give no strength.

One of the people who writes us of his experience with spring tonics is Mr. J. O. Doggett, of Piedmont, South Carolina, P. O. Box 88. He says: "I have tried many kinds of medicine that claim to do wonders as a spring tonic. None of them equals Peruna. I took Peruna first to please a friend. I had no faith in it, but I was soon convinced. Peruna is the best medicine on the market for the relief of all catarrhal diseases."

Mr. B. S. Irvin, Mayor of Washington, Ga., says that he uses Peruna in his family as a tonic and he often recommends it to his friends. He also says that as a remedy for colds and catarrhal diseases and as a tonic he regards it as superior to all other remedies.

Mr. J. G. Hicks, Autaugaville, Alabama, says: "I have used Peruna and consider it one of the greatest tonics known."

Then there is Mr. C. N. Peterson, of No. 132 South Main St., Council Bluffs, Iowa. He says that constant confinement to his store caused his health to gradually break down. He was in need of a tonic. He took Peruna and five bottles restored him to complete health.

Mrs. Martha Avery, No. 28 Graham St., Leominster, Massachusetts, whose portrait appears in this article, is a great friend of Peruna. She writes: "Four years ago I had nervous prostration. I employed several doctors. One would say I had catarrh of the stomach and bowels, another nervousness and another enlargement of the liver. My stomach was in a bad shape. There was nothing which seemed to do me much good. I tried other remedies, but did not gain any flesh until I commenced taking your Peruna, which built me right up. I have taken several bottles, but have not taken any now for about six weeks. I am seventy-three years old. I never expect to be entirely well or young again, but I am thankful for what Peruna has done for me."—ADV.

MEXICANS STIRRED BY NEWSPAPERS TO ATTACK AMERICANS

Outbreak Is Feared Unless Government Suppresses Numerous Political Journals.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MEXICO CITY, April 26.—There is imminent danger of a repetition of the anti-American outbreaks of two years ago. This danger is not confined to the capital, but is present in the other large cities of the Republic. The trouble is being stirred up among the Mexicans for political reasons by the same local newspapers that conducted the former agitation.

The American Ambassador, Henry Lane Wilson, is taking no public steps to protest to the Mexican Government against these dangerous publications, though a word from him, it is said, would be followed by a strict censorship by the Huerta-Diaz administration, which would stop the inflammatory utterances of the press.

Delay Stirs Mexicans.

Whatever may be the merit of delay from the Washington standpoint in the recognition of the present government in Mexico, the delay itself is a mighty handy thing here in Mexico on which to hang the present virulent anti-American propaganda. There is no reason to believe that the demonstrations against the United States, if begun, will be permitted to advance beyond an initial stage.

The police department is directly under the supervision of Gen. Samuel Garcia, a capable and an energetic man, who is in favor with the American colony, and it is believed he can be depended upon to check disorders promptly. Nevertheless there is much uneasiness.

The peace disturbers insist that Washington is on the verge of intervention. This argument appeals particularly to the easily influenced lower classes. Some of the Mexican papers go so far as to charge that most of the present evils of Mexico are due to Washington, on the theory that because of Washington's refusal to recognize the Huerta administration, Mexico is being hindered from obtaining foreign loans, which are now urgently needed. Therefore, it is argued that Washington must be deliberately doing all it can to assist the turmoil in Mexico, hoping thus to create an excuse for intervention.

Bluff to Frighten Congress.

As nearly as can be estimated the action of Diaz and De la Barra in withdrawing temporarily their candidacies for office is not especially significant, but is simply a bluff intended to frighten Congress into fixing the date for the election.

There is, however, the other view, that both of these men realize the inexpediency of plunging Mexico into further political excitement at present, and the uselessness of going to the trouble and expense of prosecuting a campaign when no election is at hand.

Gen. Diaz, so it is said by many, has been losing strength and supporters of late. This leads some of the shrewd observers in Mexican politics to predict that the next constitutional President will be either Huerta or De la Barra.

HOUSEWARMING FOR A NEW FIRE STATION

Residents of Section of West End to Show Appreciation of Modern Equipment.

The residents of a section of the West End are so well pleased with the installation of a new fire department in their neighborhood that they are going to give an elaborate reception and house-warming to Chief Swingley and the fire fighters of Engine Company No. 50, the night of May 1, to open formally the new fire station.

The festivities will be in charge of John J. Connell, chairman of the Reception Committee appointed by the Forest Park Residents' Association. The others on the committee are Dr. E. H. Spooner and Adam Wackman. The association looks after the welfare of the district bounded by Forest Park boulevard, King's highway, Lindell boulevard and Sarah street.

The new engine house at 223 North Newstead avenue will have an auto fire engine, an auto truck and a picked corps of expert pompier men, with an equipment of scaling ladders and life lines.

Women of the neighborhood have promised the committee they will furnish cut flowers for the reception, 8 to 10 p. m.

PHYSICAL VALUATION OF RAILWAYS TO BEGIN SOON

Interstate Commerce Commission to Name Board of Engineers to Assist in Work.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The Interstate Commerce Commission is preparing to carry out the law providing for physical valuation of railroads. It was announced today that the first step will be the selection of a Board of Engineers to assist the commission. The board will meet in Washington not later than May 1.

The tentative valuations reached by the commission must be submitted to the carriers, the Department of Justice, the Governors of the states in which the properties are located, and to such additional parties as the commission may prescribe. Thirty days are allowed the railroads within which to file protest against any such tentative valuation. If no protest is filed, the valuation by the commission becomes final.

MAKES YOUR BACKACHE VANISH DRIVES RHEUMATIC PAINS AWAY

Eases Stiff, Sore, Swollen Joints and Muscles, Relieving Backache and Bladder Disorders After Few Doses Are Taken.

This is what Croxone, the new scientific discovery, does for sufferers of such troubles. It promptly relives these diseases because it reaches the cause. It soaks right into the walls and linings of the kidneys and cleans out the stopped up, inactive organs like water does a sponge—neutralizes, and dissolves every particle of uric acid and makes the kidneys sift from the blood all the waste matter and poisons that lodge in the joints and muscles to scratch and irritate and cause rheumatism. It soothes and heals the delicate linings of the bladder and leaves the kidneys in a clean, strong, healthy condition, so they can filter the blood and keep you well.

If you suffer with backache—have pains in the neck or sides—nervous or dizzy spells—a few doses of Croxone will relieve the congestion and you will be surprised how quickly all kidney, bladder and rheumatic troubles will disappear.

Croxone is different from all other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results. An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if Croxone should fail in a single case.—ADVERTISEMENT.

"WITH OUR STRICT"

Economical business methods we save our customers at least $50 on a piano. We do not claim to give you a $500 piano for $200, because our $200 piano isn't worth $500 in the first place. We do, however, give our patrons better quality for their money than they can get elsewhere, because we have always selected our pianos solely on their merits and—we don't spend all our profits for expenses (like many competitors do). Ask any of our many customers how we conduct our business. They'll cheerfully tell you. We employ no solicitors. We are not "tied up" with any factory and show our 21 different makes and 8 different players absolutely impartially. Just come and see. We arrange terms to suit you. Established 40 years.
F. BEYER & SON, 17th and Locust. (c92)

Pianos and Piano-Players

After you have looked at the many cheap pianos and "stool pigeons," it will be to your interest to call and see our large line of pianos and player-pianos. Our location, away from the downtown "high-rent" district, means that we can sell for a much smaller margin of profit, and we also have at all times unusual bargains in used instruments. Our rental plan saves you the drayage.

MISSOURI WILL AID INQUIRY INTO SHOE CO. WAGES

By Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 26.—The following telegram from Lieutenant-Governor Painter of Missouri, came today to Lieutenant-Governor O'Hara:

"The Missouri Senate Committee to investigate wages for women will meet in St. Louis early in May. The committee will be glad to co-operate with your committee in any way it can.

(Signed) "W. R. PAINTER, Lieutenant-Governor of Missouri."

The message was in response to the telegram sent by Lieutenant-Governor O'Hara yesterday suggesting that the committee from the two states co-operate in investigation of the affairs of the International Shoe Co., which has factories in St. Louis and Springfield, Ill.

The message sent to Lieutenant-Governor Painter of Missouri, which brought forth the above reply related to the testimony before the Illinois Senate Vice Commission that girls employed in the Springfield factory of the International Shoe Co., a $25,000,000 corporation, were paid as low as $3 per week.

O'Hara's Message to President Still Unanswered.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Lieutenant-Governor O'Hara's telegram to President Wilson, directing attention to testimony before the Illinois Vice Commission, showing relations between the International Shoe Co. and employes, with the charge that the company was maintaining a lobby in Washington against the tariff bill was received today at the White House.

Take Good Care of Your Heart

Your heart is the most important organ you have, and the least strain on it (no matter what cause) interferes with your general health.

One of the most frequent causes of heart strain is stomach gas, which collects and presses against the heart. You can't imagine how this pressure of gas interferes with your circulation and slowly undermines your general health.

Neither can you appreciate until you try them how Baalmann's Gas-Tablets entirely eradicate, prevent and cure permanently every bit of gas that collects and presses against your most precious organ.

Do not compare Baalmann's Gas-Tablets with ordinary dyspepsia remedies, because they are in a class by themselves. Dyspepsia medicines are all right in ordinary indigestion, but when it comes to such a serious matter as gas around your heart, don't trifle with makeshifts; get the genuine Baalmann's Gas-Tablets in a yellow carton. It surely is the only permanent and effective remedy and cure for gas around the heart region.

All druggists sell Baalmann's Gas-Tablets and we will for 50c, but insist upon getting the genuine in a yellow box; only then can you expect the results we promise you. Send us 50c and we will mail them to you postpaid.

FREE TREATMENT COUPON.

Any sufferer mailing this coupon, with name and P. O. address, to J. Baalmann Co., 386 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal., will receive a free trial treatment of Baalmann's Gas-Tablets, postpaid. Write today. (5)

LAWMAKERS GLAD TO BE ALIVE AFTER SHELL MISSES 'EM

Mississippi Congressman Tells How It Feels When Under Fire of Warship.

SHOT AT BY MISTAKE

Junketing Boat Resembled Target and Monitor at Practice Came Near to Hitting It.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The members of the congressional party who went down to Potomac River in the Dolphin to see the target practice, this week, and were shot at by mistake by the Tallahassee—the old Monitor Florida—were congratulated on their escape today by colleagues.

"I was not hit, nor did I see the shell," said Representative Samuel Andrew Witherspoon of Mississippi, "but I heard it. Oh, I heard it as it went by."

Witherspoon, who stood in the stern of the ship, within six feet of where the 850-pound shell passed, described for the correspondent of the Post-Dispatch the accident, which might have resulted in a tragedy, as he saw it.

"Now," said Witherspoon, "I do not want to censure the officers, Admiral Twining and others, who were on the Tallahassee, for I think the mistaking of the Dolphin for the Katahadin—the target—was a most natural thing, under the circumstances.

"The atmosphere was murky, and a fog rose from the water. Only three times during as many days did the officers on the Tallahassee find fit weather for firing.

"The Congressmen were eager to get back to Washington to take part in the tariff debate. Naturally, there was eagerness at both ends of the practice field.

"It was the third day out, between 2 and 3 o'clock, when the shot that swept across our bow, not more than two feet above the awning, six feet above our heads, was fired.

"The Dolphin was anchored by the bow, seven miles from the Tallahassee. The target was three-quarters of a mile from the Dolphin and seven miles from the Tallahassee.

"In addition to the Tallahassee, the Dolphin, which we occupied, and the Katahdin, there was the Government tug boat, the Hercules, which was used for running back and forth between the Tallahassee and the Dolphin.

"The boats, except the target, were in constant communication by wireless. Shots were fired the first and second days. The first shell fell 140 feet and the second 130 beyond the target. Each time the gun was trained a little lower.

Third Shot Sings Overhead.

"The third shot was the one that same singing over us. As I said, the Dolphin was anchored by its bow and its stern was free to float with the tide. One time the stern was pointing toward the Tallahassee and again it had drifted until the Dolphin presented a side view to the gunners. At the time the shot was fired, the stern was closer to the Tallahassee than any other part of the boat. That, to me, is a most important fact in connection with the story of the shot.

"Near us stood the Hercules, which had come up from the Tallahassee to observe the destruction of the target. The smokestack of the Hercules is yellow. I think that the officers of the Tallahassee saw the smokestack of the Hercules and mistook it for the bull's eye.

"On the Hercules were the members of the subcommittee of the House of Representatives Gregg of Texas, Roberts of Massachusetts and Hobson of Alabama. They were very anxious to see the effect of the shot. On the Dolphin were Senators Bryan and Pondexter, Representatives Buchanan, Foster, Padgett, Bathrick and a number of naval officers and myself.

"The Dolphin party was in the stern of the boat, lined up on the side next to the target, watching. We had been notified to 'look out' by a wireless message passed between the Tallahassee and the Dolphin and the Hercules.

"I was looking toward the Tallahassee. A flash—the fire of the gun—was seen. This was followed by a loud, continuous report, as if a shell had exploded. Almost instantly the thing was over us. I felt myself dodging and saw others cringe, for I thought the shell had exploded near us. There was a splash about 150 yards beyond the opposite side of the Dolphin and a shower of water shot upward.

Serious, Then Mirthful.

"I realized immediately what had happened. It was evident that our boat had been taken for the target. The machinery of the gun is so made that it is impossible for a shell to go far astray to the right or left, and we were nearly a mile out of the line of the Kathahdin.

"My neighbors—my colleagues in Congress—realized the situation, too, and an expression of horror came over their faces. We had been missed by an 850-pound shell, shot from a 12-inch gun. The officers were pale and solemn and silent. They did not discuss the accident.

"Wireless messages notified the men on the Tallahassee as to the result of the shot. Soon everybody in the congressional party began to smile. Smiles gave way to grins and grins to outbursts of laughter. Some Congressmen were nervous, but for hours to come the happiest crowd that ever assembled on the Dolphin enjoyed life. The joy that came with the full realization of our narrow escape from passing into eternity was so great that the grown men acted like small boys on a frolic. We danced, we laughed, we sang and made merry in many ways.

"I will ask for a pension,' said one man. "I know that veterans of the Civil War are getting pensions for less than I have been through today.

"We could not see the Tallahassee from where we stood, except now and then, and she looked like a black spot on the water."

"I want to congratulate you on being alive," said Representative William T. Murray who came up.

"Thank you," declared the Mississippian, "I rejoice to see you."

WOMAN SUES CONSTABLE FOR $300 IN PIANO CASE

Miss Kate Brengard Alleges He Made False Return in Report on Attachment.

Suit for $300 against Constable Henry Landwehr and his bondsmen was filed yesterday by Miss Kate Brengard, 23 years old, of 3522 Halliday avenue. The allegation is that the Constable made a false return in his report on the serving of a notice of an attachment suit filed against her by the receiver for the Phipps Piano Co., which before retirement had offices at 4302 Olive street.

Miss Brengard, in March, 1909, purchased a piano from the company. She paid $15 down and gave her notes for the balance. Subsequently the notes were sold to A. Beecher, 4351 Maryland avenue. The allegation in the petition is that she paid all the notes and has the canceled mortgage. Last October suit was filed by the receivers of the piano company for $20, the amount of two of the series of notes. April 19 the piano was taken by the Sheriff from the home of Mrs. Durand. Attorneys for the plaintiff declare they will show their client has paid all the notes.

Eagle Captured in Illinois.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., April 26.—A large gray eagle, measuring seven feet four inches from tip to tip was shot by Frank Knowles, who after wounding the bird had a hard fight to capture it. The bird was attempting to catch a young pig when Mr. Knowles discovered it. The eagle was bought by a Chicago man.

HEALY RELEASED AND RETURNS TO ST. LOUIS

Former Secretary of Police Relief Association Out of Penitentiary on Parole.

John M. Healey, former secretary of the Police Relief Association, left the penitentiary at Jefferson City yesterday morning after having served two years of a five years' sentence for embezzling funds of the association. He was met at the prison gates by his wife, who accompanied him back to St. Louis.

Healy's release was in conformance with a parole granted by Gov. Hadley shortly before his retirement from office. Under its provisions Healy's term was cut from five to two years.

Mrs. Healy's efforts to obtain her husband's realese caused a controversy between Gov. Hadley and Matt G. Reynolds, former president of the Police Board, and former Circuit Attorney Jones and Healy's attorney, C. Orrick Bishop. Mrs. Healy insisted a promise of a pardon had been made before her husband pleaded guilty and in this she was supported by Jones, a brother-in-law of Jeptha D. Howe, one of Healy's lawyers; Bishop and Reynolds. Gov Hadley insisted he had made no specific promise to Healy.

In Memoriam.

In memory of my dear husband and our loving father, Paul Mueller, who departed this life one year ago, April 24, 1912.

A precious one from earth has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear mother, mother-in-law and grandmother, Mrs. Catharine Herkenhoff, who departed this life April 24, 1912.

Sad and sudden was the call
For our dear mother, loved by all;
We little thought that on that day
Our dear mother would be called away.
Sadly missed by
CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear mother, Wilhelmina Beimfohr, who died April 23, 1912, aged 54 years.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
God in His wisdom has recalled
The boon His love had given,
And though the body slumbers here
The soul is safe in heaven.
From your loving CHILDREN. (c)

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of Laura Berger, our dear mother, who departed one year ago today, April 23, 1912.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
We saw your suffering,
We heard your sighs,
With throbbing heart
And weeping eyes.
But now you calmly sleep at last,
All grief, all pain, all suffering past;
God loved you, too, He thought it best
To take you home to be at rest.
Sadly missed by mother and children.
MABEL AND WILLMAN EAGLE.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear brother, Bert Daniel, who departed this life one year ago, April 30, 1912.

One year has passed, our hearts still sore,
And as time goes on we miss you more;
The moon and stars are shining upon a lonely grave,
Where sleeps our dear brother, whom we loved, but could not save.
We saw your suffering, we heard your sighs,
With throbbing hearts and weeping eyes;
But now you calmly sleep at last,
All pain, all grief, all suffering past.
God in His mercy called you home,
We bow to His sweet will.
Sadly missed by
SISTERS AND BROTHERS.

DEATHS

In Memoriam.

In memory of our beloved father, Bartholomew Larcari, who departed this life April 26, 1897.

Just sixteen years ago today
We laid you silently away;
No longer here to greet us,
Or lead us to the right.
Very bitter were some lessons
We did learn in the great strife,
But never once did we forget
In all trials, triumphs and defeats,
The true motto you once taught us,
"That right was might."
It helped us to protect that name
You asked us not to tarnish,
Since our beloved mother
And dear John, our elder brother,
Have come to join you over there;
One to the west, and two to east have gone,
So here alone and forlorn
I miss you all the more.
Hence patiently I am waiting,
For God's will must be done,
To join you in that peaceful home,
From you no more to part or roam.
Still lingering in the heart of your daughter. SHERRY.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Graseck, who departed this life April 24, 1912.

A year has passed, our hearts still sad,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home
That never can be filled.
You are gone, but not forgotten,
Lonely are our hearts today,
For the one we loved so dearly
Has forever passed away.
We laid her in our family lot,
Where none was laid before;
In solitude, but not forgot,
She sleeps forever more.
Sadly missed by her children,
Rose Wolf (nee Graseck), Lillie Bene (nee Graseck), George, Louis, Dave, Edward, Theodore, Gustave.

Lost and Found

Solid agate, 10c line; minimum 20c.

THAT LOST ARTICLE MAY NOT BE FOUND TODAY

Or tomorrow or next week. In fact, a month or more may elapse before it turns up. A little persistency may be necessary. Often the article remains unfound; often fear of prosecution or hope of a more satisfactory reward may delay the restoration. Then the belated awakening of the finder's conscience explains many delays. But persistency and Post-Dispatch wants will usually recover a lost article if an honest person finds it. The service of the Post-Dispatch Lost and Found Bureau is also enlisted in behalf of advertisers.

WANTED

Southern lands in exchange for a 340-acre improved Illinois farm near St. Louis; 140 acres rich bottom land, 170 acres pasture and fruit land, 30 acres bearing orchard. The bottom lands and pasture are rented for $1450 cash. The orchard, which produced nearly 5000 bushels of choice fruit last year and promises equally well for 1913, is not rented and should show a cash return to the purchaser of $2500 to $3500. Offers for the equity in this farm, which is to be sold subject to a $20,000 incumbrance, are solicited. Ordinarily this farm should bring $50,000, but because it belongs to a number of owners who disagree as to method of handling, it has been neglected and trifled with and now is to be sold or exchanged, no matter what the sacrifice. Therefore all offers will be considered and some shrewd quick man will stand to make a lot of money. Box A-64, Post-Dispatch.

Fronting Forest Park

The De Mun Tract
DUE WEST; undetached; well served by street cars. Given these three qualities no St. Louis subdivision has failed of success.

Here is a tract embracing 102 acres; a perfect rectangle of high land, without an unsightly feature.

It fronts 1132 feet on the Skinker road, opposite Forest Park, and runs west to Pennsylvania avenue. With very little grading it is ready now for subdivision and improvement.

Location, surroundings, transportation facilities and our price make this an acreage proposition that no one capable of handling it can afford to miss.

MARYLAND TERRACE
A Close-In Suburban Home Place

Its location is amidst environment that perpetuates its attractiveness. As an investment none better can be found in suburban residence property. It is right in the center of the very rapid development activity of the Western part of the city. The paving of Pennsylvania Avenue, constructing of the $100,000 sewer, together with other improvements on the property make Maryland Terrace a special feature of attractiveness these days.

MARYLAND TERRACE is just far enough out to afford the charms of nature and close enough in to afford all the conveniences of city life. Its elevation provides the fresh pure air that insures good health and it slopes just right to be pleasing. The character of improvements, increasing beauty of surroundings, delightful automobile drive to and from the city, insure its permanent desirability and future enhancement of value. You positively cannot find a more desirable home-place from all view points than Maryland Terrace. You should select your lot as quickly as possible while the price is low and the terms are easy. You can own a Maryland Terrace lot by depositing $25.00 or $50.00 a month. Go out and see it.

Take the Olive (University) car and ride to the property, or drive to Pennsylvania Avenue. It's an enjoyable trip.

IMPROVED PROPERTY FOR SALE

TOMBRIDGE AGENCY

509 CHESTNUT ST.

During the past week we have sold 2 cottages advertised last Sunday and took earnest money on a corner lot; all were big bargains and for that reason sold quick, and several parties came in after they were sold and regretted that they were too slow.

Here are several more bargains, dirt cheap. Now try to be in time for them; don't be too late!

Look at 3525 Salena st., a 2-story brick flat for 2 families, between Broadway and President street; both fully improved, near Lemp Brewery, near public school and near St. Agatha's Church; you can buy this with $100 or more cash down and balance to suit. Price is $2700.

6840 Habsburger av., a fine, well-built, brand-new 3-room cottage, cemented laundry and closet; lot 30 feet front; fine porches; will take $100 cash down, balance like rent; price is reduced to $1600; be sure to look at this today.

We have 3 very nice and conveniently arranged brick cottages, each 3 rooms, bath and cemented laundry, with all improvements made except side street and alley; if interested, send us your address; we will sell these at $200 cash down, and balance like rent. You will be glad later that you were on time for one of these bargains.

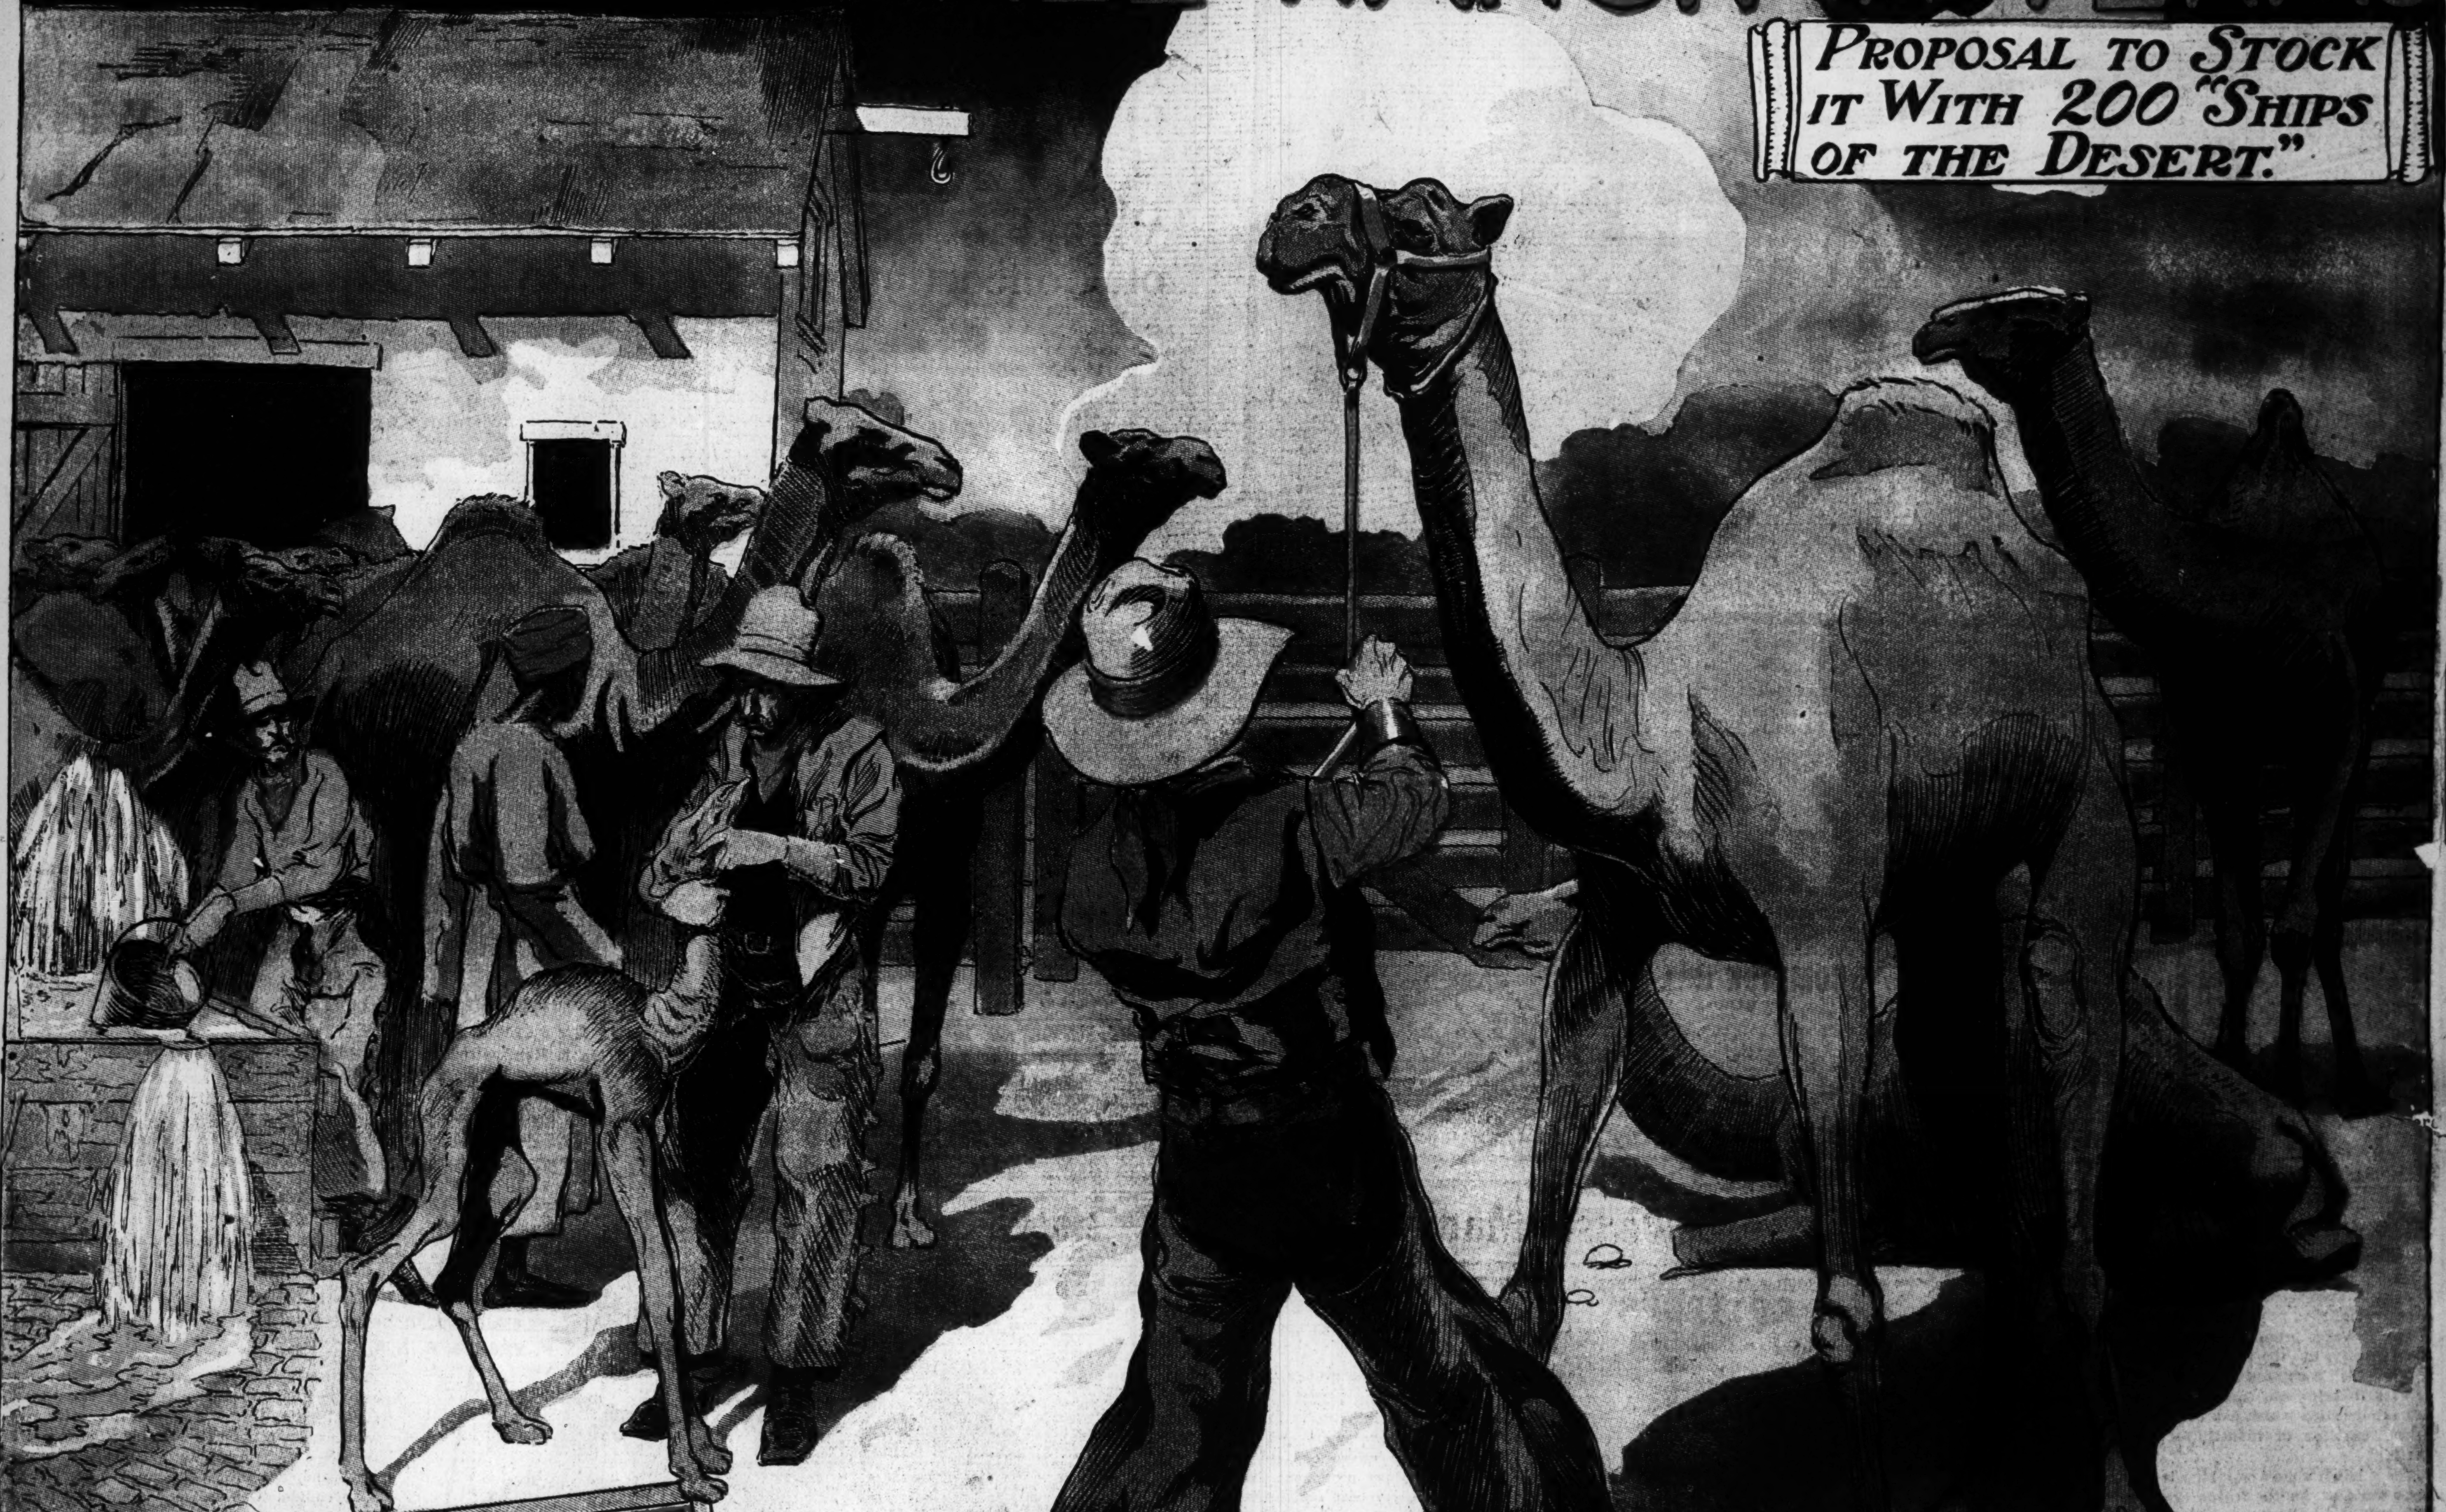
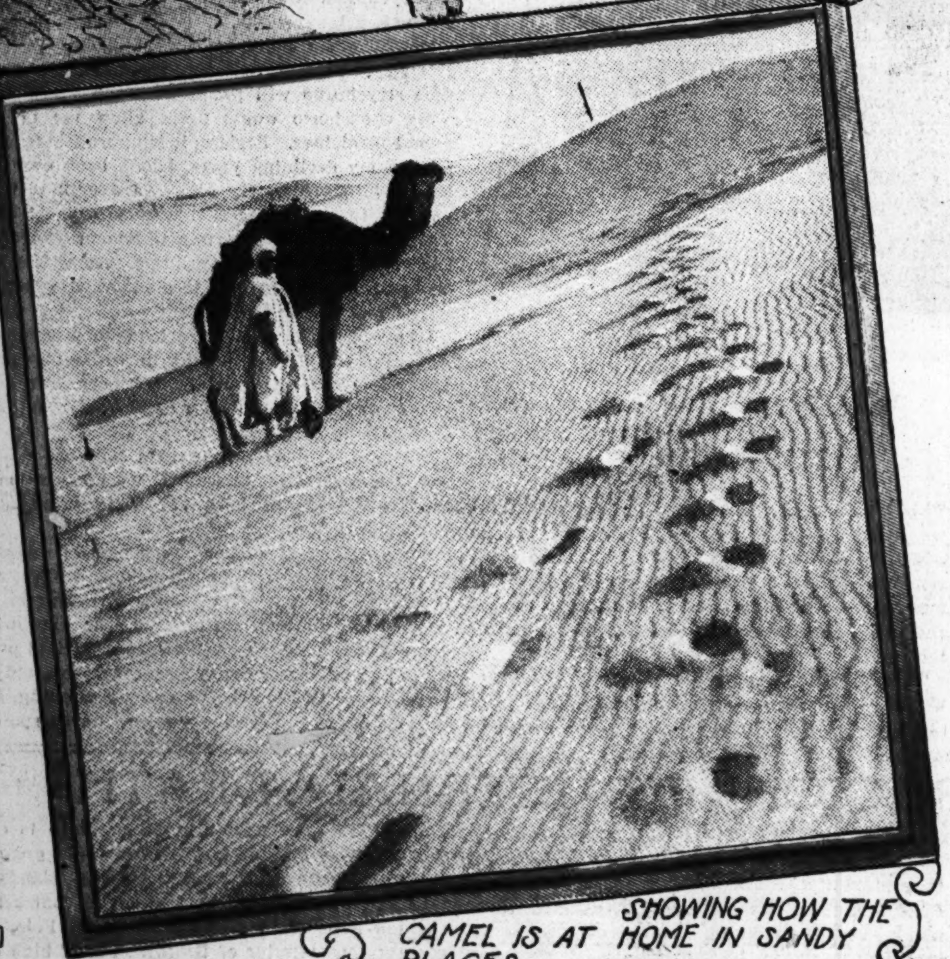
A CAMEL RANCH IN TEXAS

PROPOSAL TO STOCK IT WITH 200 "SHIPS OF THE DESERT."





SHOWING HOW THE CAMEL IS AT HOME IN SANDY PLACES.

A PICTURESQUE spectacle imported from Oriental wastes in Arabia and India—that of caravans of camels winding with burdens of freight across the steppes of the Southwest—is to be witnessed by the semi-arid regions of western Texas and the deserts of New Mexico, Arizona and California. It is announced that an association of stockmen, headed by J. H. Trimble, will establish a camel ranch, stocked with 200 "ships of the desert," on the Rio Grande, 150 miles south of Cape Verde, Tex.

These regions, often rich in metals and minerals, are throughout vast spaces scarcely scratched by railroads. Because of their sands, [illegible] which secure roads cannot be constructe[illegible] are largely impracticable to automobiles. For the same reason travel is difficult for hard-hoofed animals like the horse and the mule. But for such very conditions nature has contrived the camel, with its padded feet, its speed, its strength for bearing ponderous weights and its celebrated ability to pass long periods without food or drink.

As the camel is usually considered a tropical animal, its introduction into the temperate zone might at first be regarded with misgivings. But it is to be remembered that the nights on the Sahara desert are often bitterly cold. Besides, the camel has for centuries thrived on the frigid steppes of Siberia, the high plains of Afghanistan and the uplands of India, where, as a protection from the climate, it at once produces a thick and shaggy coat of hair. Finally, the camel, transplanted to Australia, has flourished in the Antipodes.

The camel is usually considered peculiar to desert countries. But that it is also at home on every sort of soil has been proved by its acclimatization in Siberia and India. This faculty of adapting itself to conditions should make the camel a valuable beast of burden on the grassy plains of Texas and even on the rocky ground of parts of Arizona and California.

The Southwestern cowboy may find it comically troublesome to transform himself into a camel driver, to learn to perch himself on top of a swaying hump and accustom himself without seasickness to the billowing stride of his new courser. And the novelty will not be all on the broncho buster's side. The camel, too, accustomed to Arab drivers in the national burnous, may find something startling in a driver clad in chaps a[illegible]orero, his heels armed with spurs.

This will not be the first time that an attempt has been made to introduce camels in Texas. The first experiment, essayed by the United States Government under the guidance of Jefferson Davis, then Secretary of War in the Cabinet of Franklin Pierce, was initiated elaborately, but went to wreck in the upheaval of the Civil War. The ruins of the old caravansary in which the camels were housed still stand in Cape Verde.

In 1856 about 40 camels arrived at Cape Verde with 12 Armenian drivers and their families. While the animals were being purchased in the East by agents of the Government, a sketch was made of a caravansary in Asia Minor, which was reproduced in the minutest particulars. The timber was obtained at Pensacola, Fla., and it cost $125 a thousand feet to transport it to Texas.

Secretary Davis believed that as camels could cross the desert country more swiftly than horses and sustain themselves longer without food or drink, they would facilitate the carrying of dispatches and the pursuit of Indians.

Before opportunity came to test the camels thoroughly, the Civil War arrived and their sponsor became President of the Confederacy, with greater designs upon his hands than dromedary ranches.

It was three years after the close of the war before the Government remembered its Cape Verde experiment. In this time the herd had increased to 125 head. They were sold to a Laredo stockman named Bether Coopwood, who paid $12 to $14 apiece for them. He sold part of them to a stockman who hoped to breed them for a circus and some to a Californian, who intended to sell their hair. The rest were sent to Mexico to be used by a transportation company.

The transportation scheme failed, and the camels were brought back to the United States and joined to the herd in California. Some of them escaped, and their offspring for several years roamed wild over the plains of Texas, New Mexico and Arizona. A boy who captured one took it to San Antonio and sold it to a showman for $30.

During these years it occasionally happened that a cowboy would ride palely into camp with a weird narrative of an apparition he had met. It went slouching across the sands on noiseless feet, with a long and oscillating neck and a hump on its back. From time to time it emitted a ghostly grunt.

The cow puncher's mates would usually rally him on the quality of "pizen" he had imbibed. But occasionally cowboys would run down one of the animals and shoot it. In the cities, where Jefferson Davis' experiment had never been heard of or was forgotten, these tales were set down as prevarications of the plains. How could an Arabian camel be ranging wild in Texas?

But these phantoms of the Southwestern steppes were of flesh and blood—the descendants of the camels imported years before by the Government. It is probable that in the remote and unvisited reaches of the Great Desert there are yet camels to be found which have never seen a man.

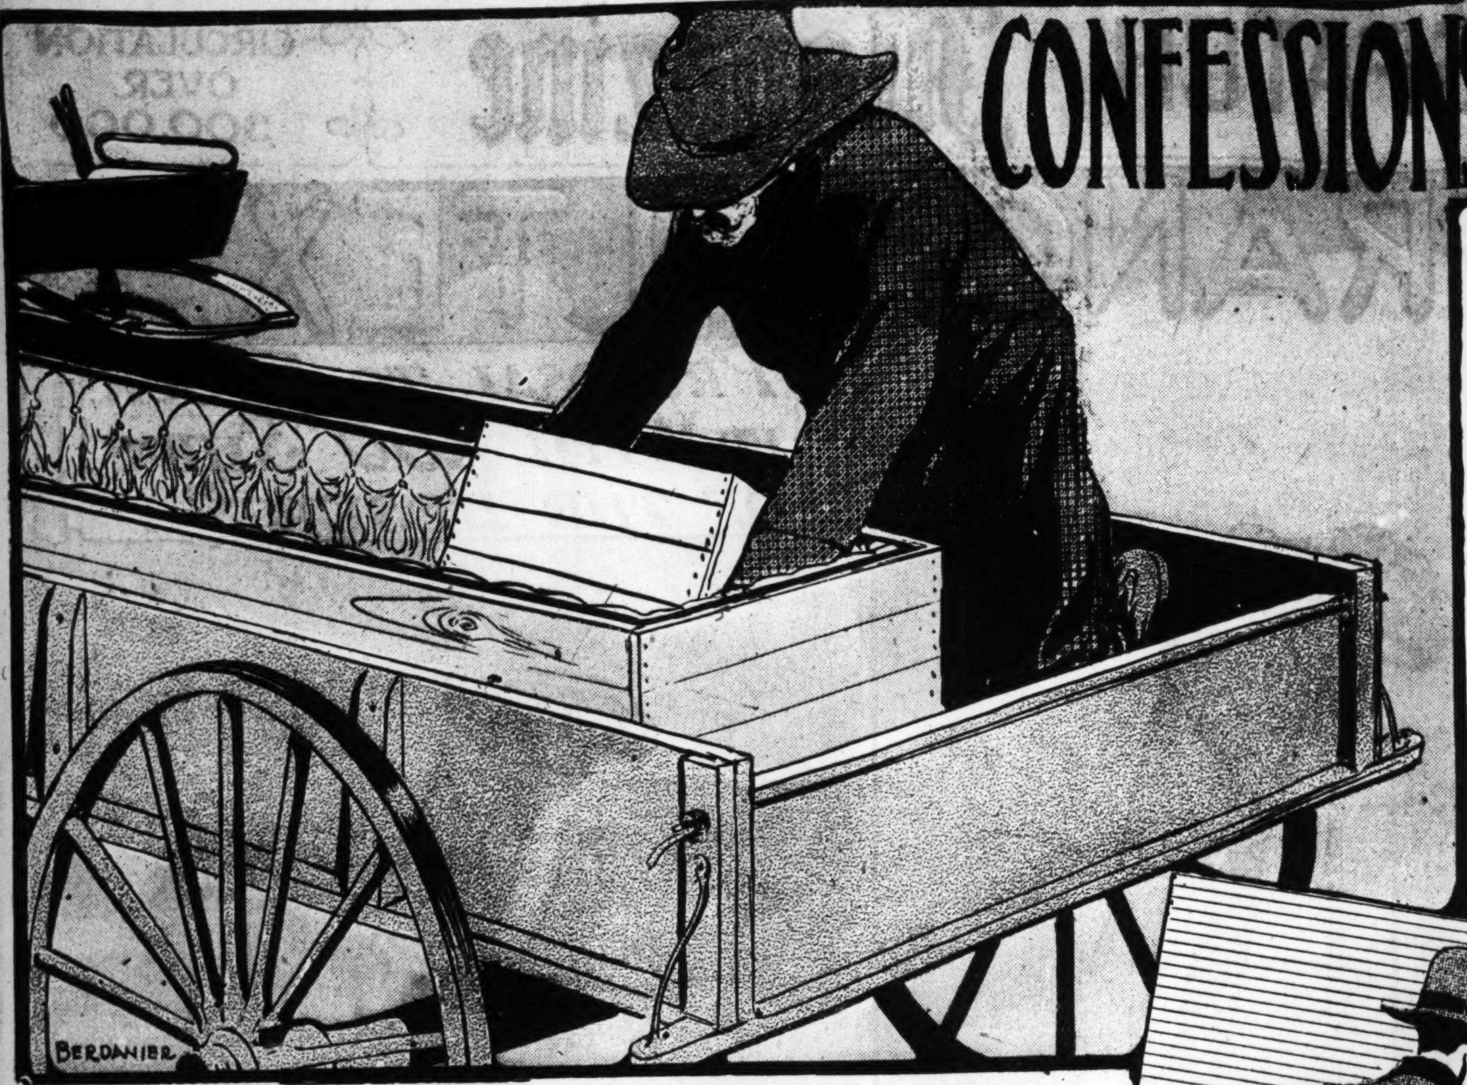
CONFESSIONS OF AN OKLAHOMA BOOTLEGGER

Understanding of Human Nature First Requisite, Says Philosopher of Illicit Liquor Sales, Who Has Been in "Business" Half a Century, Daily Matched Wits With Law Officers and Was Never Arrested and Who Finds Solace in Remembering 50 Per Cent of Concoction He Peddled Was "Pure, Sparkling Spring Water"



HIDING THE WHISKY IN THE COFFIN.

THE following frank "Confessions of a Bootlegger" were supplied to the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine by the author's attorney, a well-known Oklahoma lawyer. The places, dates and names used in the original have been suppressed or altered at the request of the attorney for the protection of his client. The narrative furnishes a humorous and significant account of illicit liquor traffic in prohibition territory.

THERE is, perhaps, no business that requires a more thorough understanding of human nature than that of bootlegging. After your goods have been safely transported into and concealed in a prohibition territory, the whole secret of avoiding apprehension lies in knowing who can be trusted as customers.

In addition to being a good judge of human nature, a first-class bootlegger must have a goodly supply of nerve and confidence; he should have a wide acquaintance in the territory in which he operates; he should be affable and what is termed "a good mixer," and he should have some other established business to use as a blind.

For, however prone a neighborhood may be to the contrary, in the rivalry for the good things of life which a successful business of bootlegging is sure to bring on, someone is almost sure to ask the question which has embarrassed so many other "captains of industry"—"Where did you get it?"

For a blind, almost anything is better than the drug business, for the reason that druggists have overdone the business, and clumsily, too. There is no druggist in a prohibition town who is not under suspicion by someone. For a business to use as a blind, I find there is nothing better than that of small farmer and stockman.

Uses School-Teaching as "Blind" for Bootlegging.

I was 67 years old a few months ago. This part of Oklahoma, in which I was born and have spent all my days, has always been prohibition territory. I have bootlegged since I was 17 years of age and have never been under arrest. In the earlier years of my career I was more daring, and used so little judgment at times that now when I look back upon some of my foolhardy exploits, I shudder and wonder how I ever escaped the penitentiary.

Up to the adoption of statehood in 1906, it was only necessary to escape the vigilance of United States marshals, some of whom were honorable men, conscientiously trying to discharge their duty in suppressing the illicit liquor traffic. Others, more corrupt than any bootlegger, would connive at his trade for a small bribe and would often, themselves, consume or even peddle the goods they confiscated.

I always made it a point to know intimately and court the friendship of every marshal, sheriff, policeman and other peace officer with whom I came in contact and to fathom as far as possible all of his weaknesses. But I was careful always not to become too familiar or confidential with those endowed with few redeeming qualities. For these, while you may bribe them and get by for a time, are almost sure, some day, to betray you.

In my early days, while yet unmarried, I was a school teacher, ostensibly, and it was a good blind, too. In those days, while a school teacher was customarily allowed the privilege of indulging moderately in liquor, he was above the suspicion of selling it.

It was back in the 'eighties that I had my first close call. I was spending my winter vacation with relatives who lived about 7 miles out from town. Among them was an aged aunt who was taken with pneumonia and died. The following day, I took the farm wagon and drove to town for a coffin. While there I found there was a small shipment of wet goods for me at the express office.

The express agent was kind enough to caution me that the package had been discovered by two marshals and was being watched. I had always promised myself that no marshal would take me, dead or alive, and as I had a rifle in the wagon, I told the agent curtly that marshals didn't bother me.

And so confident was I and so determined that they would not get me that I put the package in the wagon and drove out of town. How I escaped detection while yet in town I never took the trouble to investigate.

After I had driven about two miles at a pretty lively gait, I looked backward and saw two horsemen coming at full gallop. I whipped up the team and rattled against the cold north wind at a rate of speed I am afraid few respectable farmers would drive with an aunt's casket in the wagon. An occasional glance backward convinced me that they were marshals and after "yours truly."

When I drove over a sudden rise and into a shallow ravine I was hidden from their view for a minute or two. With the quickness of a cat, I jumped back of the spring seat, unscrewed the top of the box and that of the casket and put the incriminating package in the coffin.

Hides Package of "Bust-Head" in Aunt's Coffin.

Then I screwed both lids back tightly, jumped into my seat and drove on without looking backward. I had not gone more than a quarter of a mile when the pursuers galloped up, one on each side of the wagon, and the spokesman began:

"What y' drivin' so fast f'r, pard?"

"If you was as near froze as I am, you'd drive fast, too," I answered with chattering teeth.

"Stop," he commanded. I drew the team to a halt, threw on the brake and looked at him with as much of an expression of mingled surprise, inquiry and innocence as I could muster. They both looked searchingly into the wagon, in which they could planly see there was nothing except the rifle, the box and myself.

"What ye got in that box?" asked the marshal, who was doing the talking.

"Coffin," I answered.

"Let's see," commanded he. I climbed back over the seat and unscrewed the lid of the box, exposing the coffin.

"D' you ever see a coffin before?" I asked with sarcasm. "Want to see inside the coffin?" I continued, beginning to turn one of the screws vigorously.

Then, as if overcome with the humor of a couple of fool marshals on a wild goose chase after the wrong man, I laughed, not wholly in derision, but with a sprinkling of pity and good nature.

"What 're you fellows after any way?" I asked. Then, straightening up as if the light had just penetrated my skull, I said; "Oh, I know who you fellows are after. You are after the man that got that whisky out of the depot. Why, he went that road toward Paw-paw Creek. Yes, yonder he goes now!"

And I pointed to a moving object which was unmistakably a wagon about two miles off, on the road towards Paw-paw Creek. They were convinced in an instant, and with much jerking and spurring of horses and flapping of slickers, they were off.

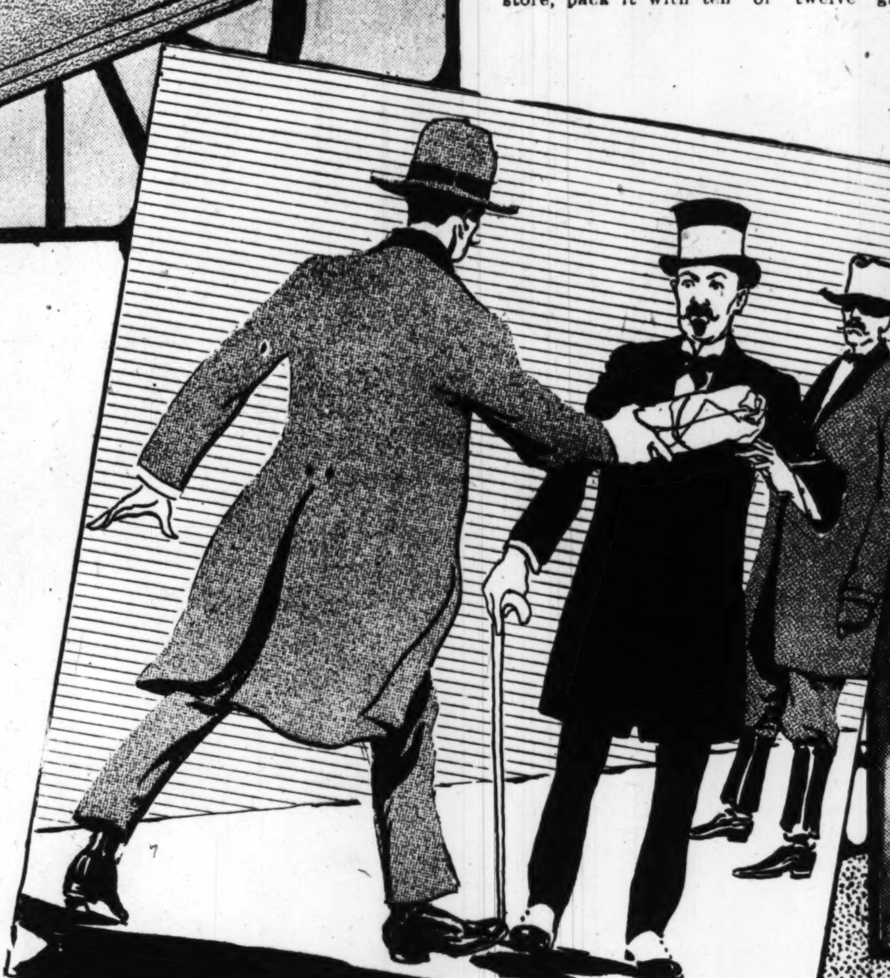
For years I have operated almost exclusively in a moderate sized Oklahoma town, and having a small stock-farm two miles out in the county, have daily some excuse for being in town. Almost every day I may be seen on the streets looking at horses which are for sale; buying, trading or selling horses, cattle or hogs with Tom, Dick and Harry.

I am "one of the boys," and when the inquiry is made: "I reckon if there's any thing in town?" I reply:

"I don't know. There was a fellow here this morning with some stuff. If you fellows want anything, I'll go see what I can do."

They make up the price of a pint or a quart. I take it and go around several blocks and come back with it. Sometimes it is in my pocket all the time. It takes considerable walking when this is repeated ten or fifteen times. But it pays, because even with my customers I am only "in on the ropes" and "can get it if anybody can."

During tribal days, and especially during council time, I sold barrels and barrels of whisky. My only trouble was having it shipped in fast enough. I always took an active part in politics, not that there was anything in politics in itself, but it afforded an excellent opportunity to be on the move and to mix with the people and to be on hand at public meetings, conventions, etc., and thus help out business. Many prominent Cherokees and Choctaws were my best customers.



HANDING THE JUDGE SOME "PRESERVED FRUIT."

I always worked as contrary as possible to the old adage: "The wicked flee when no one pursueth." I never took back alleys, and never was in the attitude of sneaking or dodging. I was always on the main street and seldom concealed a bottle in my pocket, but carried it wrapped in a bundle or in a small box as a man will carry any package of merchandise. When the bottle was delivered I would reserve the empty box for other deliveries. Many times I would stop and engage a policeman in conversation, having in plain view my box in which was a quart of "bust-head."

Brings in Whisky in Trunks and Goods Boxes.

And sometimes a fun-loving customer would pass and thinking to embarrass me would ask "What you got in your box, Bill?"

"Whisky!" I would answer, truthfully, but with a meaning smile.

I was placed in a pretty nervous position on one occasion by old Judge Roe—Roe was not his name, however. He was getting along in years. Every one called him "Uncle Bill" and his wife "Aunt Jane." He was extremely absent-minded. He gave me $2.50 one evening and asked me to bring him a quart the next morning, which I did. As I drove up Main street in my buggy I saw Uncle Bill standing in a crowd in which were two or three policemen. When I drew near, I stopped and called him. When he came up, I handed him the whisky wrapped in newspapers, saying loud enough for all bystanders to hear: "Here's some canned fruit wife sent to Aunt Jane."

"Canned fruit? Canned fruit?" he began asking in perplexity, at the same time tearing at the newspapers almost frantically and arousing the curiosity of several who were near by. I could not catch his eye or make any sign whatever. I coughed and cleared my throat—all in vain. As luck would have it, he dug into the end where the neck of the bottle was. With a start he remembered, and with the most beautiful stage effect I ever heard, he exclaimed; "Ah! Peach preserves! How kind of her!" and started for home on a trot with his heavy cane hanging on his arm.

So, all in all, I think I had the matter of selling reduced to a certain degree of perfection. The business of shipping in—which is a business in itself, coming under the head of introducing—I was never able to solve to my satisfaction. The methods I used were often crude and unreliable. I had friends in Fort Smith and Kansas City who would make me shipments in trunks. They would simply buy a good strong trunk at a secondhand store, pack it with ten or twelve gallons of whisky, buy a ticket, have the trunk sent as baggage and mail me the check.

These trunks always bore such names as "Miss Omer Davis," "Miss Florence Hudson," or some similar name, and the interior was always thoroughly doused with some strong perfume such as an Arkansas school mar'm might use. For a large shipment on election day or the holidays, I had a friend who lived near a stillhouse buy a barrel and pack it in a large box with a lot of old quilts, straw ticks and discarded clothing. He would throw in a few secondhand chairs and other old pieces of furniture and send all together to a small place near my home, by local freight, using the name "J. Berry Sims," or some other typical Arkansas name—some Arkansawyer moving in, you see.

As to the quality of goods, I find it more profitable to handle the strong, fiery grade of cheap whisky commonly known as "bust-head." This will stand a water dilution of fifty per cent. Then a couple of long "snorts" will start the most peaceable citizen talking about his kinfolks, and four drinks will cause him to fall on the ground and to hold to the grass to keep from falling off the earth.

This is what the tippling public of Oklahoma wants. Taste is not considered, but effect; and the more startling the effect the better they like it. It is astonishing what a distorted taste can be cultivated. I once had a very dear friend, whose name I will omit for obvious reasons, who was educated, and had cultured tastes in most things. Once when I was starting on a business trip to St. Louis, he gave me $2 and asked me to bring him a quart of fine whisky, which I did. I even contributed a half dollar and brought him a quart of excellent Kentucky bourbon.

The next day after giving it to him, I went to his office and found him cool and monosyllabic; he treated me with silent contempt and was never the same to me again. I learned afterward that he had awakened without a headache the morning after and had concluded I had grafted him out of $1.50.

To illustrate further that it is the effect alone that the liquor consumer is after, when the lid is on tightly, the sale of patent medicines increases correspondingly. Of this a certain druggist sold a great deal to some Indians near town. One brand, a tonic, contained a large per cent of strychnine. One day an Indian came into the store.

"Want some more stuff that makes you go this way," he said, imitating the spasmodic jerks that strychnine will produce.

My conscience would never allow me to sell patent medicines. Besides, it is unprofitable. And now in my declining years, I look back over my career with pride. My sons and daughters have had all the advantages that money could buy. The pipe organ in a certain Oklahoma church is one evidence of my philanthropy. No widow nor orphan has ever appealed to me in vain—especially those of my late customers.

I have given to charity carloads of secondhand Arkansas furniture—brought in with shipments, you remember. I have, in my barn loft now, twenty or more old hickory rockers to which any poor person is welcome.

I always avoided selling to a habitual drunkard, because such a person should be encouraged to reform. Besides, he might, while intoxicated, tell where he got it.

Then, too, it is with a great deal of satisfaction I remember that what I sold was always at least fifty per cent water, pure, sparkling spring water from my own spring, and who knows but what it contained most beneficent medicinal properties? The other fifty per cent was only a preservative to keep the water from spoiling, and it certainly did that—the mixture never spoiled.

ANTARCTIC REGION OF ETERNAL DEATH

FURTHER exploration within 1000 miles of the South Pole will be of no scientific value, according to Sir Ray Lankester.

"There is no living thing on the Antarctic Continent," he says, "excepting the seals and the penguins and a few other birds found on and near the coast line, and a minute insect like the so-called glacier flea, together with a few animalcules living in pools formed by the melting of ice in the brief summer, and species of algae, mosses, lichens and fungi."

Sir Ray, as director of the Natural History Museum in London, had charge of the antarctic birds, etc., brought back from the south polar continent by Capt. Scott's expedition on the Discovery, and he has had official first-hand information as to the results of all the explorations in that part of the globe.

Flowers would grow at the South Pole in summer if it were not for the mountains there, according to Prof. Lankester. It is these mountains that make the South Pole so cold. The South Polar area is an elevated mountainous land reaching 12,000 feet in parts, covered with perpetual ice in consequence of the elevation. Moreover, the Antarctic Continent is surrounded by the sea and is lifeless.

"There is a vast area of land around the north polar sea," said Sir. Ray, "which is green with vegetation and dotted with brilliantly colored flowers in summer, and yet is only 500 miles distant from the North Pole. In the arctic region there are seals, white bear, walrus, fox, wolves, musk ox and many small mammals and birds which stray from the neighboring continental lands.

"There is abundant vegetation, including flowering plants, which find a growing place wherever land is exposed. So far as temperature is concerned, these flowers and plants would grow at the North Pole itself were there any islands in that part of the frozen polar sea. In contrast to the low-lying land around the North Pole, the mountainous interior of Greenland is of high elevation and covered with perpetual ice and devoid of life.

"The North Pole is, in fact, a fair weather zone, while, on the other hand, the antarctic land is swept at all times of the year by blizzards of exceptional force and duration."

From the very beginning of life on the earth, it is asserted, the South Pole has been an uninhabited region. No animals ever lived there; the deepest digging will disclose no bones of extinct creatures. The Antarctic Continent is literally the only place on the whole earth where silence and mystery have existed from the first

"The VIGOR of LIFE"

As regards political economy I was, of course, while in college taught the liassez faire doctrines—one of them being free trade—then accepted as canonical. Most American boys of my age were taught, both by their surroundings and by their studies, certain principles which were very valuable from the standpoint of National interest, and certain others which were very much the reverse. The political economists were not especially to blame for this; it was the general attitude of the writers who wrote for us of that generation.

Take my beloved "Our Young Folks," the magazine of which I have already spoken, and which taught me much more than any of my text-books. Everything in this magazine instilled the individual virtues, and the necessity of character as the chief factor in any man's success—a teaching in which I now believe as sincerely as ever, for all the laws that the wit of man can devise will never make a man a worthy citizen unless he has within himself the right stuff, unless he has self-reliance, energy, courage, the power of insisting on his own rights, and the sympathy that makes him regardful of the rights of others. All this individual morality I was taught by the books I read at home and the books I studied at Harvard.

But there was almost no teaching of the need for collective action, and of the fact that in addition to, not as a substitute for, individual responsibility, there is a collective responsibility. Books such as Herbert Croly's "Promise of American Life" and Walter E. Weyl's "New Democracy" would generally at that time have been treated either as unintelligible or else as pure heresy.

The teaching which I received was genuinely democratic in one way. It was not so democratic in another. I grew into manhood thoroughly imbued with the feeling that a man must be respected for what he made of himself. But I had also, consciously or unconsciously, been taught that socially and industrially pretty much the whole duty of the man lay in thus making the best of himself; that he should be honest in his dealings with others and charitable in the old-fashioned way to the unfortunate; but that it was no part of his business to join with others in trying to make things better for the many by curbing the abnormal and excessive development of individualism in a few.

Sickly Boy, But Loved Heroes of History and Romance.

Now I do not mean that this training was by any means all bad. On the contrary, the insistence upon individual responsibility was, and is, and always will be, a prime necessity. Teaching of the kind I absorbed from both my textbooks and my surroundings is a healthy antiscorbutic to the sentimentality which by complacently excusing the individual for all his shortcomings would finally hopelessly weaken the spring of moral purpose. It also keeps alive that virile vigor for the lack of which in the average individual no possible perfection of law or of community action can ever atone. But such teaching, if not corrected by other teaching, means acquiescence in a riot of lawless business individualism which would be quite as destructive to real civilization as the lawless military individualism of the Dark Ages.

I left college and entered the big world owing more than I can express to the training I had received, especially in my own home; but with much else also to learn if I were to become really fitted to do my part in the work that lay ahead for the generation of Americans to which I belonged.

Looking back, a man really has a more objective feeling about himself as a child than he has about his father or mother. He feels as though that child was not the present him, individually, but an ancestor; just as much an ancestor as either of his parents. The saying that the child is the father to the man may be taken in a sense almost the reverse of that usually given to it.

THE TENNIS CABINET.

The names of those standing behind Mr. Roosevelt are, from left to right: Capt. Archibald Butt, who perished in the Titanic disaster; William Phillips, Assistant Secretary of State; Herbert Knox Smith, Commissioner of Corporations; Beekman Winthrop, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Gifford Pinchot, Chief of the Forestry Service; Lawrence O. Murray, Comptroller; Henry L. Stimson, District Attorney; Herbert Satterlee, Assistant Secretary of the Navy; John J. McIlhenny, Civil Service Commissioner; Judge John C. Rose; Truman H. Newberry, Secretary of the Navy; Mr. George Woodruff, Counsel to the Forestry Service; M. Jusserand, French Ambassador; Mr. C. E. Heffelfinger; George von L. Meyer, Postmaster-General; Francis Leupp, Indian Commissioner; Mr. Justice Moody; James R. Garfield, Secretary of the Interior; Marshal Seth Bullock; Solicitor-General Hoyt; John C. Abernathy; Luther Kelly, Indian Agent; Robert Bacon, Secretary of State; C. P. Neill, Labor Commissioner; William D. Sewall, Collector of Customs; D. J. Keefe, Commissioner of Immigration; John C. O'Laughlin, Assistant Secretary of State; J. B. Reynolds; Dr. H. C. Pritchett; William Loeb Jr., Secretary to the President.

The child is father to the man in the sense that his individuality is separate from the individuality of the grown-up into which he turns. This is perhaps one reason why a man can speak of his childhood and early youth with a sense of detachment.

Having been a sickly boy, with no natural bodily prowess, and having lived much at home, I was at first quite unable to hold my own when thrown into contact with other boys of rougher antecedents. I was nervous and timid. Yet from reading of the people I admired—ranging from the soldiers of Valley Forge and Morgan's riflemen to the heroes of my favorite stories—and from hearing of the feats performed by my Southern forefathers and kinsfolk, and from knowing my father, I felt a great admiration for men who were fearless and who could hold their own in the world, and I had a great desire to be like them.

Thrashed by Other Youths, Resolves to Be Boxer.

Until I was nearly 14 I let this desire take no more definite shape than daydreams. Then an incident happened that did me real good. Having an attack of asthma, I was sent off by myself to Moosehead Lake. On the stage coach ride thither I encountered a couple of other boys who were about my own age, but very much more competent and also much more mischievous.

I have no doubt they were good-hearted boys, but they were boys! They found that I was a foreordained and predestined victim, and industriously proceeded to make life miserable for me. The worst feature was that when I finally tried to fight them I discovered that either one singly could not only handle me with easy contempt, but handle me so as not to hurt me much and yet to prevent my doing any damage whatever in return.

The experience taught me what probably no amount of good advice could have taught me. I made up mind that I must try to learn so that I would not again be put in such a helpless position; and having become quickly and bitterly conscious that I did not have the natural prowess to hold my own, I decided that I would try to supply its place by training.

Accordingly, with my father's hearty approval, I started to learn to box. I was a painfully slow and awkward pupil, and certainly worked two or three years before I made any perceptible improvement whatever. My first boxing master was John Long, an ex-prize fighter. I can see his rooms now, with colored pictures of the fights between Tom Hyer and Yankee Sullivan, and Heenan and Sayers, and other great events in the annals of the squared circle.

On one occasion, to excite interest among his patrons, he held a series of "championship" matches for the different weights, the prizes being, at least in my own class, pewter mugs of a value, I should suppose, approximating 50 cents. Neither he nor I had any idea that I could do anything, but I was entered in the lightweight contest, in which it happened that I was pitted in succession against a couple of reedy striplings who were even worse than I was. Equally to their surprise and to my own, and to John Long's, I won, and the pewter mug became one of my most prized possessions. I kept it, and alluded to it, and I fear bragged about it, for a number of years, and I only wish I knew where it was now. Years later I read an account of a little man who once in a fifth-rate handicap race won a worthless pewter medal and joyed in it ever after. Well, as soon as I read that story I felt that that little man and I were brothers.

Breaks Arm Riding to Hounds on Long Island.

This was, as far as I remember, the only one of my exceedingly rare athletic triumphs which would be worth relating. I did a good deal of boxing and wrestling in Harvard, but never attained to the first rank in either, even at my own weight. Once, in the big contests in the Gym, I got either into the finals or semifinals, I forget which, but aside from this the chief part I played was to act as trial horse for some friend or classmate who did have a chance of distinguishing himself in the championship contests.

I was fond of horseback riding, but I took to it slowly and with difficulty, exactly as with boxing. It was a long time before I became even a respectable rider, and I never got much higher. I mean by this that I never became a first-class man in the hunting field, and never even approached the bronco-busting class in the West. Any man, if he chooses, can gradually school himself to the requisite nerve, and gradually learn the requisite seat and hands that will enable him to do respectably across country, or to perform the average work on a ranch. Of my ranch experiences I shall speak later.

At intervals after leaving college I hunted on Long Island with the Meadowbrook hounds. Almost the only experience I ever had in this connection that was of any interest was on one occasion when I broke my arm. My purse did not permit me to own expensive horses. On this occasion I was riding an animal, a buggy horse originally, which its owner sold because now and then it insisted on thoughtfully lying down when in harness. It never did this under saddle; and when he turned it out to grass it would solemnly hop over the fence and get somewhere where it did not belong. The last trait was what converted it into a hunter. It was a natural jumper, although without any speed.

On the hunt in question I got along very well until the pace winded my ex-buggy horse, and it turned a somersault over a fence. When I got on it after the fall I found I could not use my left arm. I supposed it was merely a strain. The buggy horse was a sedate animal which I rode with a snaffle. So we pounded along at the tail of the hunt, and I did not appreciate that my arm was broken for three or four fences. Then we came to a big drop, and the jar made the bones slip past one another so as to throw the hand out of position. It did not hurt me at all, and as the horse was as easy to sit as a rocking chair, I got in at the death.

Amusing Adventure of the Safety Stirrups.

I think August Belmont was master of the hunt when the above incident occurred. I know he was master on another occasion on which I met with a mild adventure. On one of the hunts when I was out a man was thrown, dragged by one stirrup, and killed. In consequence I bought a pair of safety stirrups, which I used the next time I went out. Within five minutes after the run began I found that the stirrups were so very "safe" that they would not stay in at all. First one went off at one jump, and then the other at another jump—with a fall for me on each occasion. I hated to give up the fun so early, and accordingly finished the run without any stirrups. My horse never went as fast as on that run.

The best man with both pistol and rifle who ever shot there was Stewart Edward White. Among the many other good men was a stanch friend, Baron Speck von Sternberg, afterwards German Ambassador at Washington during my presidency. He was a capital shot, rider and walker, a devoted and most efficient servant of Germany, who had fought with distinction in the Franco-German War when barely more than a boy; he was the hero of the story of "the pig dog" in Archibald Forbes' volume of reminiscences.

Among the other men who shot and rode and walked with me was Cecil Spring-Rice, who has just been appointed British Ambassador to the United States. He was my groomsman, my best man, when I was married—at St. George's, Hanover Square, which made me feel as I were living in one of Thackeray's novels.

I was fond of walking and climbing. As a lad I used to go to the north woods, in Maine, both in fall and winter. There I made life friends of two men, Will Dow and Bill Sewall; I canoed with them, and tramped through the woods with them, visiting the winter logging camps on snowshoes. Afterward they were with me in the West. Will Dow is dead. Bill Sewall was Collector of Customs under me, on the Aroostook border. Except when hunting I never did any mountaineering save for a couple of conventional trips up the Matterhorn and the Jungfrau on one occasion when I was in Switzerland.

Theodore Roosevelt

In the ensuing chapter, which will appear in this magazine next Sunday, Mr. Roosevelt relates the first of his thrilling adventures in pursuit of big game, how he was alone in the wilderness with a drunken guide who threatened his life. He also describes some of his adventures on his recent trip to Africa not previously made known and has something interesting to say about sports in general and those that appeal to him in particular.

Reign of Terror Caused by Revolutionists Armed With Dynamite and Torch, Who Destroy Mails, Burn Residences and Storm Parliament, Setting Example Which May Account for Recent Suffrage Reverses in American States

"THE militancy sanctioned by the Women's Social and Political Union consists in defiance of legal enactments and in attacks on property. The only limit that the union puts to militancy is that human life shall be respected. In what other revolution has that limit been set? In six years of militancy not one life has been lost, unless we count the lives of suffragists themselves."

This, from the first editorial of Miss Christabel Pankhurst in "The Suffragette," was the British suffragettes' bugle call to offensive militancy.

In the seven months that have elapsed since these words appeared attacks upon Cabinet Ministers and destruction of public and private property have brought about what almost amounts to a reign of terror in the British Isles.

"The Suffragette" was founded last October by Mrs. Pankhurst and her daughters, when Mr. and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, unable any longer to approve the offensive tactics of their associates, withdrew their financial support from the Union and took over absolute control of the paper "Votes for Women," thus depriving the "wild women" of an organ. Miss Christabel Pankhurst edits the paper from her hiding place in Paris. "The Suffragette's" circulation averages 30,000 a week.

Simultaneously with the first appearance of "The Suffragette" came the news of Miss Helen Cragg's sentence to nine months' hard labor for having been found at night armed with picklocks, keys and other articles, with alleged intent to break into the house of Lewis Harcourt and set fire to it.

Immediately after this Mrs. Pankhurst made a speech in Albert Hall openly inciting women to law breaking. The grandstand at Epsom racecourse was set fire to immediately after this. Letter boxes were then and have often since been pillaged in the big cities, in most case destructive acids being poured into the pillar boxes through the aperture. In one case the following message was found attached to the letter box: "This is hateful work, but the Government must be made to see that there can be no law or order until women get the vote."

The trouble really began in 1903, when Mrs. Pankhurst founded the Woman's Social and Political Union, a society independent of all class and party distinctions and devoted to the sole purpose of obtaining for women recognition of political rights; but there were no arrests until October, 1905, when Miss Christabel Pankhurst and Annie Kenney, a little factory girl, were apprehended at Free Trade Hall, Manchester, for interrupting Sir Edward Grey in a speech by asking him what the Government intended to do about votes for women.

The following year Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman formed a new administration. His first public speech as Premier was made in Albert Hall, London. Annie Kenney was on hand and with Theresa Billington, an East End worker, spread a great banner from the gallery inscribed: "Votes for Women." They were thrown out of the hall.

The first woman's suffrage demonstration was held in Trafalgar Square in May, 1906. The following month the first act of violence, if it may be so called, was recorded. Theresa Billington went to one of Mr. Asquith's meetings at Northampton and on being ejected from the meeting used a dog whip with considerable effect.

In 1907 sixty-two women and two men were arrested for making a demonstration and procession to the House of Commons. Miss New chained herself to the railing in Downing street along with nurse Olivia Smith. They were arrested.

Then came the great Hyde Park demonstration on June 21, 1908, when 250,000 persons were present. Later in the year an attempt to "rush the House of Commons" led to the arrest of many suffragettes. The famous scene in the ladies' gallery of the House of Commons when Muriel Matters chained herself to the grill which bars women spectators from a view of the House, followed.

At every political meeting of importance throughout the country the suffragettes made demonstrations, sometimes climbing to the roof of the meeting hall and interrupting the speakers, sometimes throwing missiles.

The temper of the public was now aroused. At a great Liberal fete at Canford Hall in Dorsetshire, Annie Kenney and Miss Brackenbury were seized by a crowd of men who hustled the women, tore their garments and threw them out of the park exhausted and breathless. Many similar cases were reported throughout the country.

In September, 1909, reports began to appear in the press that forcible feeding had been resorted to, as the prisoners refused to eat and their jailers would not let them die.

Hitherto, suffragette prisoners had received the ordinary prison fare, either of the first, second or third class. The third-class menu consists of oatmeal porridge, bread, suet pudding, potatoes and water.

First-class prisoners fare a little better than third-class prisoners, and may also have food sent in to them.

A memorial signed by 116 doctors, headed by Sir Victor Horsley, F. R. C. S., Forbes Winslow and Alexander Haigh, M. D., was addressed to Mr. Asquith protesting against artificial feeding. The women told blood curdling stories about the horrors of artificial feeding, but when released few of them seem to have been much the worse for it and recently there has been a strong suspicion that there has been a good deal of shamming by the prisoners and that some of them, while refusing the prison fare, fed on the sly by swallowing tablets of condensed food.

The famous case of vitriol throwing at Bermondsey election occurred about this time. A Mrs. Chapin entered the polling booth with a glass test tube filled with what is supposed to have been vitriol. A Mr. Thorley rushed forward to stop the liquid being thrown into the ballot box and some of the fluid splashed into his eye. Mrs. Chapin was sentenced to three months' imprisonment for interfering with the ballot box and four months for assault upon Mr. Thorley.

But the women, embittered by jail sentences and enforced feeding with stomach pumps, advanced from violence to violence. Their outrages reached a climax in the dynamiting of Lloyd-George's country house, for which act Mrs. Pankhurst publicly took all the blame, or, as she would phrase it, all the glory.

After a turbulent trial, she was sentenced to serve three years in jail for inciting the destruction of property. She acted as her own attorney and delivered an eloquent and spirited defense of militancy. She was vigorously denounced by the trial judge.

On being incarcerated she promptly resorted to the suffragette weapon of defense—the hunger strike, with such success that on the representations of physicians she was paroled after serving only 9 days of her sentence.

Mrs. Pankhurst was released on probation, under the terms of which she must report on frequent intervals to the police. In case she commits any misdeameanor, she is liable to immediate arrest without a warrant and must then serve out her full term of conviction. The intention of the authorities is to allow her to be free only until she regains her strength.

The condition of the suffragette leader was described by her friends as grave. She was removed at once to a sanitarium.

The prison officials did not offer the ordinary prison fare to Mrs. Pankhurst, but placed before her well-cooked meals consisting of roast meats, fowl and vegetables until her strength declined as a result of her hunger strike.

Then an attractive diet of food such as is given to invalids was supplied for her, consisting of boiled chicken, custards, beef tea, jellies and tea and coffee.

Of all these, however, she strenuously refused to partake.

A young woman who threw a stone at the editor of the Evening Standard, an anti-suffrage newspaper, was arrested. She gave her name as Esther Gill and said she was an artist.

The stone missed the editor and smashed a window in the night watchman's box, injuring the watchman. Suffragettes also smashed with hammers two plate-glass windows in the timekeeper's office.

The militant suffragettes started a fresh raid by attacking the fire alarms in London streets. They destroyed three. In each case a card bearing the words "Votes for Women" was attached to the damaged apparatus.

Phyllis Brady and Millicent Dean, two girls who were arrested on April 4 as "suffragette firebrands," were sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment each at the police court. Miss Brady had been on a "hunger strike" since she was arrested and appeared in court in an exhausted condition.

When militant suffragettes attempted to hold an afternoon meeting in Hyde Park, London, on March 16, they were assaulted by a mob of men estimated to number 10,000. Mrs. "General" Flora Drummond essayed to speak, but her voice was drowned by whistles, catcalls and shouts of "incendiary" and "dynamiter." A flying cloud of turf struck her on the mouth.

Her companions were hit with chunks of earth and other missiles, their hats were torn off and their faces were slapped. As a cry to duck the suffragettes in a nearby pond arose, the police came to their rescue and carried them to safety after what was almost a pitched battle with the mob.

On the following Thursday the women took their revenge, by setting fires which did $100,000 damage. The home of Lady Amy White, widow of the hero of Ladysmith, Field Marshal Sir George White, was burned to the ground in London and the golf club at Weston-Super-Mare in Somersetshire was fired.

Placards were found bearing the words: "Stop torturing our comrades in prison!" and "By kind permission of Charles Hobhouse." The Right Hon. Charles Edward Hobhouse, financial secretary to the treasury, had uttered the unlucky taunt:

"Women lack the real revolutionary spirit of men, who burn and sack in support of their cause."

Some weeks previously suffragettes set fire to a large refreshment pavilion in the famous Kew Botanical Gardens in London and the structure burned to the ground. Two young women, who gave their names as Lillian Lenton and Joyce Locke, both 22 years old, were caught while running away from the scene of the fire. Each carried a bag containing a dark lantern, cotton soaked in oil, a hammer and a saw.

Brought into police court, the magistrate refused to admit them to bail, and told them their offense was not political but highly criminal.

Miss Locke promptly hurled a big law book at the judge, which he evaded by hastily ducking his head. She then battled furiously with wardens assigned to put her in a cell. On a previous occasion she pulled off one of her shoes and threw it at a magistrate before whom she was arraigned for carrying explosives into a hall where Lloyd-George was to speak.

The Saunderson Station of the Great Western Railroad, 31 miles from London, was burned to the ground in March. Two placards were found in the vicinity on which were printed the legends: "Burning to Get the Vote," and "Votes for Women."

May Billinghurst, an invalid who can get about only on a tricycle, was recently sentenced to eight months' imprisonment for destroying the mails by the use of acids, glue and phosphorus. Her companion on the raids, Louisa Gay, received a like sentence.

Mrs. Despard, sister of the famous cavalry general, Sir John French, had the option of paying a $10 fine, but refused and was sent to jail for 14 days. She was convicted of resisting arrest when the police dispersed a suffrage meeting in Trafalgar Square. She informed the magistrate that at the first opportunity after her release she would repeat the offense.

On the same day three suffragettes, Mrs. Cousins, Mrs. Hopkins and Mrs. Connery, were sentenced to a month's hard labor each for flinging stones through 15 windows in Dublin Castle, in Dublin, thus showing that militancy had invaded Ireland.

The Government's withdrawal of the equal suffrage bill almost as soon as it was introduced aroused the militants to redoubled fury. A posse of them, headed by "General" Drummond, attempted to force their way into Parliament and to compel the Chancellor of the Exchequer to receive them as a delegation. Mrs. Drummond and 30 of her followers were arrested and sentenced to two weeks in jail. They immediately started a hunger strike.

An actress named "Jackey" Melford armed herself with lead slungshots with which she bombarded shop windows from the top of an omnibus. She was fined $10 or a month's imprisonment. Against her indignant protests, her father paid the fine.

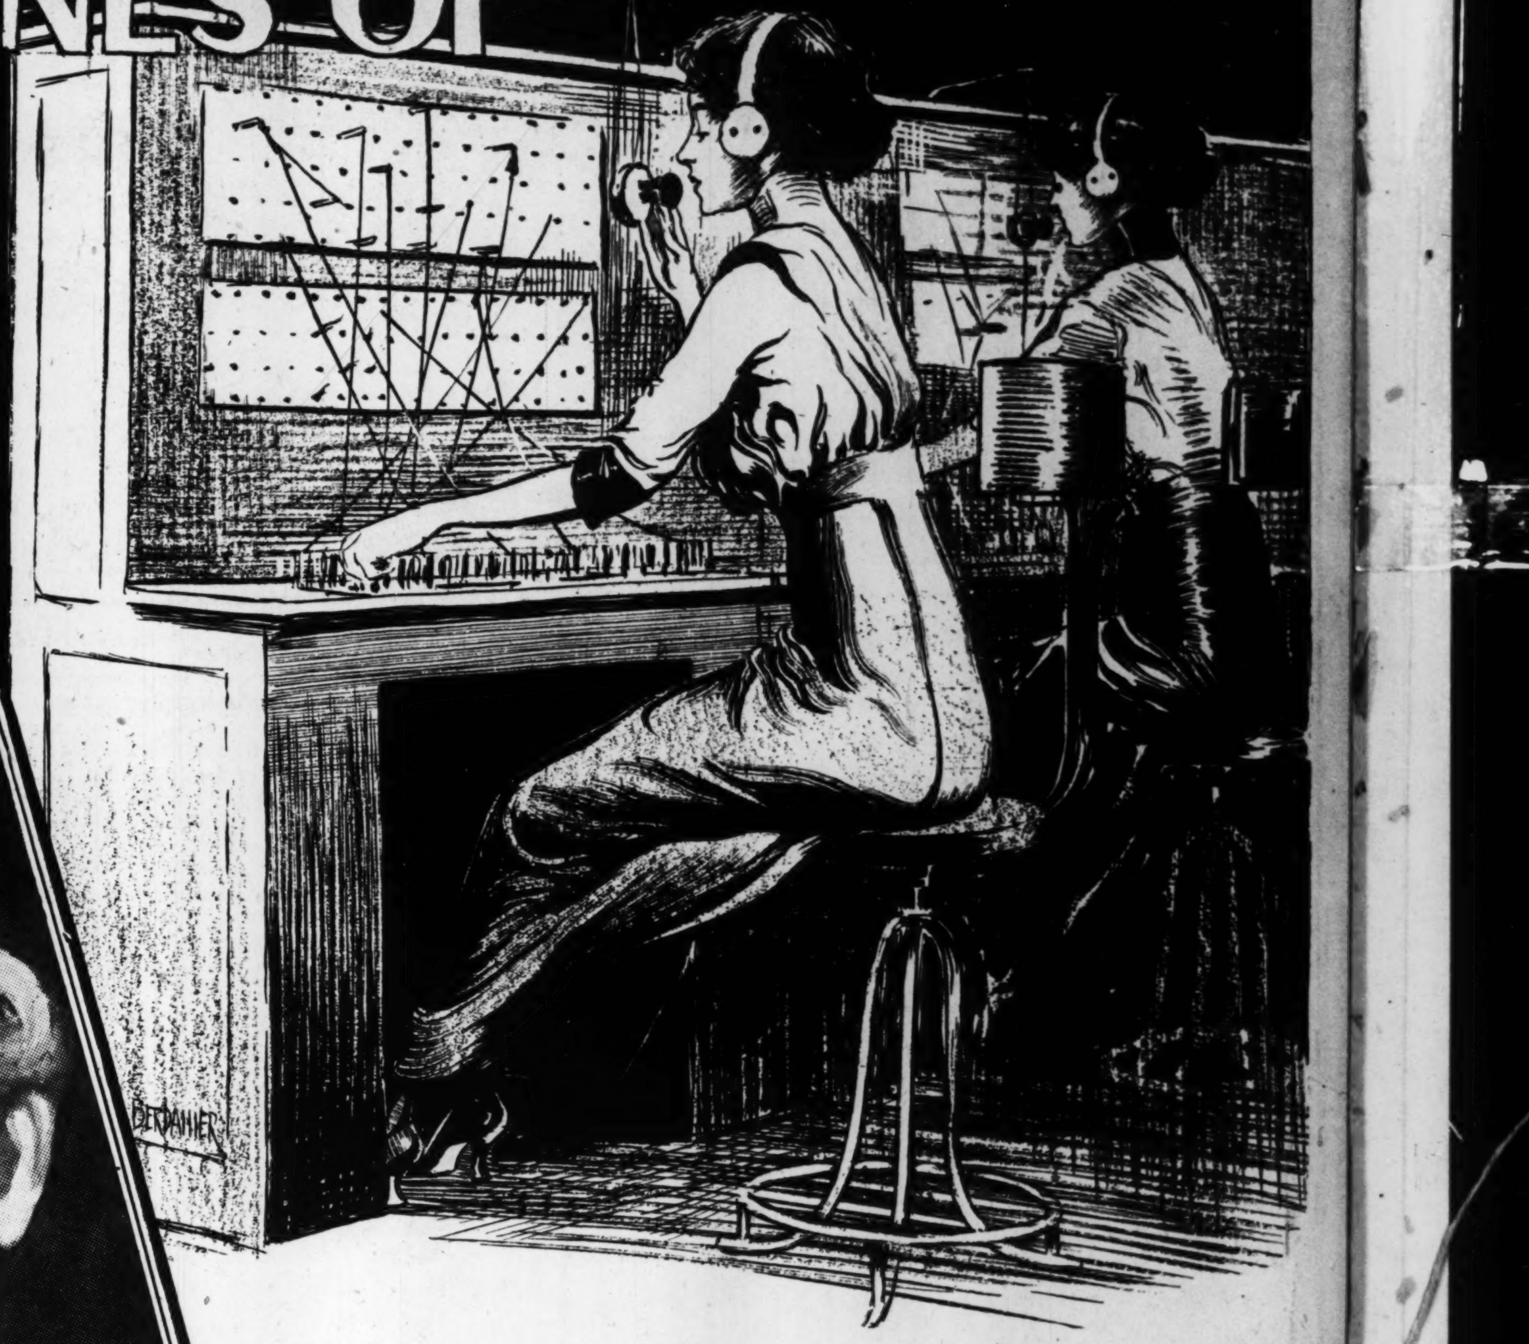
In February a squad of militants smashed with stones the glass cover of one of the cases in the jewel room of the Tower of London, where the crown jewels were kept. They were arrested and sent to Bow street. As a consequence four royal palaces, which had been popular resorts for years, were ordered closed. These included Hampton Court and Holyrood, in Edinburgh, which contain priceless historical treasures.

Suffragettes ruined the golf courses about Birmingham by scoring the greens with deep furrows and spraying the grass with shriveling acids. Thereupon guards were placed about the courses in the vicinity of London. A few days later militants did $5000 damage by destroying flowers and uprooting orchids in the Kew Botanical Gardens. Others threw lead bullets and fireclay balls through the windows of the Carlton, the Reform and other political and society clubs in Pall Mall, besides breaking many windows in the residence of Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, a relative of King George.

When the refreshment hall in Regent's Park was destroyed by fire, the words "Votes for Women" were found scratched in the gravel near by. Baskets smelling of petroleum were discovered in the shrubbery.

Finally suffragettes, after attempting in vain to obtain personal interviews with King George and Queen Mary, discovered the secret telephone number of the palace and having got the King on the wire one of them assailed him with suffrage arguments. A palace scandal ensued, which resulted in the resignation of several ladies-in-waiting.

"HELLO GIRLS" HEROINES OF CYCLONE AND FLOOD



Miss Carrie Y. Hosier, chief operator at Phoneton, O.

Reports Now Made Public by Telephone Companies Relate How Sleepless Operators, in Midst of Terror, Havoc and Death, Stuck to Posts, Though in Many Cases Injured Themselves, and Sent Out Warnings Which Saved Hundreds of Lives

IN the elemental convulsions which produced the Omaha cyclone and the Middle West floods, upheavals so beyond human resistance that even an engineer disciplined to stick to the throttle or a soldier trained to face cannon fire might have flinched, it was the pleasant and courteous young women who softly say, "Number, please?" that stood forth as the dauntless and self-sacrificing heroes of the catastrophes.

The reports of the telephone companies concerning the disasters in Nebraska, Indiana and Ohio are just being made public, and many of the bravest heroines are as yet anonymous. But there occur such simple and thrilling passages of feminine valiancy as caused F. A. Stevenson, general manager of long distance plants of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., to exclaim, upon reading them:

"This makes me proud of being not only a telephone man, but an American."

Courage has often been denied to woman. She has been held to be capable of self-sacrifice only when inebriated, as it were, by love for those dearest to her. She has been declared unable to act from an abstract sense of duty. But such excerpts as the following taken from the reports, show that she can submit herself to personal peril and suffering for so impersonal a thing as the public good, that she can with calmness risk her life for the sake of persons whom she has never seen:

"One girl, blown away from the switchboard and flung against partition, injured her arm so that it was helpless. She crawled back to the switchboard and worked with one hand."

"Elsie Weeseby was on her way to work when the cyclone struck her. She was hurled against a building and severely bruised. She staggered to the exchange and insisted upon going to work."

"Through it all the poor bleeding hands nimbly flew and the question 'Number' rang out clear and distinct. Only when they had to say 'They do not answer,' did their voices falter."

Left Baby to Return to Former Switchboard Place.

"All the old girls came back. One woman resigned nearly three years ago to get married. When the crisis came she left her two-year-old baby in the care of a relative and reported for duty. 'They might need her,' she said."

"There is a telephone girl at St. Mary's, O. The water struck her office while she was at work. It came with a rush until it reached her knees as she sat on her high chair, but she stuck, sending out alarms over every wire remaining, and finally got connection with Fort Wayne. Then she floundered out to safety."

"A girl at Waterford left home hours before the usual time, walked to Cohoes, crossed the river and back again, and then got to work on time. She knew there was going to be trouble."

"Girls who had a day off reported as usual. Operators on vacation came back. One girl's mother came with her, and the old lady could cook. None of the girls left, and they certainly enjoyed that cooking. They did not know whether the building might go out. They were there to send out calls and receive them."

Presbyterian Church at Waterford, next to which Dorothy M. Tiffany worked.

"Gov. Cox, who resides at Columbus, communicated with Dayton at 2 a. m. A telephone girl there told him she was the last person left in the exchange. She said that as she talked the Leonard Building, opposite the City Hall, collapsed before her eyes, dragging down many of the townspeople who had taken refuge on the roof."

"Some one knocked on the office window and yelled: 'The Presbyterian Church is collapsing.' I gave the warning to the other operator, but she did not appear alarmed and went on operating. A minute the doorbell rang and a man shouted: 'For God's sake run for your lives!' We rang North, saying we had to go, blew out the lamp and fled."

How many lives were saved by these acts of devotion may never be known. In the wreck of the elements the telephone exchanges became the information bureaus of their communities. It was from the hello girls that frightened men and women received warnings to escape to higher ground, that the citizens were informed of the breaking of dams and the onrush of waters.

Crawling back to a switchboard with a broken arm, sending messages with water up to the waist, sticking to a switchboard with a building falling next door and a steeple threatening a frame office until men dragged the operators away, taking a switchboard for a 36-hour stretch with 14 feet of water swirling outside, refusing to leave because out on the line were fearful men and women depending on th [illegible] send the news of a crumbling levee or of a sliding river bank—all of these feminine acts of heroism may be found in the sheafs of reports which are filed as a part of the year's records under the headings of flood or cyclone.

The record of that Sunday afternoon cyclone in Omaha is still fresh in the public mind, but it may be vivified by the following report made by C. E. Hall, vice-president of the Nebraska Telephone Co.:

"Webster exchange was in the center of the storm's pathway. At the first shock its windows were blown in and the glass globes from the chandeliers fell on the heads of the operators and crashed on the key shelves. The girls were blown away from the board.

"This was only for a moment, however. They returned at once, some bruised and others bleeding. Thus injured they worked on, all through the trying hours.

"While their locker rooms were filled with the dead and dying, while darkness settled down upon the unlighted town, while through the windows came the cries of the injured and the shriek of a great city in agony, while to the girls came the thought that their own dear ones might be lost, their homes destroyed and themselves facing death, through it all the poor bleeding hands nimbly flew and the question 'Number?' rang out clear and distinct.

"The brave little chief operator and all her girls save four, who are missing, keep watch tonight at Webster, the most fatal spot in the long list of places in the wake of the great tornado."

The chief operator at Phoneton, O., is Miss Carrie Y. Hosier. Phoneton is a passing station for trunk telephone lines, east and west. It is 8 miles from Dayton. Miss Hosier was at work when the flood struck Phoneton and she remained at her post until the deluge abated. Much of the time a torrent 14 feet deep was sweeping over the knoll on which the exchange stood.

She was at her desk morning, noon and night, encouraging the girls in her charge, sending out warnings far and near, dispatching information along such wires as remained, and finally giving the world its first information concerning the cataclysm which had overwhelmed Dayton. There were few comforts, little to eat and little good water to drink at the Phoneton exchange, but she and the girls under her refused to be rescued until all danger had passed. Then one of her first messages to the New York office was:

"'I can't make the girls quit. What shall I do?"

The story might be told of how Martha Falcon at Sharon, Pa., stuck to her switchboard, although it was in the path of a deluge sweeping down from a broken dam, until she sent an alarm through the valley that saved hundreds of persons; of how Arline Barnell of Zanesville, O., remained at her post while the flood whirled by, carrying with it dead bodies and wreckage, and found coolness enough in her perilous situation to telephone to New York one of the graphic stories of the flood; and how Elsie Weeseby of Omaha, after being blown against a building by the cyclone, crawled and staggered to the exchange and went to work.

"Send Us Boats!" Rang Subscribers' Shrieks to 'Central.'

But all these narratives may be epitomized in one story—a vivid first-person account in which Dorothy Tiffany, an operator at Waterford, N. Y., related her experience during the flood. She is not a veteran in the service, which she entered last December. She wrote the narrative in a letter to a friend, who gave it to a telephone official. The letter is now filed in the company's reports.

"At midnight Wednesday," wrote Miss Tiffany, "The people in Waterford began to get frightened at the rising water and call after call came in for information regarding the various dams above them, but we had been informed by the Albany officials that there was absolutely no danger in that capacity, so we reassured them the best we could. All day Thursday the traffic was ceaseless, demanding the absolute attention of two operators for the 156 telephones, and even then the calls were too much for us to handle.

"At noon Watervliet was lost to us. Then we discovered that the circuit to Troy and Albany had gone too, thus shutting off the toll connections, excepting when we could get lines through the office at Cohoes and North, which was rare, because of their own heavy traffic. At this new development the subscribers began to grow more frightened, and the calls for later information concerning the Spier Dam began to come in.

"The streets near the river's edge became flooded and people began moving to their second floors, yet no danger was expected from the water. Near 5 o'clock it was rushing about 5 feet from the toll bridge floor, and boats were hurried to the streets nearest the river.

"As night approached rumors that the Hudson continued to rise steadily began to float about the village, and when the electric and gas lights left it in complete darkness a small panic took place. Many were without lights of any kind, and for a while the telephone office was lighted only by candles.

"Later a lamp was procured, and we settled down to work for the night, knowing that sleep was impossible. The calls continued to come in up to midnight, simply for information as to the river's height; then a call from Fourth street, one block above the site of the office, came in, telling us that they had been obliged to take in four families who had abandoned their homes, and were preparing, themselves, to move to the top floor.

"The watchman at the Cluett-Peabody bleachery on Peeble's Island called us to say that the water had flooded the boilerroom and was still rising. Still we did not think of any real danger. Some time after 1 a subscriber on Third street asked for help because of the overflowing of a creek at the lower end that was pouring into her cellar and threatening the first floor. People began to move their horses to the livery stable, where it was thought that the water could not possibly reach, and the tramping of feet gave evidence that people had taken to the dark streets with only lanterns for light.

"Every half hour we called the bleachery to find out how the water was there, and between 4 and 5 o'clock he said that he was surrounded, with no avenue of escape. By this time people in the village were begging us to send them boats, so we sent the one that had been tied at our door to the streets above. A half hour later the water had risen to our steps, yet we continued to reassure the people that there was no possibility of peril.

"About 4:30 our trunks to Cohoes gave out, leaving us only North and Watervliet. The fright became awful and people were screaming for us to send them boats. The only sound anywhere was the splashing of water as the boats went up and down. Then the first glimpse of dawn came.

"The relief was great—the people began to grow calmer, and one of the operators left the board to look out into the street. I talked with the watchman at the bleachery while she was gone, asking if he needed help, but he didn't seem anxious, although no one was there to help him escape.

"Then some one knocked on the office window and yelled, 'The Presbyterian Church is collapsing!' I gave the warning to the other operator, but she did not appear alarmed, but went on operating. A minute later the doorbell rang and a man screamed, 'For God's sake run for your lives out of the back door!' We rang North, saying we had to go, blew out the lamp and fled.

Men of Emergency Crews Showed Heroism, Too.

"The settling of the big brick church two doors below us was like the quiver of an earthquake. I managed to reach the alley at the back and the other operator was thrown over a fence into the next yard by one of the equipment men before the front and one side crashed in, crushing one side of the house between it and the office, leaving the tower leaning toward the house.

"The alley was full of half clothed, frightened people, one a helpless invalid from the house that was struck. After an hour or two things looked better, so we went back to the office and the other operator tried to handle a few of the many calls that were coming until we were told to leave or be put out, as the house was unsafe, with the tower still slanting toward it. So we collected the records and left, our nerves pretty well shattered by this time from incessant work and fright."

The splendid devotion of such young women, who forgot their own peril in their sense of duty to fellow beings, was founded on a basis of masculine doggedness and courage. After the physical system of the telephone companies were broken down, the girls would have been practically idle had not field armies of men sallied forth into the teeth of tornado and flood, and swimming, wading, fighting for every step, stretching emergency wires on the surface of the raging waters, on rocks, up in trees, on the chimneys of houses, and on the piers of torn-out bridges.

The work of the force at Dayton, under the direction of an emergency man named Faries, was particularly praised by his employers. It was Faries and his men who, after Dayton was cut off from the world, fought their way through the deluge with a strand of wire and established the connection with J. A. Bell, district plant chief, who was cooped up in a building, by which Bell gave daily news of the catastrophe to Gov. Cox.

OTHER YOUNG HEROINES

THE heroism displayed by telephone girls from Nebraska to New York during the recent onset of cyclone and flood exemplified the discipline and the unselfish devotion to duty which young women in this profession have shown in emergencies.

It was the dogged courage of Katherine Lyon and Lena Bineky, who stuck to their posts until they were in danger of losing their lives and telephoned warnings throughout the town which saved hundreds of men and women in the flood horror at Austin, Pa., in October of 1911.

When the Ohio Building burned in Gary, O., Charlotte Chesnes and Harriet Stephens remained at their switchboards in the exchange next door until they collapsed. Gertrude Lent, chief operator at Kellogg, Idaho, was the only woman who remained in the town on the night it was destroyed by fire. With the conflagration all around her, she kept the wires busy with appeals for aid to neighboring towns

Nettie May, operator in the Hotel Euclid, Cleveland, O., stuck to her switchboard when the structure caught fire at night, and by calling up every guest, probably saved scores of lives.

Mae Donnelly, operator in the Wabash Railroad freightyards in Chicago, saved a million dollars' worth of property by staying at her post when fire broke out and notifying the yardmasters to move their freight out of danger. She was dragged from the switchboard just in time to save her from being caught by the flames.

The heroism of these girls was rewarded by their employers with gold medals, promotions and raises of salary.

LOVE'S P.O. in a STONE WALL

MRS. ROLAND FISH.

ROLAND FISH

There the Little Heiress to Granddaddy Jim Daly's Fortune Got Her Letters Until She Was Eighteen and Old Enough to Marry

IF you were heiress to half a million and more do you think you would stay true to a boy sweetheart with all your relatives and guardians pulling you away from him?

Could you stand all coaxing and threats and scolding and promises of trips abroad and all manner of rich toys, such as $10,000 automobiles, and just shake your head and say:

"I want Roland!"

Mary Daly did. And she got Roland. A few days ago, just a month and a day from her eighteenth birthday, she stood beside him and vowed to love, honor and obey.

The wedding took place at the bridegroom's home at Mount Kisco, N. Y. There were not many present. It was a hasty wedding. The bride was given away by her guardian, Judge W. Frank Bailey, and if there was a defiant flicker of her dark lashes in his direction he was probably too exhausted and wearied to notice it.

There had been several other guardians at various times. After you meet Mrs. Fish you understand why there had to be several. She has a sovereign will and the patience of Penelope. Combine these with an appealing face, gray-blue eyes brimful of mischief and brooding plans, a mass of dusky brown hair that won't stay in place, but up-curls and down-curls its own sweet way, and you pity the guardians.

Looking at the bride you cannot blame any guardian for capitulating. She is five feet one and weighs 110 pounds. A winding road leads up the long hill to the house where Roland has taken his bride to live. It is not far from her own home. There is an avenue of splendid old trees between the two.

All Mount Kisco has watched the romance for years and speculated as to the outcome. Roland Fish was the most popular boy in town. His family was old and well known, but little "May" Daly was an heiress.

On one side was Roland with only love to second him. On the other was the Daly fortune. Little "May" was co-heiress to old Jim Daly's estate.

Every one in Westchester County remembers the famous old horseman. He owned one of the finest stock farms in the State. Today his granddaughter owns it, but she has deserted the great old country place for her husband's home. And on her eighteenth birthday she was given $250,000 just to tide her over until she is 21.

They Went Riding Together.

Until the grandfather's death the two were familiar figures throughout the beautiful hill country of Westchester—the rugged old horseman, and little "May" riding beside him on horses that matched her own mettle.

Roland would see them sometimes as he came along the road from the village and she would always turn and wave to him.

"Who is that?" asked her grandfather one day. "Little Rolly Fish, isn't it?"

"Don't you think Roland's nice, grandpa? He's growing up now and he has the bluest eyes you ever saw."

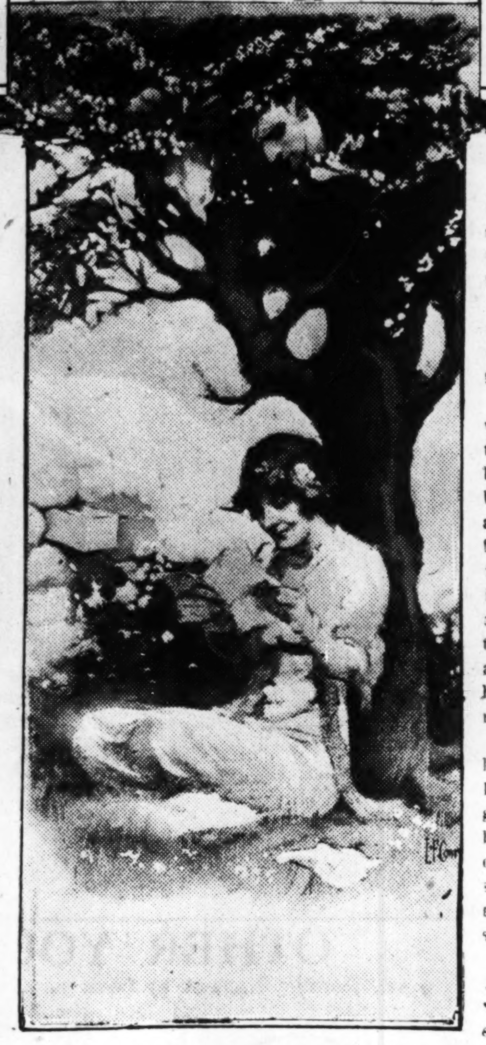
"Stuff and nonsense!" said grandpa gruffly. But after that every day "May" coaxed for Roland to ride with them too.

"I want Roland," she said, and perhaps way p down in her heart she added that some she meant to have Roland, too.

e says they have been engaged for five years way. That would make the little blue-eyed thirteen when she first slipped his ring on hand. Does it seem so impossible and childh after all?

The only difference with Roland is there never was any Billy Smithers. He had it all his own way. When they walked home together didn't he use to lean his head over her and whisper there wasn't any other girl he loved in all the world.

And if she'd just wait a minute when they came to the big black shadow of the maple tree maybe there'd be time to steal a kiss before the wide doors opened to let out a path of light.

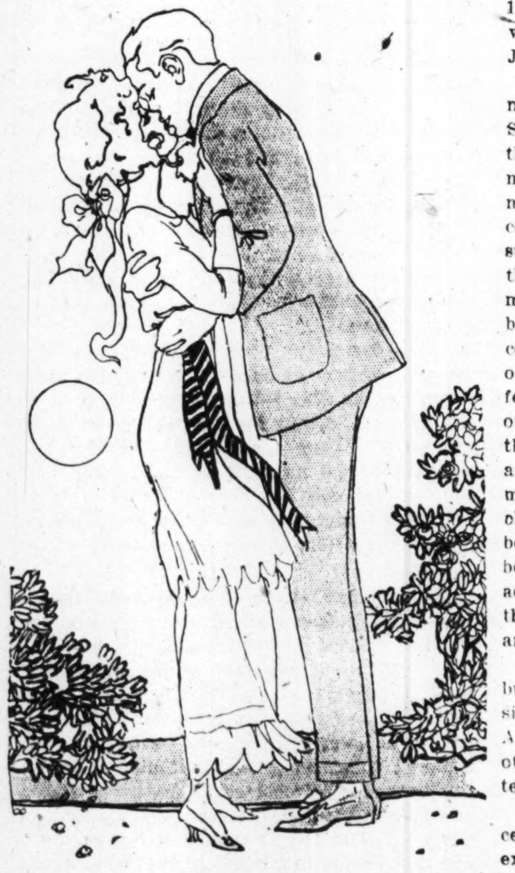


May would read her secret letters on the spot while a victorious boy's face watched her from the branches above.

And when vacation time was over and she had to say goodby, to be whisked away to Brentwood Hall or some other fashionable school, didn't he treasure a little dusky curl of hair, clipped off with his penknife the last night of all? He hid it away in a box with other things, some stolen handkerchiefs, crumpled wisps of lace and linen that held a whiff of fragrance still, a little white glove and some withered flowers, a bow of ribbon from her hair, dropped in the dew-wet grass at their feet the first time he had tried to kiss. She hadn't struggled after that.

She wrote to him regularly, smuggling the letters out of boarding school by girl friends and tender-hearted maids, past all dragons of propriety.

Her sixteenth summer she decided to sound the guardians. Every month a serious meeting would be held to discuss her welfare and needs. Each year May had put in a special request for some new toy. Sometimes it was a new horse to ride, sometimes a new car to drive. Oh, yes, she drove her own car up and down the breakneck hills around Mount Kisco until every dog and chick knew the hum of her motor and took to their heels.



They met frequently along the country roads.

But this year she asked for something entirely novel.

"I want to marry Roland, please."

"Fiddlesticks!" puffed the guardians in concert. It was enough to break one's heart to hear them talk. But, wasn't there a loose rock in the stone wall down at May's home? Many of them, of course, but this particular one was the tenth from the bottom, counting up. It was kind of shiny with mica, too, so you couldn't miss it. And you just slipped it out of place and there was a tin box down in the wall—Cupid's rural free delivery.

How often after dinner—those stately dinners with a guardian on one side and a governess on the other—would she wait for them to grow a bit sleepy, then run down through the flower hedges to the corner under the apple tree. The air was fragrant with the scent of the ripening fruit. The June moon seemed so near you might reach up and dig your finger in its silver. By its radiance she would read the letter over and over, and just as she pressed it to her cheek there would be a rustle in the branches overhead and down would spring a laughing, victorious boy, ready to crush her in his arms just for the magic second before she ran back to the house.

"Well, said Mrs. Fish after her marriage, "the last month has been just awful, but I told them I had waited and waited just as long as I was going to, and what could they do? We both believe very strongly in early marriages. Of course it would be different if we had to consider the financial side. I suppose that stops ever so many from marrying young. Doesn't it seem sad?"

She drew in a deep breath and bit her under lip. And Roland shook his head, too. It was sad, terribly sad. Just to think this glorious spring with all the world hurrying to its Maytime, how many hundreds of April's ladies are breaking their hearts over princely Lords of May and no guardians to bullyrag and torment into giving up a quarter of a million for Cupid to play toss up with? It's awful when you think of it.

STRANGE TRICK OF MEMORY.

AN extraordinary case of alternate personality is now puzzling the physicians of Atlanta. It is that of Mrs. Carrie B. Jordan, who, after 19 years of utter ignorance of herself and her surroundings, suddenly awoke to consciousness and resumed life just where she had left it off nineteen years ago. She recovered her memory in a hospital while convalescing from an abdominal operation.

Mrs. Jordan's first request was that her baby be brought to her. She remembered this as a two-weeks-old infant. The "baby" that was brought to her is now Mrs. Pansy Rowe, aged 19. Everything that had happened in the intervening years was an absolute blank to Mrs. Jordan.

This is a case of amnesia in a form that though not common is well recognized by physicians. Such cases as this are strong corroboration of the theory that mind is more than matter, that mental processes are something more than the mere mechanical or chemical operation of the cells of the brain. Memory has always been a stumbling block in the way of the materialists—those men who deny the existence of an immaterial mind and regard a thought as nothing but a product or a function of matter. For the cells of the brain, like those of all the other organs, are incessantly changing, so that a very few years after an impression has been produced on the mind there is not a single cell of the brain that received it left, all having been swept away and their places taken by new cells. And yet memory of old experiences persists. Often in old age the memory of the events of childhood becomes singularly acute, things being remembered that had not been thought of in many decades, although the brain cells which received the early impressions have been renewed over and over again.

In such a case as Mrs. Jordan's the cells of her brain have been renewed twice, if not three times, since she lost consciousness of her personality. And yet on recovering she remembered the events of nineteen years ago as if they had been of yesterday.

At the same time she forgot absolutely all recent events. For such cases as hers there is no explanation possible on the purely materialistic theory.

SUGAR MADE FROM WOOD.

NOW they're making sugar out of wood. British chemists have found that they can take a ton of sawdust and get a quarter of a ton of sugar out of it.

The process consists of putting the sawdust into a closed retort and subjecting it to digestion with a weak solution of sulphurous acid under a pressure of from 90 to 100 pounds to the square inch. Eighty per cent of the sugar thus obtained is fermentable. The product is called "Sacchulose."

CONFESSIONS

Intimate Secrets of an Active Life Told in Sprightly Fashion by the Noted Actress—She Is Always Making Fun and Here Is Some More of Her Comedy

MARIE DRESSLER.

THEY say that maple syrup is the sweetest thing that comes from Vermont, but that is because people don't know I come from there.

Some people say that I'm an actress. I don't deny it. But I can prove that I am a farmer. I have a five-hundred-acre farm in Vermont near the Connecticut River.

You have to be rich to own a farm these days. The butter I make costs me exactly $8 a pound and I could go to Europe on what it costs to run my garden. The only way I am able to live there is to have all my food supplies sent from New York by parcels telegraph. My farm is so rocky that I am out of sight of land most of the time. That's a way with these Vermont farms.

But I have grand neighbors, literary neighbors, Winston Churchill, the novelist, lives on one side of me—that is, his estate adjoins my farm. Norman Hapgood's estate touches my property on the other side.

But we have better times on my farm than they have on their estates. In fact, it is my aim in life to have the visitors at my farm get into condition to go to Mrs. Harriman's rest cure at Mount Kisco. I have a stable with sleeping rooms especially for Lambs' Club members. The walls are very thick so that the horses and cow's can't hear their stories. I'm very kind to animals.

You see, my farm is on the ideal tour to the White Mountains, so I have lots of visitors. In summer time it is a haven for dissolute actors. I'm very happy there with my husband and chickens and cows. I find I can manage my husband and the cows, but the chickens give me a lot of trouble. Chickens have made a lot of trouble for other people.

I want people to sympathize with me. I'd like to have them sympathize with me to such an extent that they would send me money. In fact, I'm willing to give any one 30 per cent of the money that comes in if they can get the public to sympathize with me.

The public wants a whole lot of things in a minute. That's why they pay real money to see me. I'm willing to be a fool for money. Money counts more than anything else in New York

Am I a suffragette? Emphatically no. But if women don't suffer enough now let them suffer more. Make them stay at home once in a while and look after things.

Where do I get the biggest laughs? In New York. Go out on Fifth avenue any afternoon and look at the parade of fashion. New York women of fashion are the funniest sights in the world. From what they have on no one might suspect that they were advertising new brands of cigarettes. They're much funnier than anything in the country.

Of course the people up in Vermont are not very wide-awake. In fact, at the last election the men in Rochester, Vt., forgot to vote. Then, too, they don't arrest speeders up there.

My husband's name is Dalton. But that don't interest anyone but myself. He's a very nice man but a bad farmer. He named one of our cows Lillian Russell because she has such a sweet breath.

Besides my farm I have a studio apartment at 15 West Sixty-eighth street, New York. No, I never rehearse my dancing there. One has to be careful of the plaster on the ceiling below. I practice singing on my farm. I find calling cows does wonders for the voice. I'm not as old as I feel nor as rich as I look, but I am very happy. If you don't believe it visit me at my farm next summer.

This Language Is Whistling.

THE sixth in size of the Canary Islands—Gomera—possesses what is probably the most curious "language," if language it can be called, in the world. By a graded scale of shrill whistlings the mountaineers of this island are enabled to "converse" over a distance of from four to five miles. The language is based upon a sort of Morse code, with high and low calls, short and long calls, together with certain rising and falling inflections and a curiously articulated utterance, somewhat resembling "triple tonguing" on a cornet. The Gomera whistler places his forefingers together at an angle of 45 degrees, puts them in his mouth and begins to call. The whistles are heard rising and swelling, shriller and shriller, as they proceed far over the deep ravines and up the stony terraces into the heart of the hills.

The first whistler then listens intently in order to locate the sound and determine the locality whence it proceeds. When it ceases he begins to "talk in whistles," using the echoes, with wonderful skill, to catch and toss onward his calls. While the power of the Gomeran whistle is wonderful, the most remarkable feature of it is its intensity, its carrying force.

It is thought that this whistling art originated with the Guanches, the inhabitants of the island at the time the Canaries were conquered by the Spanish in the fifteenth century, and it is thought that from the necessity they found of speaking to one another across the numerous ravines sprung the language.

RUPTURE CURED
by STUART'S PLAPAO-PADS means that you can throw away the painful truss altogether, as the Plapao-Pads are made to cure rupture and not simply to hold it; but being self-adhesive, and when adhering closely to the body slipping is impossible, therefore, they are also an important factor in retaining rupture that cannot be held by a truss. How Mothers May Treat Children's Burns

IN the Children's Hospital, Melbourne, Australia, severe burns are treated in a novel way by Dr. E. T. C. Milligan and his assistants. Moisture is rigidly excluded and alcohol is rubbed in to insure perfect cleanliness. The patient is anesthetized, usually with chloroform, and the burns are washed with sterile gauze wrung out of 70 per cent alcohol. The whole surface is rubbed vigorously till all dead skin and blisters are removed. Then a dressing of gauze soaked in alcohol is applied.

This process is repeated daily. When the dressing is removed it pulls dead tissue with it. Deep burns shrivel up and dry and the dead tissue is cut off with a scalpel. After about eight days—longer in the case of deep burns—the place is covered with boroglyceride gauze or rubber tissue, and it is astonishing with what rapidity it heals.

Patients who have received too great a shock to stand an anesthetic have their burns treated for two or three days with a watery saturated solution of picric acid on lint, which every day is carefully lifted, but not removed, and more of the solution poured on. By the third day, says Dr. Milligan, the patient is either obviously going to die or can stand an anesthetic.

Dr. Milligan has lost only one case in five months of constant use of this treatment, and this case was complicated by internal injuries.

CUBIST AND FUTURIST GOWNS.

CONTEMPORARY art principles have invaded the dressmaking business to an extraordinary degree. It was Mme. Bongard, the Parisian modiste, a sister of M. Poiret, founder of the well-known gown establishment bearing his name, who first discovered the value of modern art notions in making clothes for women.

For several years she has been working on new color and line designs, and now her unique gowns are seen everywhere among fashionable people

Some of her creations are Cubist, though not many; some are Post-Impressionistic, some Futurist and some Orphistic.

She has applied the same principles to hats, suits, overcoats, kimonos, lingerie and furs as to gowns proper.

DIRECTIONS FOR TRANSFERRING PATTERN.

IF you follow the directions carefully, three to five transfers may be made from the pattern on this page to cloth.

The process is simple: Spread your cloth on a smooth, hard surface. Dampen the back of the pattern until you can see the print through the paper. Lay the paper upon the cloth and with the bowl of a spoon press down upon the cloth, being careful to press firmly and not tear the paper. If a dry piece of paper is laid over the dampened paper the danger of tearing is lessened. By this means the pattern will be printed on the cloth.

HOUSEBOATS de luxe, which have abandoned the plebeian name for the patrician one of "cabin cruisers," are the most recent pleasure craft adopted by wealthy St. Louisans for enjoying voyages upon the Mississippi and its tributaries.

Unlike the old ramshackle houseboats, in which nomads of the river floated from one port to another in quest of indolent adventures, the cabin cruisers are fitted with every appliance of luxury and are equipped with motors which enable them to travel against as well as with the current.

The most elaborate of these floating palaces is the "Santa Claus," owned by Russell E. Gardner, and built for him last year. It is 65 feet long, and has a beam of 12 feet and a draught of three feet. It is furnished throughout in mahogany.

The cost of the craft was about $15,000. It has spacious chambers for the owner and his guests, staterooms, bathrooms and a sun parlor, in addition to a pilot's house, the galley and the crew's quarters—for the cabin cruiser, with its engines, requires a pilot more skilled than the old houseboater with his steering oar.

The rooms are furnished with Oriental rugs and easy chairs. The boat is electrically lighted and has a filtering plant. It is a houseboat evolved to the highest degree of luxury and comfort.

Its 100-horsepower engines can drive it downstream at a rate of 20 miles an hour. During the floods along the Mississippi River the elegant pleasure craft was converted into a rescue boat, and did valiant service along the shores of Southern Illinois and Northern Kentucky.

A new way to escape the rigors of a St. Louis winter and to combine the benefits of outdoor life and adventure under balmy southern skies with every comfort of city residence was exemplified last winter by Mr. and Mrs. George Oliver Carpenter of 12 Portland place. They hired a motor houseboat at New Orleans, fitted it luxuriously, and spent several weeks cruising easily among the bayous of the Southern Mississippi.

William S. Thompson of 4695 Lindell boulevard owns a cozy cabin cruiser, on which he and his family frequently make voyages up and down the Mississippi from St. Louis. Like the Carpenters' craft, it is equipped with auxiliary engines.

Miss Katherine Gratz of Kirkwood, daughter of Anderson Gratz, was hostess during the winter of a party of girl friends who voyaged in a power houseboat from St. Louis to New Orleans and back. They were several weeks on the trip. For seven successive summers Mr. and Mrs. George Warren Brown of St. Louis cruised about Lake George on a palatial houseboat.

In his "History of the American People," President Wilson described the Mississippi River as a "sluggish" stream. At some periods, as recent events have proved, this diagnosis of the river is not exactly accurate. But as a normal thing it is authentic. Either for houseboating or the same thing under the more artistocratic name of "cabin cruising," the "sluggish" Mississippi and its even more "indolent" tributaries are ideal for an inland nautical loaf.

While to these St. Louisans cabin cruising is a refinement of luxury, the houseboat is being employed on a more pretentious scale in its ancient role of reducing the high cost of living. Such an experiment, which will probably have imitators in St. Louis, was made during last winter by Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Plumb of New York and their two sons. A prosperous and sturdy family, they enjoyed life at a ridiculously low expense in a roomy and comfortable houseboat moored at the foot of 215th street in the Harlem River. They were just as warm as if they had been in a steam-heated apartment, and there was no janitor to tyrannize over them.

They were within two minutes of the subway station, and it took Mr. Plumb 30 minutes to get downtown to his business at Eighth street and Broadway. Mrs. Plumb found equal facility in reaching the shopping centers, and the boys were only a short distance from a good school. They were at all times comfortable and independent.

During nine months of the year they live on the floating flat, which has seven rooms and bath and is called the Tortoise. The craft cost $4000 to build, and at 5 per cent, that means an interest loss of $200 a year, or $3.44 a week.

That isn't much, to be sure. But during the summer when the Plumbs go on vacations, they rent the Tortoise for three months for $550. That more than makes up for the interest deficit, which certainly is small enough. Then, too, it must be remembered that they are saving the rental of an apartment, which would be about $350 for nine months. Therefore, it is easy to see that soon the Tortoise will itself earn its original cost.

How is that for domestic financiering? The boat is expected to last for 30 years because it was built of selected lumber and the ratio of saving consequently will increase as the years roll on, especially as the cost of repairs is small.

There is a hydrant nearby from which the Plumbs get city water. It's fun for the boys to carry it, because it isn't far. Only $5 a year is paid for the privilege of drawing the water. And a mere $5 a month is paid to the city for permission to anchor at such a convenient point.

Light and heat are gained from oil and an acetylene gas tank. That's all, absolutely all, the overhead charges (as the financiers like to say) that the Plumbs have to figure on. There's no way of living without food, so that isn't counted. The butcher, baker and milkman call every day, and the postman delivers mail at the door.

The Tortoise is roomy, just as roomy as any small family needs. Some of the furniture folds up, and that helps a good deal. The sides are double and even when rain poured or snow piled up, or wind howled (100 miles an hour of it in February) and the thermometer went down to eight degrees above, the houseboaters were as cozy within as they wished to be. The interior is artistic and inviting.

The river yields ice for the refrigerator and wood for the fires. The boys like to gather the wood. From the windows the eye sweeps a broad expanse of river and shore and no noisy or inquisitive neighbors are about to bother.

There are running hot and cold water in three rooms, gas in every room, a range and stationary laundry tubs, bedrooms with real beds, a bathroom larger than in most apartments.

"Everything in life is a compromise," said Mrs. Plumb. "Our houseboat represents a compromise between the humdrum flat occupation ashore and the striving and bustle of cruising. I have tried all sorts.

"In the days gone by I have run wind-jammers into the teeth of the gale and have drifted home or away from home when the wind died down. I owned several motor cruisers and did long distance cruises on inland waters, with the family and guests eating and sleeping on board for weeks at a time.

"I was duly inoculated with the speed boat bug and used six full grown cylinders to thrash up the waters most prodigiously. That slim flier was called the Hare, and so contrariwise my houseboat is called the Tortoise.

"The walls are double and the air space helps to keep out the cold. There isn't a leak anywhere and the craft is very easy to heat.

"Our winter was certainly pleasant and normal. We have owned houses in Flatbush and in the Jersey suburbs; but never again! This is an ideal life.

"I've never been lonely, because I can go to see my friends without trouble if I care to. And we have a dog, Montmorency, who probably couldn't be induced to live in a regular flat.

"My advice to everybody is: Try it."

THE WOMAN

A NOVEL BY Albert Payson Terhune
FOUNDED on the PLAY BY William C. de Mille

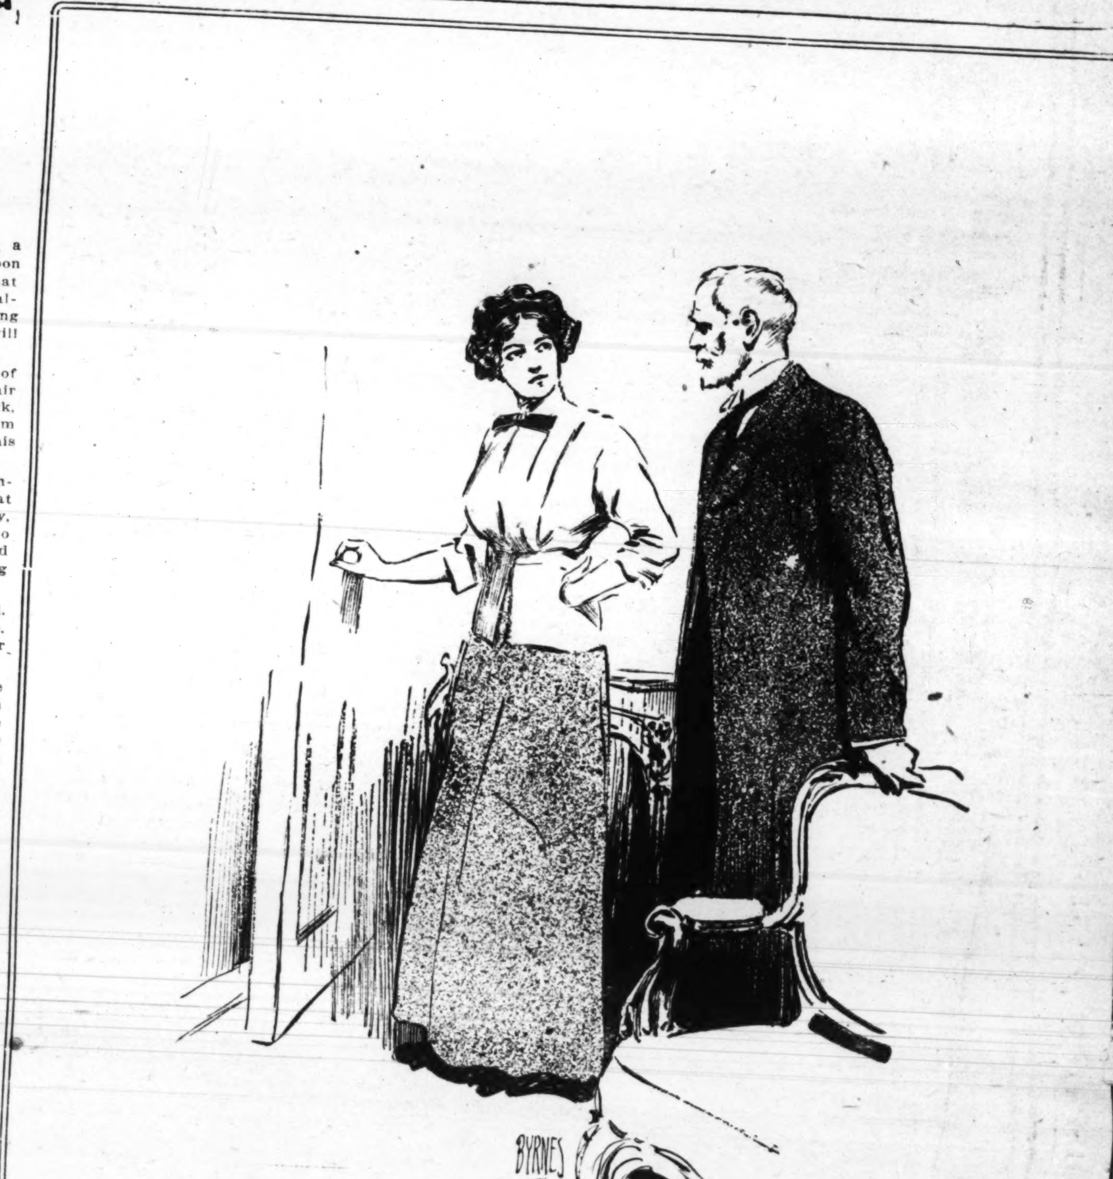
(Copyright, 1912, The Bobbs-Merrill Co.)



"Won't you say we're square?"

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

STANDISH, a young statesman, and The Woman, after a week of folly, in which The Woman and he tread upon convention, are separated by The Woman's decision that she does not love him, and will not marry him, although he loves her and wishes to make amends by marrying her. She is quite sure that the incident of the past week will never trouble her again.

Five years later Tom Blake, son of Jim Blake, master of his party in Congress and chief grafter and leader for unfair big business, asks Wanda Kelly, hello girl at the Hotel Keswick, Washington, D. C., to marry him. She refuses because Jim Blake struck her father a political blow which caused his death, and she plans to be revenged.

Within Wanda's hearing, Jim Blake announces to his son-in-law, Mark Robertson, former Governor of New York, that he has found the one thing needed to kill Standish politically, and stop the leader of the reform forces, the people's idol, who has gained enough votes to defeat a big graft measure backed by Blake for Wall street interests, and who is also opposing Robertson for Speaker of the House.

Blake says it is a scandal, a week's folly at a country hotel. The only thing missing is the name of the woman in the case. Robertson's wife is coming down from New York to visit her husband.

Tom Blake pleads with his father not to expose The Woman. Blake makes a deal—or thinks he does—with Wanda to help him trap Standish. The plan is to make Standish think The Woman is almost in the net, and then he will hustle to the telephone—not daring to wire or write—to tell her to be on her guard, and Wanda then is to give the telephone number to Blake, who can thus trace The Woman, find out her name, expose her and Standish, and defeat the reformer in Congress. There are only a few hours more for the conspirators to work and they are feverish in their efforts to get the woman's name. The trap is sprung. Standish calls a number—it is the number of Robertson's New York home—the same number Robertson himself has just called. For hours in the evening in Congress the conspirators prevent a vote on the Wall street graft bill—holding it off until the woman's name can be obtained.

Grace Robertson arrives from New York and is greeted by her father and her husband. Blake tells her Tom has informed him he wants to marry Wanda. He asks Grace to talk Tom out of it. Wanda calls on Grace and warns her that she is about to be exposed as The Woman whose name is sought by her father and her husband to use against Standish. She refuses to admit to Wanda she knows anything about the matter. Standish calls to see Robertson and meets Grace. She begs him for her sake to refuse to name the woman. Standish tells her that he will unless he is forced to sacrifice her for the people's cause. Grace then calls Wanda and they prepare to fight for Grace's name. Blake and Robertson, with a Wall street lawyer, and others, meet in Robertson's room to get the name of the woman from Standish or force him to withdraw his opposition to their bill. They have only a few minutes more. Blake takes up the telephone to tell a press reporter to send the story out to the country without the woman's name, but Wanda cuts off the connection.

CHAPTER XIX.—PREPARING THE GRILL.

IN the dumb disappointment that fell over the group in Mark Robertson's library, the men's eyes gradually turned as by common consent upon Jim Blake.

"Gentlemen," he drawled at last, "we've got our work cut out for us. We've missed the morning papers. Now, it remains to get our story on the floor of the House tonight. To force adjournment. That will give us time."

"But," objected Van Dyke, pointing to the duplicate telephone list, "we can't get those numbers traced until tomorrow. And we've got to get the name before we dare spread the story in the house. It was different with the newspapers. But"——

"We shall get the Woman's name in the next hour."

"How?"

"Through the only person left who can tell us what the right number is. The phone girl who interfered with our wire just now. Neligan, go down and tell Perry I want to see Miss Kelly up here at once. Bring her up, yourself. Now, then, Mark," as Neligan departed on his errand, "it's up to you. If the House knows we've got the goods on Standish, fully 20 men like Gregg, here, will weaken and vote for us. And then we can jam the bill through. Get this Woman's name. Find the number we want. You've got the reputation of being the best cross-examiner at the New York bar. Show you deserve that reputation. Take this telephone girl and turn her brains inside out. She knows the number that will lead to the Woman. You've got to get it from her. Don't handle her with gloves or be afraid of making her cry. It's life or death for us to know that number."

He moved to his big study chair, at the far end of the table, turned on the drop light above his head and seated himself.

"That's right," approved Blake, noting the magisterial pose and setting. "Boys, let Mark do the talking. He can do it. I've heard him make women witnesses tell their real ages."

There was a knock at the door. Gregg answered it. Neligan entered, all but shoving Wanda Kelly in ahead of him.

"Here she is," he reported.

Leaving her standing there, he turned and ostentatiously closed the door behind him.

The girl looked about at the faces that confronted her on every side. Then she smiled.

Mark Robertson was the first to speak.

"This is Miss Kelly?" he asked.

"Yes, sir," replied the demure Wanda in her most respectful—and unnatural—shop-girl accents.

"Miss Kelly,' resumed Mark, "you are the telephone operator downstairs?"

"Yes, sir."

"You were at the switchboard a few minutes ago?"

"Yes, sir."

"Sit down, my dear girl!" beamed Blake tenderly, as he indicated the chair that had been placed for her. "We would like to ask you a few questions."

"Yes, sir."

Wanda seated herself on the edge of the chair and looked around her with an expression of awed interest that was worse than irritating. The other men had seated themselves: Gregg, Van Dyke and Neligan near Mark; Jim Blake on the far side of the room.

Midway between Blake and Robertson, Wanda sat—waiting. And, on the other side of the closed door leading from the farther recesses of the suite, Grace listened, breathless.

CHAPTER XX.—THE THIRD DEGREE.

"MISS KELLY," began Mark, "you say you were at the switchboard downstairs a few moments ago?"

"Yes, sir."

"While I was talking to the Associated Press office?"

"How can I tell, sir? You know we're not allowed to listen to conversations over the wire."

"But you connected me when I called up 4400 Main just now?"

"Oh, yes, sir."

"H'm! You remember that, do you? Well, that is the number of the Associated Press office. I called up Jennings, the manager. I talked with him a minute. Then he wanted to speak with Mr. Blake."

"Yes, sir," said Wanda.

"Mr. Blake took the telephone instrument from my hands,' pursued Mark, unheeding, "and spoke into it, but when he tried to speak to Jennings he found the connection had suddenly been severed."

"Oh!"

There was a world of sympathetic regret in her exclamation.

"He was told," said Mark slowly, "he was told—by you, Miss Kelly—that the line was out of order."

"Oh, yes!" she cried brightly. "And that must have been why the connection was cut off. What a shame! Just when he wanted to talk, too!"

"Miss Kelly, how long have you been a telephone operator?"

"Nearly five years, sir," simpered Wanda.

"Then," said Mark, "you are enough of an expert to know that the line was not 'out of order,' just now?"

"Wasn't it? It—it wouldn't work."

"It was working," denied Mark. "It was working when the connection was broken. And broken at your desk, Miss Kelly, as your voice showed."

"My voice, sir? Why, I just cut in to find out what the trouble was."

"I see. The line was out of order and you cut in to find out what the trouble was. Very kind. And, of course, you are quite certain the line was out of order?"

"Oh, quite certain, sir."

"I suppose,' said Mark carelessly, "if the line had got out of order, the managers' office would know of it by this time?"

"Oh, yes."

"Very good. I'll call up the manager and ask about it."

"Oh, no! It's—it's probably all right again by now."

"Very likely. Then you don't want me to call up the manager?"

"Don't bother to do that. I—I might possibly have knocked out the plug—by accident."

"And you might possibly have done it on purpose."

"I?" she asked, astounded. "Why should I do such a foolish thing as that?"

"That's what we are going to find out. If it had been an accident, you would have shoved the plug back into

NEXT SUNDAY—"RED EVE"

"your house in New York is charged here with two calls. We thought it was a mistake"——

A wordless gurgle from Jim Blake interrupted him. The telephone was set down by a hand that shook as though with palsy. For a single instant the heavy-lidded eyes were wholly, starkly unveiled in a glare of unbelieving horror. Then they turned stupidly upon Grace who bowed her head in a spasm of hysterical unchecked weeping before the panic query in their gaze.

Wanda Kelly wound her arms tighter about the heaving body. But Grace neither felt the contact nor heard the whisper of eager futile comforting. Blake stared open-mouthed, his face greenish and flabby, the stern jaw loose, the keen eyes bulging. Mark Robertson was still frowning perplexedly at Van Dyke.

"Don't you understand?" pleaded the latter.

"No, I don't," returned Mark. "What have the two phone calls to my home got to do with?"——

"Suppose the second call were not a mistake?"—— hesitated Van Dyke.

Robertson's face went purple. The big veins near his temple swelled grotesquely. He took an involuntary step toward Van Dyke. The latter raised a protesting hand.

"Mark," he said, flinching not at all before the blood-shot fury in the husband's little eyes, "we are here as lawyers, making an investigation. At last we have struck the right trail. I am sorry it leads where it does. I"——

He got no further. At a stride Robertson was beside his wife. Roughly brushing aside Wanda's embracing arms he caught Grace by the shoulder and held her.

"You hear what this man insinuates?" he cried thickly. "I don't ask you to foul your lips by denying it. I'll attend to him later. But give me the right to do that by telling The Woman's name at once."

"Grace!" croaked Blake, his throat sanded with a horror that he would not confess, "don't you hear what they're saying, girl?"

In his harsh eagerness, Mark forcibly lifted his wife's bent head and forced her eyes to meet his.

"What's the matter?" he demanded sharply. "Why don't you speak? Tell Van Dyke he lies. Tell him he lies, I say! Oh!"

His fierce appeal broke off in a cry of pain. He had at last raised her face and had read it. For the briefest moment he stood stupefied, expressionless. Then, cautiously, half-crying, as if expecting a blow, he moved back to Van Dyke.

"Why, Grace!" expostulated Blake, in pitiful bravado. "You're crazy! You don't know what you're implying—what you're letting them think. I won't believe it. Not a word of it. It's a trick to—to"——

She caught his shaking hand and murmured a broken incoherent syllable or two amid the passion of her sobs.

"Almighty!"

Blake's legs gave way and he sprawled inert into a chair, his head on his breast. He had all at once grown old—very, very old. Meantime, Robertson had forced his own dazed brain back into a semblance of its former strong control.

"Van Dyke," he said as calmly as if he were giving a routine order, "you will have every trace of this story destroyed tonight. It must never get beyond this room. I can count on you?"

"Certainly," agreed Van Dyke.

There was no hint in his voice or in his manner that Mark's command entailed the defeat of a bill, the collapse of millions of dollars worth of stocks, a probable panic on Wall street and the money interests' total if temporary loss of power in Congress. For the moment, the great corporation lawyer chanced to be also a man. Something of this Robertson seemed to feel as their hands met in the brief tight clasp of reticent men who dread a show of emotion.

On his way from the room, Van Dyke paused beside Blake's chair.

"Jim," he said hesitatingly, "I'm going over to the Capitol. Shall I tell Mullins to let the bill come to a vote?"

"Yes," answered Blake. "Yes," he said again, and his voice was dead. "Yes—I'm—I'm licked."

"Mark, old man," Van Dyke began. "This is terrible. I"——

"Please go," said Robertson.

As Van Dyke opened the door, Wanda made as though to follow him.

"If you don't need me any further, Mr. Blake," she said gently, "I'll go."

Blake lifted a palsied hand in negation.

"In there," he muttered, pointing toward the door that led to the inner rooms. "I must speak to you—afterward."

When the old man raised his eyes, Mark and Grace alone were left in the room with him. Robertson was standing moveless, unseeing. Grace's sobs broke the tense silence, as she fought weakly for self-control. Blake crossed over to her. She rose at his approach.

"Daughter," said Blake, almost timidly, "they've all gone. None of them will tell. But there's one thing we've got to know. I'm with you, no matter what you've done. But—but—tell me—that—that—this was all over and—and done with—before you married Mark!"

"Father!"

The Woman faced him in dry-eyed horror. Every trace of weeping was seared away by the flame of sudden indignation. And, at the sight, Jim Blake gave a wordless cry and gathered her into his arms as though she were a baby.

"Oh, my little girl!" he choked, "Dad's own, own little girl! We've been tearing your poor heart to pieces and your old father was the bitterest against you. It's all right, I tell you though. It's all right. Dad'll see you through. You shan't be bothered. There, There! Oh, don't cry like that, darling. Don't!"

His voice grew husky. Leaving her abruptly, he crossed to Robertson.

"Mark," he faltered, avoiding his son-in-law's eye, "you promised to protect her. This is the time to do it. It was 'for better, for worse.' If that vow is any good at all, it's as good for 'worse' as for 'better.' Mark—be gentle with her, boy."

Slowly, with bent shoulders and dragging step Blake made his way to the big room's farthest end. There, in the window's embrasure, out of earshot, his back to the others, he halted.

Drawing aside the curtains he glanced out into the night. The gloom of the sleeping city was below and around him. But, in one black mass, tiers upon tiers of garish lights glowed. There, in the Capitol, the Mullins bill was coming to a vote. There, Matthew Standish, freed by a miracle from the toils that craftier men had woven about him, was winning the victory which was to clear for him the pathway to the very summit of political power.

There, too, the cunningly wrought power of Jim Blake was falling to pieces, unhindered—the power that years of toiling, of planning, of waiting, of conscienceless master-strokes had welded so strongly. It was forever disintegrating. And with that power—though only for the moment, since wrong must thrive while earth endures—the mighty and intricate machine was lapsing into its helpless component parts.

Blake realized it all. But just then the knowledge carried no hurt. The spectacle of the downfall was blurred for him by the mist of a Woman's tears. Its crash and the yells of the conquered were less poignant to his ears than was the echo of a Woman's heart-wrecked sobbing.

"I'm licked," he told himself; trying thus to recite his last bitterest lesson.

But the words meant nothing to him. And he tried again to make clear the situation to his own stunned senses.

"It's gone," he forced himself to say, half aloud. "Everything's gone, for me: Washington—the crowd that would have followed me to hell—and that have—all the gaudy careers I mapped out for Mark and Tom. The organization—the dandiest graft that ever came to any man. It's gone. And Jim Blake's a dead one forever and ever. And then some. . . . My own little girl! Dad's own, own little girl!"

CHAPTER XXIV.—THE HOUR OF RECKONING.

MARK ROBERTSON and his wife, left alone, together, faced the situation for which Grace had so long been preparing and for which her frightened years of preparation had proved so useless.

Mark strove for speech. And, in the end, all he could say was: "Why didn't you tell me?"

"Your love meant more to me than truth and honor. I sacrificed them to keep it. I would sacrifice them and everything else to get it back. Is that shameless? Perhaps. The truth usually is. If I had told you, you would never have forgiven me. You know you wouldn't. If I've wronged you"——

"If?" he burst forth, in a gust of wrath.

"Do you lose more than I? Do you lose half as much? It was my happiness I was fighting for. I loved you so, Mark. I think, when a woman's real love begins, her life begins, too. And everything that went before seems a nightmare and unreal. When I found you loved me, I couldn't let you go. Then, the more utterly I loved you, the more I wanted to clear every shadow between us and tell you everything. I couldn't, dear. Even though the longing grew to be torture. By that time it wasn't just a question of my own selfish happiness. It was for your sake—for your happiness—too. You must believe that."

"What good would divorce do?" asked Robertson miserably. "I could leave you, of course. But you'd still be my wife. Always and always. The one woman in the whole wretched world. Divorce? Divorce is for people who never loved. Not for people whose love has died."

"You say I don't know what true love is. I'm afraid I can never learn it from you. So your love has died? Love can't die, any more than God can die. You have never loved me."

"And yet you let me believe it was everything—your whole life—your first love."

"It was. All that was worth the giving. All that had ever been worth the giving. It was my self. Oh, can't you see that a woman's body and heart and soul belong not to her first lover but to her first love? No woman can even guess what love is until she has found it. And I found it only when I knew you. I gave you everything. I—Oh," she broke off, her vehemence changing all at once to utter weariness, "what's the use of trying to explain to you? We're speaking different languages, you and I. You were eager awhile ago to make Wanda Kelly and—that—that man take their medicine, as you called it. Yet they were innocent. Why should I expect you'll deal less brutally with me who is not? In my case you have tenfold more reason to be merciless. For your vanity is hurt. And a hurt to the vanity is always infinitely harder to bear than a blow on the bare heart. That is why husbands and wives can forgive each other every crime except infidelity. They can't pardon a loved one for the mortal insult of preferring anybody else. Go ahead and do whatever you will. I won't make it harder for us by whining for mercy. Jim Blake's daughter ought to take her medicine at least as pluckily as a phone girl."

She held out her hand with a shy wistfulness. He was staring straight into her tortured eyes and did not see the gesture. The hand dropped back limply to her side, and she moved to rejoin Blake.

But at the first step, Mark barred her way.

"Grace," he began, "I've told you my love is dead. And I lied when I said it. I planned to put you out of my life. And, even while I planned, I knew I couldn't do it. It doesn't matter what I want to do or what I ought to do. Out of all this hideous tangle, blazes forth just one thing that I must do, whether I want to or not. I must go on loving you with all my strength and life."

"Mark! Don't! You can't mean"——

"I love you," he went on dully. "I love you. There is nothing but that—anywhere. I love you. And my love is a million times stronger than I am. It doesn't matter what you are or what you have done. I love you. When one looks truth straight in the eyes, it isn't logic or right or wrong or good or bad that counts. It is love. And I love you. Any man would tell me I'm talking like a fool. I should have said so myself an hour ago. But I see now it is the only true wisdom that ever was wrung from my smug, blind, self-satisfied brain."

"Do you mean," she panted wildly, "do you mean that you can—that you will"——

"I mean," he cried, brokenly, his self-control smashing to atoms under the hammer blows of his heart. "I mean there is nothing in all this world for me, dear love, away from you! I love you. And I can't go on without you. You are earth and Heaven and hell to me. I love you. And I have forgotten everything but that. Girl of my heart, will you let me make you forget, too? Oh, I love you! I love you!"

CHAPTER XXV.—THE VICTOR?

"THEY didn't seem exactly to be hankering after my society in there," observed Wanda Kelly, "so I came back."

Jim Blake turned from the window at sound of the telephone girl's purposed raised voice. Just within the threshold from the inner rooms of the suite, Wanda, with elaborate care, was shutting the door behind her.

Blake glanced quickly about the room.

"Yes," said Wanda, answering the question in his look and jerking her pretty head back in the direction of the rooms she had just quitted. "In there. I wouldn't worry if I were you."

Jim Blake took an eager step toward the inner room.

"Just a minute," Wanda halted him. "You asked me to wait. If you don't need me here any longer"——

"Yes," hesitated Blake, trouble fliting across the new light in his eyes. "I wanted to ask you—to—not to let Tom know about this. His sister"——

"I'll never tell him," she promised. "I sent him away so he wouldn't find out."

"You're white, clear through," grudgingly admitted Blake. "Will you do one thing more?"

"What?"

"Bring him back to me."

"If I meet him again," she assented primly, "I'll send"——

"I didn't say 'send,'" corrected Blake, "I said 'bring.'"

"That's different. I"——

"I'm out of politics. My own game has broken me at last. I'm old. I know it now. I never did till tonight. I'm old and I want my children around me."

"I'll tell Tom," she agreed. "I'll tell him. I'm sure he'll come back to you—when he understands. Good night, Mr. Blake."

"There's another thing," he broke in roughly, "a thing that isn't easy to say."

"Then, why say it?"

"Because," he growled, "like all things that aren't easy to say, it's a thing that's got to be said. Miss Kelly, hasn't tonight pretty nearly squared the old debt between you and me? You and yours have suffered a lot at my hands. But, after what's happened here this evening, I guess you'll admit, as far as suffering goes, you havn't got much on me. Havn't I paid? Won't you say we're square?"

"We're—we're square, Mr. Blake."

"And," pursued Blake, "and—Tom?"

"That's different, too.' she faltered. "I"——

The jangle of the telephone interrupted her. Blake, who was beside the desk, picked up the instrument.

"Hello," he called into the transmitter. "Yes—yes—she's here. Who wants her? Oh! Yes, put him on this wire. . . . Someone to speak to you, Miss Kelly."

Mechanically, she took up the receiver, and, by long habit, her voice took its professional drone:

"Hello!" she called.

Then, turning to Blake, in surprise, she cried:

"Why, it's Tom!"

"Yes," drawled Blake. "So I gathered from the name. I'm glad. Glad, clear down to the ground. For both of you. Tell him so, won't you?"

The winter sun was butting its way over the eastern skyline. The dawn was bitter-cold, mercilessly clear.

And into the track of the first glittering rays walked a tired man. A man who that night had won a mighty victory. A victory that foreshadowed the richest gifts his country could bestow. Before him the future stretched bright as that winter's dawn. As dazzlingly brilliant, and as cold and starkly empty.

In Matthew Standish's ears, as he turned toward the loveless abode that he hated to call home, still rang echoes of the pandemonium that had broken loose in the House when the Mullins bill had gone down to defeat. He was the Conquerer. The Man of the Hour. The Champion of the People. The next Speaker—the next President—anything that you may choose.

And he was exhausted, sick to the soul, hopelessly miserable. For years he had worked steadily toward this hour of crass triumph. And now its taste was salt and ashes between his teeth.

He had won—what? He had been strong and had overcome. To what end?

To know that the price of strength is loneliness. To know that corruption can never wholly die. To know that God will let Satan live until the Judgment Day. To lift for a moment his country from the mire in which, within a few years at most, it must again wallow, helpless.

"There is only one lasting victory," he muttered disjointedly to himself, as he moved onward in the dazzling ice-cold track of light. "At the last, it won't be the world's applause that the world's great men will remember. It will be the love smile of a Woman. And—I shall never have known that memory. What is the rest worth?"

ce, immediately, when we told you. Isnt that true?"

"I s'pose so," she admitted sulkily.

"Then, Miss Kelly, we are forced to believe that you deliberately refused to trasmit our message."

"You can believe anything you want to," she returned spitefully. "I don't care what you believe!"

The line of questioning had thrown her off her carefully prepared line of defense.

"Come to the point," urged Mark. "Will you answer my question or will you not?"

"I don't see why I should."

"You will before you're through," dryly promised Blake.

"I'm going," she declared. "I'm not going to stay here to"——

Neligan unobtrusively moved his huge bulk between her and the door, while Blake interposed, without a trace of comand in his voice, but as though stating a simple truth:

"You can't leave this room till you've told us what we want to know. And we won't stand for any more freshness or acting. Go ahead, Mark."

"Is it not true," repeated Robertson, "that you deliberately refused to transmit our message just now?"

"I s'pose so," she vouchsafed. "I butted in. And now I guess I've got to take my medicine."

"And," asked Mark, "do you happen to realize what that medicine it?"

"Oh, I know, all right. I'll lose my job."

"Exactly. And you don't want to lose your job, do you, Miss Kelly?"

"No, I don't. I need the money."

"I see. Miss Kelly, Mr. Blake has offered you a great deal of money for a certain bit of information, hasn't he?"

"Yes. But—Oh, what's the use? You can get me fired. But I guess I can find another job!"

"It may not be necessary," suggested Mark. "Miss Kelly, we don't want to harm your prospects in any way. Mr. Blake has told you how necessary it is for us to gain the information that you alone can give us. He will pay you well. We have asked you to come up here tonight to find out whether you will accept this offer."

"Well," simpered Wanda—I need time, you see. Time to think it over—and—and"——

"Time," returned Mark, "is the one thing we cannot give you."

"You can't?"

"No, we can't," snarled Blake. "And you knew damn well we couldn't when you cut off our wire."

"Well," Wanda inquired, "what is it you want me to tell you?"

"We want you," replied Mark, "to tell us a number called up by Mr. Standish early this evening."

Wanda was unconcerned.

"Miss Kelly," demanded Mark, "will you tell us that number or will you not?"

"Why," answered Wanda, "I really don't think I can remember it."

"I think you can," contradicted Mark. "You knew beforehand, from Mr. Blake, how much depended on it. You surely remember."

"That's so,' acceded Wanda. "I surely must. But, you see, it's against the rules to tell. Oh, gentlemen," she cried longingly, "I'd just love to help you out. Anything I could do. Anything at all. But we're not allowed to give any information like this. Oh, how I wish!"——

"If you were allowed, then," asked Mark, "you'd do it, wouldn't you?"

"That'd be different, of course," she smiled. "But you see how I'm fixed"——

"That's too bad!" mused Mark. "Of course we can't ask you to break the company's rules. But if it were not against rules, you'd do it, wouldn't you?"

"Oh, in a second! I'd be ever so glad; but, you see, orders are orders. And"——

"And," chimed in Mark, "luckily we knew how faithful you are to your employers. And, as we anticipated your objections, we took the trouble to remove all such difficulties from your path. Here," taking a paper from a heap on the table, "is an order from your general manager, authorizing you to give us all the help in your power. Does that remove your scruples?"

For an instant she sat genuinely dumfounded.

"May I see that order, sir?" she asked.

"Certainly," said Mark, handing the paper across to her.

"Yes," she said at last, returning the sheet to the fuming cross-examiner, "it really seems to be all right."

"Now, Miss Kelly," pressed Mark, "are you prepared to take the responsibility of disobeying your manager's commands? Or will you tell us what we ask?"

"But," babbled Wanda, "d'you think it'd be square for me to tell? Ought I to give away a customer's secrets? Now, honest Gov. Robertson, don't you think it'd be kind of mean of me?" Don't you?"

"Hell!" exploded Jim Blake. "The girl's kidding you, Mark!"

"Please!" sternly interposed Mark, raising his hand to silence Blake's impending torrent of abuse.

His father-in-law sank back, muttering. And Robertson, turning back to Wanda, resumed in his most conciliatory manner:

"Come, Miss Kelly! Don't force us to use harsh measures. You help us—and we will help you. And it"——

"Oh, Gov. Robertson," gushed Wanda, "that's ever and ever so kind of you! You don't know how a poor discouraged working girl appreciates such"——

"Miss Kelly!" rapped Mark, "I advise you to be careful! You say your position is of value to you"——

"Of course, sir. But I can't bear to hurt your feelings by refusing anything you gentlemen ask.'

"I asked you a few minutes ago if you were prepared to assume full responsibility for disobeying your manager's order?"

"First," she exclaimed remorsefully, "I want to tell you all how awfully sorry I am that I interfered with your telephone talk awhile ago. I don't know what made me do such an—an—impolite thing. Really, I don't. Sometimes, you know, I act so strange that I'm almost frightened at myself. I wish"——

"We will take that up presently, Miss Kelly. Will you tell us that number?"

"Oh, sir, it doesn't seem quite fair for me to do a thing like that. But, of course, you know more about right and wrong than a poor"——

"Come to the point, please!"

"Oh, then," she broke down weakly, "I s'pose I'd better tell you."

"That's right!" applauded Mark. "You won't be sorry for it."

"But understand one thing," stipulated Wanda with shrill insistence: "I won't take any money for telling you. Not one cent."

"We can arrange that later," broke in Blake.

She looked at him in open-eyed interest.

"Well," asked Mark, "what was the number?"

"The number?" echoed Wanda absently.

Her face grew thoughtful, then puzzled. Then she murmured apologetically, sweeping the circle with an air of plaintive regret:

"Now, that's queer! Would you believe it, I had that number on the very tip of my tongue! Not three minutes ago! All of those questions of yours have driven it clean out of my head. Let me see, now! What was the number?"

"Was it a district number?" queried Mark.

"Oh, yes!" cried Wanda.

"What exchange?"

A further ransacking of the mind.

"Was it Main?"

She shook her head.

"Cleveland?"

"N-no."

"Takoma?"

"Yes! Yes! It's all come back to me now, sir. It was Takoma. That was it. Takoma. 678 Takoma!"

"678 Takoma," repeated Mark, while Van Dyke ran a searching finger down the list he held. "You are quite sure, Miss Kelly, that it was 678 Tacoma?"

"Oh, yes, indeed!"

"It wasn't 876 Tacoma?"

"Oh, no, sir. 678."

Mark glanced at Van Dyke, who shook his head. The cross-examiner's tone grew all at once as cold as death.

"You have been playing with us long enough, Miss Kelly," said he. "I let it go on until I was certain you meant to lead us on a wild-goose chase Now, if you please, we'll get down to business!"

"Why? Wasn't that number the right one, after all?"

"No. And you knew it was not. No such number was called from this hotel."

"Oh! Then you got the duplicate slips from central? Perhaps, if you'd let me look over them, I could"——

"Could send us on the wrong track? I have no doubt you could. No, thank you. You see, we can investigate these numbers without you It's merely a question of investigating each of them and"——

"Then," demanded Wanda, "why did you bother to ask me?"

"To save time."

"Oh! And we've been saving time, have we, sir?"

"No,' he returned with ominous calm, "we haven't. But we've found out exactly where you stand in the matter, Miss Kelly. We"——

"Then," flashed Wanda, "then you know I won't tell. And if I don't, you know you can't find out. You haven't time. You said so yourself. You've only got a few hours at most. And before you can strike another trail The Woman will be on her guard!"

"You state the case very clearly, Miss Kelly," agreed Mark, unruffled. "You have evidently given the matter some thought. By preventing us from using the morning papers, you force us to get our information for the House tonight. What is your motive in all this? Isn't our price high enough?"

"That's not it."

"Do you think, perhaps, that you can go to the Woman and get a bigger price?"

"A swell chance I'd stand! Don't you suppose I knew the minute I leave this room I'll be shadowed?"

Mark glowered at her in silence. Then he picked up the list that Van Dyke had just laid down.

"Many of these numbers," he said, half to himself, "can be eliminated at once. For instance, here's my own call to New York—1001 Plaza"——

"They've charged you for two calls, Mark," commented Van Dyke, glancing at the list over Robertson's shoulder. "See? Plaza 1001—twice. One directly under the other."

"Yes,' said Mark, "they must have repeated it in copying the list. That makes two less for us to look up. We'll trace the number we want, sooner or later. Why won't you be sensible, Miss Kelly, and talk terms?"

"Because I don't like the work. It looks to rank for anyone but a statesman. I'm not to be bought for that kind of"——

"I see," said Mark reflectively. "Now let us get back to the other matter: to your interference with our wire." He hesitated, leaned across to Van Dyke and whispered. Van Dyke nodded, rose and crossed to a case tiered ceiling-high with law books.

"You spoke just now, Miss Kelly," continued Robertson, "of taking your medicine. And I asked you if you knew what sort of medicine it might be."

"Don't rub it in," she snapped. I'm going to lose my job. Let it go at that. A bunch of the nation's representative men have combined, in an all-night session, to throw a telephone operator out of work. And they've succeeded. We'll take that for granted. I'll leave you to do your celebrating of the mighty victory without me. I'm going. I congratulate you all. You've lost the Mullins bill fight. But, instead, you've won in your great fight to make me lose my job. That ought to help some. And it proves that even if you can't lick a man like Standish you're still live wires."

"One moment, Miss Kelly," intervened Mark, opening the calfskin volume Van Dyke had just brought him from the book shelves. "You spoke of losing your job. I'm afraid that isn't all you'll lose."

"No," she agreed, "I'll lose the blood money I could have raked in if I'd sold you the Woman's name."

"And your liberty.'

"My—my—what?"

"Your liberty," Miss Kelly, repeated Mark.

"Say!" she grated. "D'you think I'm going to fall for a bluff like that? I'm not Looloo-From-the-Tall Timber. And I don't screech every time I see a cop. Lose my 'liberty,' hey?"

"Yes, Miss Kelly."

"You mighty finance jugglers live so long on the razor edge of jail," she scoffed, 'that you ought to be experts on the stunts people can be locked up for."

"Miss Kelly,' Robertson said, "as a telephone operator, you must have had your attention called to Section 641 of the Penal Code. Have you not?"

"Yes," she returned defiantly, "I have."

"Then you must realize that by refusing, as an operator, to transmit our message over the telephone, you broke the law."

"But I"——

"You have admited in the presence of witnesses that you interefered in the transmission of our message. You are aware, by the terms of Section 641, you have thus rendered yourself liable to"—— he read from the volume, "a fine of $1000 or one year's imprisonment or both!"

"And your judge," she flared, "your judge will see that I get both."

"It is quite possible."

"And you'll do that to a phone girl, just because she tries to be decent?"

"We don't want to."

CHAPTER XXI.—REPRESENTED BY COUNSEL.

THE outer door opened with Jack-in-the-box suddenness and Tom Blake was in the cleared space where Wanda stood at bay.

"What's the matter?" he demanded. "The clerk just told me they'd sent for you to come up here."

"You're a mind-reader," she sneered. "They've lost the chance to harm one woman. They're taking out the grudge on another.'

"So it was about the number?"

"It was. But it isn't. It's about my going to jail."

"What!"

"For breaking the connection a while ago when they were sending orders over the wire about the Standish story. They've flashed Section 641 on me. Jail or fine. I'm to get both!"

"You'll get neither," roared Tom.

"Oh, Tom," grunted Jim Blake. "Keep out of this."

"I won't."

"Won't, hey?" drawled Blake.

"I'll act as her counsel. She's got a right to legal advice. It's the law."

"Hell's full of law," commented Blake. "What's the law to us?"

"It's this much to you," answered Tom. "If you dare carry out your bullying threats against Miss Kelly, I'll raise a stir in the courts and the papers tha'll put you and the machine out of business."

"Try it, my boy," advised his father. "She's broken the law. The case will be tried before one of my own judges. You know as well as I do what will happen if I'm on one side and this Kelly person is on the other."

"Miss Kelly," formally asked Tom, "may I act as your counsel?"

"You bet you can!"

"Very good," nodded Tom. "Then gentlemen, this investigation will be conducted not only on strictly legal lines, but with due courtesy; or my client will leave."

"Leave?" grinned Blake. "Not yet, she won't."

"We will bring suit, then for illegal"——

"Bring it," retorted Blake, "and see what'll drop on you. I'm Jim Blake. Every cop in Washington salutes as I go by. My auto can sew buttons on the speed ordinances and no one dare kick. Why, I could kill a man in broad daylight; and the Coroner would say 'self-defense.' I wouldn't even come to trial for it. That's my power. And you know it. That's the power you threaten to 'put out of business?' No, no, sonny. What you say sounds fine. But doesn't make sense. This girl's broken the law. And the court undoubtedly will give her whatever term I say. She"——

Blake caught Mark Robertson's eye. And at a signal he read there, the older man brought his jaws together with a click.

'Since you insist on interfering, Tom," said Robertson, "I recognize you as the counsel for Miss Kelly. You are a lawyer and you know we can do what your father said we can. We can legally send Miss Kelly to prison as an operator who has violated the law. Miss Kelly has admitted her guilt in the presence of witnesses"——

"Lord! Why didn't I get here sooner?"

"I have, technically, a perfect case. Now, as her counsel, do you want this matter settled privately, here and now? Or do you prefer a formal charge and a public trial?"

"You can't force the situation like this," cried Tom. "It's conspiracy!"

"Is it?" retorted Mark, cooly. "Very good. Since you choose to take that tone, we will simply call your bluff by arresting her. Neligan, go and get a plain-clothes man. Tell the Captain it's for Jim Blake. Bring the man back with you and have him within call."

"We're kind of up against it, aren't we, Tom?" whispered Wanda.

"They'll do it,' returned Tom.

"That's the worst part of it. I can smash one or two of them, before they lay hands on you, girl. And I shall. You can count on seeing the prettiest bit of rough house ever pulled off in Washington. If you go to jail, some-one's going to the hospital, first. But that won't save you. They've got the law with them. Why won't you tell, Wanda? This Woman's nothing to you. Why not save yourself by telling her number?"

'Because there's nothing to tell. I just won't help them."

"But you're risking your liberty."

"I'm keeping my self-respect."

"Miss Kelly," said Mark, "these heroics are all very fine. But prison is not a pleasant place. And your counsel knows we can put you there."

"Oh, I grant that," retorted Tom. 'You've got everything. The police, the courts, the law—everything. But you haven't got her in prison yet, and you won't until you have a chance, first, to send me there, too, on a charge of assault with intent to kill. If you think that's a bluff, go ahead and call it."

"And," pursued Mark, "when you have served your prison term, Miss Kelly, I warn you that you will find every door to an honest living closed against you."

"She won't need to make a living," vociferated Tom. "If she'll let me, I'm going to"——

"Miss Kelly," said Robertson, "I have conducted many cases, but I confess this puzzles me. There is something in it I cannot understand. We offer you the alternative of prison—Mr. Blake has offered you money. And still you refuse us. You are not the sort of girl to lose so much for an abstract principle. No one but a fool or a heroine would do it. And you're neither. There's some strong personal motive that makes you oppose us. Is?"——

"Oh, I've got motive enough in opposing the machine, if it comes to that!" interrupted Wanda. "In the first place, my father was Frank E. Kelly."

Mark's face stiffened with surprise. Gregg and Van Dyke glanced at each other, half-awed. Jim Blake alone gave no sign of disturbance. Glancing amusedly at Wanda from between his slitted eyes, he drawled:

"'Frank E. Kelly, hey? So you're trying to get back at me, young woman?"

"Put it that way if you like," returned Wanda fiercely. "But there is more than that. I'm against you and all the dirty machine in every way. Why? because I've got the bad luck to be one of the people. To be one of the public that you bleed and guy. I'm a strap-hanger who pays five cents for a seat and doesn't get it. I'm—"

"We are not here to discuss socialism," interposed Mark.

"Socialism!" she mocked. "That's the fancy word for anything that calls graft and rottenness by their right names. The day's passing when you can shut people's mouths by howling socialism at them. I don't know what socialism is—and I don't care. But I do know—"

The telephone jangled into the rush of her talk. Jim Blake picked up the instrument.

"Hello," he inquired, "that you, Burns? Instructions, hey? I gave 'em. Keep Withrow talking till he drops, then get Mullins recognized and let him talk all night if he can; or till I'm ready to break in. Delay—that's the idea. delay! Hold the floor and delay. What? Oh, in a little while, now, I guess. Don't worry.

"Are things getting warm on the bill?" asked Gregg.

"Only so-so. It's all right. Only don't waste any more time, Mark. Hit up the pace. Never mind if the boiler explodes."

"Miss Kelly," said Mark, "you still refuse to answer my questions?"

"I refuse everything," exulted Wanda. "You and the machine are licked to a standstill. And I helped to do it. That's easy worth a good whole year in jail."

"Your motives for working against us?" he insisted. "You say you are doing it on account of your father and because of your political beliefs?"

"Yes."

"There is no more personal motive?"

"What do you mean?"

"I mean, are you shielding anyone?"

"Of course I am. I'm shielding the Woman you're after."

"Do you know who she is?"

"No."

"Gregg," ordered Robertson, turning to the highly-entertained Kansan, "will you go and get Standish? Ask him to come here."

"What in green and yellow Hades do you want Standish for?" snorted Blake.

"And," supplemented Gregg, loath to miss the rest of so diverting a scene of torture, "maybe I couldn't find him. Or, if I could, how do you know he'd come here? We weren't what you'd call real friendly with him when he was here a while back."

"You'll find Hicks downstairs," replied Mark. "He and his men had orders to keep Standish in sight. They'll tell you where he is if he isn't in the house. As for making him come here, tell him he may save this girl from prison. Then if she's in his pay or if she is a friend of the Woman he'll come."

"All right," ruefully assented Gregg.

"And say, Gregg," Blake called after the departing recreation loser, "after you've sent Standish here, go and report to Burns. He may have need for your prairie lungs when Mullins and Winthrop get hoarse."

The gate of a trouble-lover's paradise slamming behind him, the Kansan departed—a slave to machine duty.

"Miss Kelly," Mark had already resumed, "you say you don't know who this Woman is. Yet you admit you are facing prison in order to protect her."

"No," returned Wanda easily, "I told you I'm doing this to get back at you for my father's—"

"A revenge that will cost you your liberty."

"Folks can't get something for nothing—except you grafters."

"Don't try to stick it out, girl," exhorted Blake. "You can't afford to get square with me at this price."

"Can't I? Wait and see."

"Do you know Standish personally?" called Mark.

"No, I don't."

"You want him to win, then, just for political reasons."

"That's it."

"If any other man than Standish were fighting the organization you would act as you are now?"

"Yes."

"And," continued Mark, "if any other woman were in danger you would still oppose us in this way?"

"Yes."

"Then," cried Mark, in quick triumph, "you do know who she is!"

"I—no—I didn't say so!"

"You don't mean to say so, but you admitted it."

"I didn't! I didn't!"

The long strain was telling on her. Her wits, usually so agile, now moved with palpable effort. The quick brain felt like hot lead. She was oppressed by a curious sense of physical nausea. Dimly she began to realize how a victim of the third degree may at last break down through sheer fatigue. Yet she rallied her fagged-out forces, wearily repeating: "'I didn't."

"Don't fence with us. I say you know who the Woman is—this Woman for whom you are so eager to sacrifice yourself. No one suffers as you are suffering merely for political principle. You not only know this Woman but you care enough for her to suffer in her place."

"If I did know, it wouldn't do you any good. If I knew her name you'd never get it out of me. I don't care what you do, I'll never—I—I won't tell! I won't tell! I WON'T TELL!

Her voice, hysterics-torn, rose harsh and shrill as the cry of a peacock.

"Wanda!" soothed Tom. "Don't, dear! Keep cool. It's a vile outrage! Mark, if you—"

"Of course you understand, Miss Kelly," went on Mark, "that the actual name is worth much more to us than the clue the number will give. We will pay you a thousand dollars—"

"No! I tell you I won't! No!"

"We'll throw the limit into the waste basket," drawled Blake "I'll make it ten thousand. Ten thousand dollars, Miss Kelly. I could buy a whole pailful of congressmen for less."

"I won't tell! I—won't—tell!

"Oh, come! Come," coaxed Mark. "There's a price for everything. We understand your feelings of loyalty to this Woman. You don't want to give her away. She's a dear friend of yours who—who made one mistake and then repented. Is that it?"

"Yes! Yes, that's it. She's a good woman now. She's married. Happy, too. You'll make her life a hell just to win your fight. Don't you see I can't do what you want?"

"That's why we're trying to make it easy for you. We don't want to prosecute you—"

"It isn't prosecution!" shouted Tom. "It's persecution! Lord! I've seen forty-two pictures of Judas Iscăriot, and no two of them looked alike. But every one of them looked like you curs!"

"I've never yet seen a picture of the Original Damn Fool," sighed Blake, "but I wish you'd have one taken, Tom."

"Miss Kelly," urged Mark, "your name won't appear in this. No one need know it was you who put us on the track."

"I—won't—tell!"

"Then," Mark exclaimed roughly, "we can do nothing more. Van Dyke, telephone down and see if—Oh, here you are, Neligan! Got that plainclothes man downstairs?"

Neligan nodded. Meanwhile Tom was whispering frenziedly to Wanda.

"Tell me the name, dear. I won't tell the others. But it may show me a way to help you out. And we're in a horrible fix."

"I know that—But—I won't tell!"

"But if you won't even tell me why you refuse—"

"If I told you, you couldn't help. You'd agree I'm doing right."

Tom whirled about on the others.

"Dad! Mark!" he said. "Before you go any further I want you to know I've asked Miss Kelly to be my wife."

"No, no!" cried Wanda, trying to throw her open hand across his mouth. "Don't—"

"If she consents," rushed on Tom, "I'll marry her at once; whether in prison or out, I love her. For my sake won't you—?"

"I'm very sorry, Tom," replied Mark, "but she's not your wife, yet. And she has her release in her own hands. She has only to speak—"

"Dad!" appealed the boy.

"Not on your worthless life," growled Blake.

"If you've any influence with her, Tom," remarked his brother-in-law, "you'll use it to make her tell."

"He hasn't any influence," retorted Wanda, before Tom could speak. "Except that his standing by me proves to me I'm doing right. And—do you think, Jim Blake, that I'd marry a son of yours? Not if he was John D. Rockefeller and E. H. Sothern rolled into one. Not till I've squared my account with you."

"You won't marry a son of Jim Blake's?" echoed Tom. "Well, after tonight I'm not Jim Blake's son. Here's where I cut loose and—"

"Go as far as you like," vouchsafed his father, outwardly unmoved. "But the girl tells us or else she goes to jail."

"I—won't—tell!"

"Mark, ring for the officer"——

"There he is at the door," answered Robertson as the buzzer sounded. "Let him in, Neligan."

"I—won't—tell!"

Neligan opened the door. Standish stood on the threshold. Tom, who had leaned forward pugnaciously, drew back.

"Come in, Mr. Standish," said Mark. "I suppose Gregg explained the situation to you."

"That is why I am here," curtly answered Standish; his somber eyes traveling slowly about the room and resting at last on Wanda's tense, haggard little face.

"You know, then," went on Mark, "that she is ready to face imprisonment to shield you?"

"That is what Mr. Gregg told me. I don't understand"——

"Neither do we. But we thought you might feel like saving her from punishment."

"How?"

"By voting with us on the Mullins bill."

"No."

"You will accept her sacrifice, then?"

"I—I have no alternative."

"I'm sorry," said Mark with a shrug of his wide shoulders, "but that seems to settle it, all around. Neligan, tell them to send the plain-clothes man here. We may as well wind this up at once."

"Wait, please," interposed Standish.

He crossed to where Wanda stood.

"Miss Kelly,' he said gently, "why are you doing this?"

"I promised her," said the girl.

"I don't see why you should have promised"——

"No," replied Wanda, with a slight curl of her lip. "You wouldn't see."

"Standish," observed Mark, "you speak as if you were willing we should know the Woman's name."

"Not at all. I'm only sorry the machine has closed its teeth on that poor little girl."

"Thanks!" jeered Wanda. "Now, then Mr. Blake, call your cop. I'm ready."

Blake nodded to Mark, who picked up the telephone instrument.

Then, before any of them knew of her presence, Grace was in the room and had caught her husband's arm as he lifted the receiver from the hook.

"You shan't do it!" she was crying. "You shall not!"

CHAPTER XXII.—THE LAST CARD.

WANDA was the first to see her.

"Mrs. Robertson!" cried the telephone girl.

"Grace!" called Tom joyously. "Help us! You'll make everything right. You always do."

"Father," said Grace in eager appeal, "you won't go on with this? It is abominable!"

"I'm sorry, daughter; but we've got to. I wish you'd clear out. It's no place"——

"But, father, can't you see? Miss Kelly is protecting some poor woman who has done wrong and who has repented. Must she be punished so? Must the Woman's years of repentance all count for nothing?"

"That's no concern of ours," said Mark. "The Woman's possible repentance is between her and her God. We"——

"Then leave her punishment to God. It is not for you to say how she shall suffer. How can a mortal like yourself tell where her punishment lies? You are striking with the blindness of a man; without dreaming where the blow will fall."

"It will fall where it is deserved. I'm enough of a believer in divine justice to know that."

"It will fall on her husband more heavily than on her."

"It will do him no harm to know the type of woman he's married. If she was worth saving she told him everything before she became his wife. If she didn't, she doesn't merit anyone's pity."

"It isn't fair! It isn't fair! Mark, your injustice to this girl here is a thousandfold worse than your cruelty to the Woman. It is wicked to punish Wanda Kelly for her loyalty in trying to save a friend from disgrace. It's cowardly—unbelievable!"

"Steady, daughter!" admonished Blake. "You're all worked up over this. It isn't like you to"——

"No," agreed Mark, "it isn't."

He was eyeing Grace strangely.

"Grace," he went on, "you've never before interfered with our affairs. You have heard of just as unfortunate cases as this; and yet you always seemed to take it for granted we were doing right. Have you any personal reason for defending this Woman against your own husband and your father? Do you know who she is?"

"That's absurd!" denied Grace. "How could I possibly?"——

"This Kelly girl knows," insisted Mark. "And she has told you. She has enlisted your aid. Isn't that so?"

"Nonsense! Would Miss Kelly be likely to come to me—a stranger—and?"——

"Grace, when I came back from the Capitol awhile ago that door was locked. And I heard a woman's voice. I thought then it was from the next suite. But now I know better. This girl here was with you, then; appealing to you, winning your sympathy for her friend. That's why you were all unstrung and nervous when I came in. That's why you talked to me so wildly about mercy and the power of a woman to live down her past. You've known all along. You saw the straits we were laboring in. At a word you could have put victory into our hands."

"I—no—I"——

"Grace," he commanded, "look at me!"

Slowly, as by hard physical effort, she raised her panic-widened eyes to met his gaze.

"You know this Woman's name," he declared.

"Yes."

"You know the name," pursued Mark. "We still have time to use it. Tell it to me."

"No—no! I—I can't. I won't. I"——

"Grace! do you mean to say you are going to let us face ruin when one word from you would"——

"I tell you, I can't—I can't!"

"Mr. Standish is willing," said he, "to see this girl here terribly punished for protecting the guilty Woman. Are you?"

"No, no! But"——

"Mrs. Robertson!" broke in Wanda. "Don't tell! Don't tell! Keep your nerve. It's all right. Never you mind what they threaten to do to me Don't give her away!"

"Shut up!" roared Neligan.

Grace had already turned to the girl.

"I can't let you pay such a price as that, Miss Kelly," she expostulated. "I can't! I can't do that!"

"Why not," stoutly demanded Wanda, "if I am willing?"

"Oh—what can I do?"

"You can do your duty to your husband and father," suggested Robertson. "Well," he added coldly, as his wife looked at him in dull despair, "I'm waiting for your answer."

"She'll keep her word to me!" cried Wanda. "She promised me not to tell. And she won't. Come on, you cheap blackmailers and take me to jail if you're going to. I'm"——

Mark's eyes had never for an instant left his wife's face.

"Neligan," he ordered, "take this phone girl downstairs and turn her over to the officer who is waiting. Van Dyke will be around at the station house in a few minutes to make out the charge. And he'll see that she is held in bail too heavy for her friends to pay."

"Neligan!" yelled Tom. "If you put a finger on her I'll"——

"No!" wailed Grace. "You shan't arrest her, Mark. I can't bear it! I"—— "You'll tell? asked Mark.

"I—yes!"

"No!" contradicted Wanda.

But this time Grace did not respond to the eager appeal. And Mark knew that he had won.

"Mrs. Robertson!" implored Wanda. "Remember what you promised me! Don't lose your nerve, I tell you. Come on, Mr. Hired Man and turn me over to the police. Tom, stand out of his way. It's all right."

"Stop!" broke in Grace. "I must tell. I must!"

"Pardon me, Robertson," intervened Standish, as he saw Grace's last barrier break down; "but I advise you to clear the room before you let her speak. Three people here already know the name. I advise you to keep the number as small as possible."

"That is our affair, not yours," retorted Mark. "She shall tell us all. Inside of a few hours the whole country is going to know that name."

"Mark," begged Grace, "let me tell it to you alone!"

"No," refused the husband. "It's too late now to spare anyone's feelings. And witnesses are necessary in an affair like this. It concerns us all. And we must move quickly."

"Mrs. Robertson!" reiterated Wanda, "you promised"——

"Grace," interrupted Mark, "you had no right to give a promise that put you against me and against your father. It is far worse to keep such a promise than to break it. What it the name?"

"Grace," pleaded Blake, as she still fought vainly for words, "you've got the whole party in your hands tonight; Mark's future, my own power"——

"Grace," ordered Mark; "tell us! Every minute is precious now."

"You've got to tell us," added Blake. "What are you afraid of, girl? I'm behind you. Neligan," as she still hesitated and glanced hopelessly at Wanda, "take this phone girl away."

"No!" cried Grace, finding her tongue at last. "I'll tell. I promise. I'll tell! Don't touch her."

"Good!" ejaculated Mark.

"Mr. Standish," he went on with a savage joy that rent away the last remnant of the velvet from the iron beneath. "It's been a long fight. But you couldn't beat the organization. And I told you you couldn't. I warned you not to meddle with our affairs. You have worried us at every turn. Now you'll pay for it. And you'll get the same mercy you offered us. Even if you offer to resign we won't give you that alternative. You've been howling for a fight to a finish. This is the finish."

"It is the finish," agreed Standish, his deep voice infinitely sad. "And I am sorry for it. I don't think you need me here any longer, gentlemen. And I will barely have time to reach the Capitol before the bill comes to a vote. Good night."

He looked furtively at Grace. But she was staring blankly ahead of her with eyes that saw nothing.

"Good night," he repeated. "I would have spared you, Robertson. But you would have it."

And he was gone. His words had fallen on deaf ears. The men were leaning forward eagerly to catch Grace's first syllable.

"And now," Mark demanded, as his wife still hesitated, "who is she, Grace?"

Blake had forestalled her answer. He crossed the room to the telephone.

"We win!" he was chuckling. "It's a way we've got. Hell's full of losers. And I'm loss-proof."

"What are you going to do?" still queried Van Dyke, who had dropped back in his chair a few moments earlier, taking no longer even a passive part in the scene.

"I'm going to phone Gregg to let the House know the whole story; names, dates and all. By the time I get him on the wire Grace will have told."

"Hold on, Jim," objected Van Dyke. "Not yet."

"Not yet? What d'ye mean? Why not? We're almost against the ropes over there at the Capitol. This is our last punch and it's going to be a knockout."

"Wait, Jim!" begged Van Dyke. "Wait till you hear the name."

"We've got the name Grace is going to tell us."

"You've got it, yes. But you can't use it, Jim."

Blake, telephone instrument in hand, paused to glare down in angry amazement at the saturine lawyer who so calmly opposed him in the hour of victory.

"Why in blazes can't we use it? Are you weakening?"

He took the receiver from the hook. But Van Dyke, with a peremtory gesture, halted him.

"Wait, I say!" ordered the lawyer. "Neligan, go downstairs and get rid of that officer. And, don't come back."

Blake and Robertson blinked in wonder at the man who had so suddenly and explicitably assumed mastership of the situation. Neligan, doubtfully, yet obeying the note of imperative command in Van Dyke's voice, moved toward the door.

"Go with him, Tom," whispered Wanda. "For my sake. You don't want to hear the name."

"You're right," assented Tom, following in Neligan's wake. "It's none of my business. Now that you are safe"——

The door closed behind the two departing men.

"Come, Grace," prompted Mark. "Who is she?"

Grace's lips parted. But they were dry and cracked. Her tongue would not stir.

CHAPTER XXIII.—JIM BLAKE, LOSER.

AND so for an instant they stood. It was an odd tableaux: Grace, helpless, shaking, dumb; Wanda her arms clasped protectingly about the unheeding Woman, who did not so much as realize their presence nor feel the warm sympathy of their embrace; Mark, his triumph tinged with impatience at his wife's hesitation; Blake, still gripping the telephone and glowering in angry surprise at the lawyer; Van Dyke grim, alert, master of the moment, his lean face set in lines of unwonted sadness.

"Mark," Van Dyke said, "Miss Kelly has told us that she promised the—The Woman not to tell. When did she make that promise?"

"What does it matter now?" snapped Mark. "We"——

"She never heard of the affair until early this evening. So it must be since then that she talked with The Woman about it. Miss Kelly has been on duty downstairs ever since 6 o'clock. She has not left this hotel. How can she have communicated with the Woman?"

"By telephone. If"——

"I think not," denied Van Dyke, the cold sorrow in his voice now apparent to everyone. "The Woman is here in this house."

"So much the better!" declared Blake.

Van Dyke in gloomy wonder, turned on his chief.

"You have often boasted, Jim," said he, "that you owe your success to the fact you see things just a second sooner than other people. Don't you understand—even yet?"

"No," growled Blake, "I don't. Out with it, man! What are you trying to get at? Don't beat about the bush. You're wasting time that we haven't got."

"Mark," he said, tapping the duplicate telephone list,
